This One's For You!

This is the moment you've all been waiting for! This inaugural issue of Digital Curves marks a new age in the continuation of an exciting tradition: a magazine dedicated completely to the appreciation of the world's hottest women. We've brought on the best photographers in the business to capture the hottest shots of the sexiest women on the planet.

For many years, we worked our butts off to make American Curves magazine the clear leader in the category of men's magazines and glamour and bikini photography. In the heyday of print mags and newsstand sales, it was the top-selling men's publication at 7-Eleven stores across the U.S., and second-only overall to People magazine.

When the brand ceased publication a few years ago, we knew something had to be done to bring back the spirit of that magazine but with a vision of our own. We knew there was a need that had to be satisfied, an itch that needed to be scratched. The fans cried out for more, and we are now thrilled to offer you the all-new Digital Curves. It brings you the most stunning photography and videos of loads and loads of beautiful women in all of their glory. We've produced Digital Curves in the online format so you can access it anywhere and never have to worry about losing an issue.

The magazine is starting out as a bimonthly, and we plan to roll out to monthly after a year. We know that there's an insatiable demand for more hot pictorials, and we aim to please. You can also look out for more digital content in the near future, with interactive videos and more on our website, digitalcurvesmag.com. We've already started to edit these vids and we can assure you they will blow your mind!

This is for you, the fans, and for the models, who haven't had a proper venue to showcase their talents in a quite a while. Digital Curves gives the models their due to show the world what they've got. We know a lot of women will enjoy the magazine as well.

So check out the spectacular spreads in this first issue, and then spread the word that Digital Curves is here. This is for you. You deserve it. Now go enjoy it! WE ARE BACK!!

FIRST LOOK

Too Much Is Never Enough

It's a beautiful thing, this magazine. Literally. I mean, let's just take a moment to appreciate just how many pages of incredibly hot women adorn the pages in this premiere issue of Digital Curves. It really is something to behold. In an age where you can find just about anything on the internet, there is also a seemingly endless stream of crappy, over-Photoshopped pics out there that don't do justice to any of the models.

Here, you'll find all of the best models, captured to perfection under the keen eye of the famed glamor photography duo, Gregory James and his wife Jessica. They've worked their butts off to assemble these incredible photo-sets of pure excitement. It's all here in one place for your unlimited enjoyment. And it's glorious.

The team behind Digital Curves is the same one that brought the world the top-selling American Curves magazine. Now, we're back for more – a whole lot more! Director James Cameron once said, "Some people say less is more. No, more is more, and too much is never enough!" That's certainly the case with our first issue here. We've got a good thing going, so we figured we should keep it coming. This issue is jammed with loads of stunning pics from the world's sexiest, curviest, most irresistible women.

As print publications struggle to survive or have already disappeared, at Digital Curves we know that, whatever the medium, beautiful women are in high demand. We're pumped to be able to fill that demand to the brim and fulfill your desires.

Of course life isn't only about fantasies and hot models (although it probably does account for about 90 percent of it), so we also have some awesome features on cool new gear, cars, sports, and pop culture. You need to give your eyes a bit of a rest from the blinding allure of the steamy photosets. But we try to keep these articles to a minimum. Our goal is to keep the focus where it belongs – on the hottest women on the planet.

Enjoy the first issue. There will be more.
A lot more.

No, Johnny, no!

Johnny Manziel's fall from grace has been one of epic proportions. He went from a Heisman Trophy-winning first-round draft pick and savior of the moribund Cleveland Browns to becoming a self-destructive, unemployed, violent party animal who can't stay out of trouble.

The nimble quarterback has already been indicted for a domestic violence incident involving his ex-girlfriend and a stint in rehab that was obviously merely for show. Being fired by two agents in a three-month period is a clear indication that Johnny Football needs a new nickname.

Last but not least

Welcome to the party, pal! New York became the last state in the union to legalize and regulate the sport of mixed martial arts and a UFC card is already planned for Madison Square Garden. "The World's Most Famous Arena" has held so many legendary boxing matches and now will finally have the opportunity host MMA bouts starting on November 12.

"It's going to be a historic, monumental moment for this sport and our passionate fans when the octagon finally arrives in New York," UFC Chairman and CEO Lorenzo Fertitta said at a press conference.

Considering that UFC 1 took place exactly 23 years ago to the day in Denver, Colorado, the Big Apple has a lot of making up to do.

Baseball bozos

It's one thing if an athlete using performance-enhancing drugs enjoys the benefits of them and ultimately gets caught. He rolled the dice and got away with it for a while before losing. But when a guy uses PEDs without knowing what the hell he is doing, the risk outweighs the reward big time. Such was the case with Marlon Byrd, the 38-year-old Cleveland Indians outfielder who was suspended for 162 games in June.

The veteran got nailed on a positive drug test for Ipamorelin, which is a peptide that people use in place of human growth hormone. This substance is an HGH-releasing agent and signals your pituitary gland to release more natural HGH. The thing is, growth on its own – and especially the minor-league peptide version – is really more for anti-aging than anything that can be used as an advantage on the baseball diamond.

Perhaps getting a better night's sleep, dropping a little bit of body fat and younger looking skin may be helpful at the singles bar, but HGH needs to be stacked with testosterone for it to make a difference for a professional athlete looking for an edge.

The real striker

You're a professional sports star enjoying some time back home during the offseason and attending a party with your girlfriend. The last thing you'd expect is to be kidnapped and held for ransom in a plot conjured up by a family member, no less. But that was exactly the case with Alan Pulido, 25, who plays soccer with Olympiakos in the Greek league, and is from Tamaulipas, a rough border state in Mexico that's known for a lot of bad shit courtesy of the local drug cartels.

