The former Toddlers and Tiaras tyke, 11, who starred with her family on Here Comes Honey Boo Boo, is tipping the scale at 160 pounds, a source says and friends are worried for her health. LeAnn Rimes' comeback is a bust - again. She's said the title song on her new album, Remnants, alludes to the "falling" apart" that came when she and Eddie Cibrian divorced their spouses and wed in 2011. But it seems fans don't love how she put the pieces back together after that scandal. "The way LeAnn defended her affair with Eddie soured people on her," says a source. "She's been relegated to the casino circuit to make money." Remnants, released Feb. 3. sold fewer than 4,500 copies in its first week and could end up being a bigger bomb than her 2013 album, Spitfire, which sold just 10,798 copies. Says the source, "Remnants isn't going to save the day for her. She's heartbroken."

ustin Timberlake can't stop the spending!
Sources say the star is blowing millions on a concert-level performance of his nominated song "Can't Stop the Feeling" at the Oscars on Feb. 26, and it's not just because of the huge worldwide audience — he wants the Academy to tap him to host next year. "JT has thrown his hat into the ring several times before, but it's never happened," an insider says. "He thinks this is his chance to bowl them over with a killer performance, and he's already spent loads of the producers' money on dancers and choreography." He's lucky to have an ally:

Mike De Luca, who helped Justin get cast in The Social Network, is on the producing team this year, and "he's letting Justin go over the top," the source says. "Justin wants to get everyone on their feet dancing, like [in 2006] when Three 6 Mafia sang 'Hard Out Here for a Pimp.'" After that, an Oscar would be the icing on the cake!

With the recent death at age 80 of his beloved mother, Mary Lee South, Tom Cruise has lost the anchor in his life. "His mother shaped his entire world," says a source of the star, who attended a Church of Scientology memorial in her honor, along with his three sisters. "Tom always consulted her before making any big decisions." Estranged from his father, whom he's called "a bully and a coward," Tom saw his interest in acting encouraged by his mom; she also passed along a strong work ethic, working three jobs at one point to make ends meet. Her passing leaves a "huge hole" in Tom's life, says the insider — "one he's not sure he'll ever be able to fill."

Beans, Chicken Rice

n The Walking Dead-the highest-rated show of 2016, which looks poised to repeat the feat - Katelyn Nacon's character. Enid. has survived against the odds, even as her mom, dad and boyfriend succumbed to the zombie hordes that overran her hometown. In real life, the 17-year-old is prepared for anything too, including the need to feed herself healthy, easy meals while she's on set. fter a year in which they were kept apart for long stretches — he filmed the thriller Mute in Europe and the third season of his HBO series The Leftovers in Australia, while she held down the fort in Los Angeles — Justin Theroux and Jennifer Aniston were all too happy to escape to their favorite vacation spot, Cabo San Lucas, Mexico, to celebrate Jen's 48th birthday (Feb. 11) and, frankly, just the fact that they were in the same time zone.

Both showing off the sorts of physiques more commonly seen on people half their age (or younger!), the getaway felt, a friend reports, "more like a second honeymoon" — never mind that they'd invited Courteney Cox and her fiancé, Johnny McDaid, to join them. In fact, the pal says, "Courteney was joking that they hardly saw Jen and Justin because they spent so much time locked in their suite!"

Justin, 45, "is so devoted to Jen, and they're clearly more in love than ever," says the pal. "They were just relaxed and excited to be with good friends. They couldn't wipe the smiles off their faces!"

alk about a full house! As George and Amal Clooney prepare for the arrival of their twins, an insider tells OK! that they're welcoming yet another addition: Amal's mother, Baria Alamuddin, will be shacking up at the Clooney castle in England for a few months, to help with the babies. "Of course they have the money to hire full-time nannies, but Amal's mom has been dying for grandkids," says a source. "They're very close, and there's no way Amal would want her to miss this special time." The insider adds that 55-yearold George is "completely cool" with his mother-in-law coming to stay. As firsttime parents, George and Amal, 39, "are both nervous," says the insider. "He knows they could use the help! George is looking forward to having Baria there to lean on."

Kate & Ned FIGHTING OVER LEO

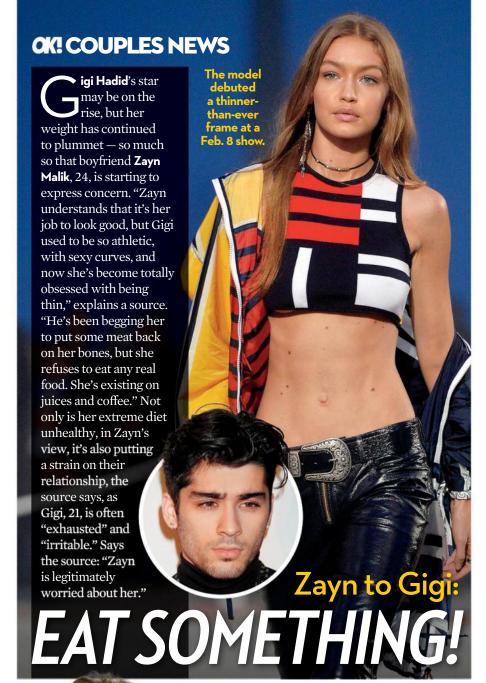

At last year's Academy Awards. no one was more ecstatic for Leonardo DiCaprio's win than his Titanic costar and good pal Kate Winslet. But an insider claims that Kate's constant gushing about Leo has caused strife between the actress, 41, and husband Ned Rocknroll. 39. "Kate and Leo never dated, but Ned has always been very paranoid about their friendship," reveals the insider. "He couldn't stand that Kate was by Leo's side that entire night." In fact, the insider says Ned refused to attend this year's show, where Leo, 42, will be presenting. "Ned had an awful time in 2016, so he put his foot down and told Kate he's not going this year," says the insider. "He just can't bear to spend another night with Kate fawning all over Leo."

STANDS UP KOURTNEY

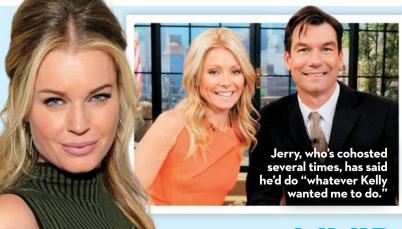

Justin Bieber put on a pouty face when he declared on Instagram that he was without a Valentine - but the crooner only has himself to blame. as a source tells OK! that he bailed on a date with Kourtney Kardashian just a few days earlier! According to the source, the reality star, 37, "was all dolled up" when she arrived at West Hollywood lounge Delilah's on Feb. 12, where she had reserved a table at a private Grammys afterparty; but, though Justin, 23, was set to attend, he ditched last minute in favor of a bash at a Beverly Hills mansion. "Kourtney waited the entire night at Delilah's but he never showed up," the source reveals. "She was humiliated." Guess hers is not the kind of "company" Biebs is after these days.

Miranda & Evan's VIRGIN VOW

Miranda Kerr and fiancé Evan Spiegel are the latest couple to become born-again virgins pre-wedding, or so the model, 33, claimed in a recent interview. stating that they're "waiting" to have sex because Evan is "very traditional." But her remarks have some in their circle perplexed. especially in light of leaked emails from the 26-year-old Snapchat CEO's frat days at Stanford, which are full of crass comments about encounters with women. "It seems unlikely that the guy who wrote those emails took a vow of chastity," says one pal. "Maybe Miranda just said that stuff to try to make him look good."

As soon as Kelly Ripa kicked off her hunt for a new Live cohost, Jerry O'Connell, 43, started telling friends it'd be his "dream" job, says a source close to the actor. However, the pal notes that Jerry's wife, Rebecca Romijn, doesn't share his enthusiasm. "The show shoots in New York, so it'd mean uprooting their two young daughters from L.A. or trying to survive long-distance," explains the source. "She thinks either option would place too great a strain on their marriage." Rebecca even had a snide response when asked about the prospect recently: "If Kelly gets Jerry, I get

Trump's private world as she transitions from (very) private citizen to first lady hen Melania Trump walked gingerly onto the front steps of the U.S. Capitol on Inauguration Day, she was a vision in powder blue. Evoking the grace of style icons Audrey Hepburn and Grace Kelly - not to mention the impeccably tailored first ladies who came before her, including the beloved Jacqueline Kennedy- she looked positively regal in a custom Ralph Lauren cowl-necked cashmere suit-dress, a sweeping updo and elegant suede elbow-length gloves.

According to OK! sources, Melania is embracing the role of first lady and ready for whatever life alongside her husband, President Donald Trump, will bring. The Slovenian-born former model, 46, "has been praised time and time again by Donald for being a wonderful wife and mother," says an insider, "and she's destined to be the perfect first lady." Adds the source, "She may be slightly shy and reluctant to take center stage, but she's proved she can rise to the challenge for her husband."

When Donald, 70, asked his wife of 12 years to give rousing speeches during his campaign, the soft-spoken businesswoman "practically fainted!" jokes an inside source. But she took to the podium with aplomb, first at the Republican National Convention in July, and then in November, six days before the election. "She didn't hesitate to do her part for Donald," says the source, who adds that her platform against cyberbullying and her fiercely loving, hands-on parenting of 10-year-old son Barron, will mark her legacy.