A woman is lying on her back on a white surface, with her legs raised and bent at the knees. She is wearing a blue and black patterned bikini. Her right arm is bent with her hand near her hip, and she is wearing a silver bracelet. A small, sparkling accessory is visible on her left hip. The background is a solid red horizontal band at the top of the page.

Some guy married to one of his cousins allegedly masterminded the whole thing and the bad guys demanded that the family fork over 6 million pesos ($325,000) or they would kill the talented striker. But the following day, Pulido – all 5-foot-9 and 150 pounds of him – found himself alone with one of his captors and was able to kick the guy's ass, take his gun and call the police. Someone award him the Golden Boot.

Coddled on Campus

We as a nation are in some serious trouble judging by the way some colleges handle their students. College campuses nationwide have become expensive "Mommy and Me" programs with safe spaces, de-stressing areas and napping stations.

Yes, our leaders of tomorrow require nap time, cookies, Play-Doh, bubbles, coloring books, and puppies to play with in order to decompress from all of the anxiety of taking finals.

A few examples:

- The Borough of Manhattan Community College hosted their "De-Stress Fest" that included yoga, Zumba, 10-minute massages and a puppy petting station.

- Yale's list of famous alumni includes Dr. Harvey Williams Cushing (the father of modern neurosurgery), pediatrician Dr. Benjamin Spock, U.S. presidents George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton, and perhaps another in Hillary Clinton. To de-stress during midterms, some Yalies were filmed doing simulated broomstick rides. College is stressful, but really, there are other much more fun things to do with your broomstick.

- At the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, the napping station was not enough for these softies, so the campus library installed a MetroNaps Energy Pod, a chair that looks like it should be on the bridge of the USS Enterprise and has preprogrammed durations with soft music and vibrations.

Reports of His Death Greatly Exaggerated

Perhaps the stupidest thing that has become commonplace in the Internet era is the "Death Hoax." Some idiot posts that a celebrity died and it spreads like wildfire. It goes with the old saying that if enough people are talking about it, then it must be true – that is, until the supposedly dead person posts a video or tweets that they are very much alive.

So when did all of this crap start? Back in the 1940s, hoaxes floated around that both Charlie Chaplin and Frank Sinatra were dead. But the one that most people recall is Paul McCartney, then of The Beatles. The rumor was that the bassist perished in a 1967 car accident. The band seemed to play along by leaving subtle clues and hints about it in their song lyrics and on the album covers.

Needless to say, the Paul-is-dead hoax was a lot more fun than some meme prematurely saying that Charlie Sheen overdosed.

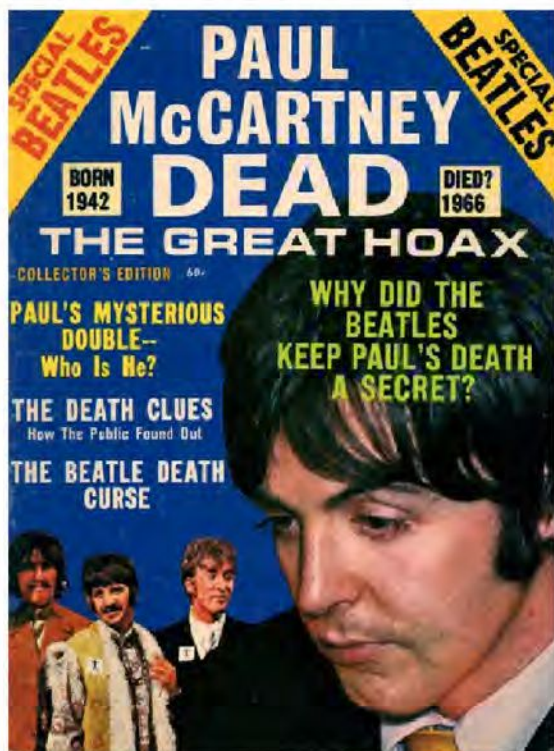

The Crying Game

The "Crying Jordan Face" is the meme that just keeps on giving. The tearful image of Jordan, first snapped at his 2009 induction in to the Basketball Hall of Fame, has gone viral innumerable times since it burst onto social media a couple of years ago. Everyone has seen this in some form of another, although some folks probably have no idea who it is and why it's being Photoshopped on practically everyone.

Arguably the greatest hoopster of all time was understandably emotional and shed a few tears on that great day for him and his fans alike. No one could know that Associated Press photograph would end up being used over and over in hysterical composites a few years later.

At first, the Crying Jordan meme was used on other sports stars, but it's taken on a life of its own. No celebrity or politician is safe from having Jordan's sobbing likeness superimposed over their face. We await Jordan's emotional induction into the 2019 Meme Hall of Fame

The Ride

McLaren 570S / 570GT

$187,000
cars.mclaren.com

Built for the sheer thrill of the ride, McLaren's track-racing-inspired supercar flies from zero to 60 in 2.9 seconds and reaches a top speed of 204 miles per hour. The twin-turbo, 3.8-liter, twin-turbo-charged V-8 engine cranks out 562 horsepower, propelling fun and speed to new horizons.

The rear-wheel drive, fed by a sequential, seven-speed gearbox keeps the accelerations smooth and powerful, while the engine's 443 pounds per foot of torque and 8100 rpm capability ensures a deeply satisfying rumble.

At less than 3,200 pounds, the 570 is a sleek, light sport-car owner's dream. Or if you don't have $187 Gs to spare, maybe convince a wealthy friend it's what they need.