ON THE RISE

Melania has long been up for the challenge of first ladyhood. Her grace under pressure and strength of character was born from a modest childhood in Communist Slovenia: "She has a real rags-to-riches story," explains an insider. "Her father sold car parts while her mother made children's clothes in a factory."

Determined to do better for herself, young Melania pursued a degree in design before the glamorous world of modeling beckoned. At 18, she signed with an agency in Milan, before finally landing in New York, where she would grace the covers of national fashion magazines — and, at 28, meet her husband, Donald, at a Fashion Week party. She famously declined her rich suitor's request for her phone number, but Donald is nothing if not persistent, and Melania ultimately relented. Following a six-year courtship, the couple married in a jaw-droppingly luxe — not to mention A-list! — affair at Donald's Mar-a-Lago golf club in Palm Beach, Fla.

By the time Melania said I do to Donald, she had already traveled the world as a model, and picked up six languages (Serbo-Croatian, Italian, German, Slovene, French and English). She was more than a wife; the first lady-to-be was a budding businesswoman in her own right, eventually owning her own jewelry line and dedicating her free time to philanthropic causes, including the Boys Club of New York and the American Red Cross. "I am very independent," she once said — and has repeatedly, throughout the course of her life, demonstrated as much.

A NEW ERA

Well before her husband was sworn in, Melania stated that her first lady persona would be "very traditional, like Betty Ford or Jackie Kennedy." Sources say that much like the iconic Jackie, Melania is expected to have a flair for interior design in the White House. After many years of living in a classic and ornate apartment in Trump Tower, Melania's tastes will easily be at home on Pennsylvania Avenue. "The family has already brought in chairs from their home, reupholstered in Melania-approved teal blue," says an insider, "and they have plans for lots of silk and satin brocade and gilded furniture."

First Ladies of FASHION

Insiders are also abuzz about another seeming similarity between the JFK and Trump presidencies. "This is a wealthy family dynasty," says a source, "with kids running all around the place" — Donald Jr.'s five, Ivanka's three, and Donald and Melania's son, Barron. "It's like a return to Camelot."

While Melania has claimed her place atop the dynasty, she plans to stay with Barron in New York City as he finishes out the school year. "She'll go back and forth from Trump Tower to the White House," says an insider, "but the plan is ultimately for the whole family to be in Washington and for Barron to go to a new school."

Melania's role as a mother is her first priority — just like many first ladies who came before her — but she's also dedicated to starting a campaign against cyberbullying, a vital cause that will command much of her time over the next four years. "In the 21st century, social media is very damaging for children," Melania has said. "We need to guide them."

Says a source, "Melania and even Barron have been the target of cyberbullies, and the effects can be long-lasting. As first lady, she's committed to educating and inspiring people to be kinder and gentler."

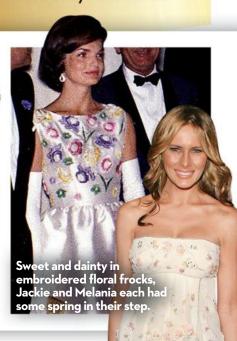

A Tale of Two Cities

Melania, above with Barron in New York in November, is devoted to being a hands-on mom while her son finishes out the school year; Ivanka, meanwhile, has stepped in to assist her dad in D.C.-based duties, as when they paid respects to a fallen Navy SEAL's family last month.

HEIDI KLUM'S BOYFRIEND, VITO SCHNABEL, HAS BEEN STEPPING OUT ON HER

eidi Klum got Vito'd! Her boyfriend, Vito Schnabel a notorious playboy — has dallied behind the supermodel's back for the second time in two years, this time with the wife of a Russian billionaire.

Art dealer Vito (who at 30, is 13 years younger than Heidi) is no stranger to dating high-profile, older women — his exes include Demi Moore, Liv Tyler and Elle Macpherson — but Heidi has seemingly held his attention for the past three years, as they've shared PDA-heavy, often-topless vacations to every sun-drenched spot on Earth; the past year's choice locales included Jamaica, Miami and St. Barts.

But for his latest getaway, to St. Moritz, Switzerland, in January, he left his girlfriend — and loyalties —

THE FIRST OFFENSE
Last December, Vito was caught holding hands with actress Dakota Johnson in an NYC bar (above). "He was flanking her legs with his!" reported a witness.

behind. Celebrating the launch of his Swiss art gallery with a posse of art-world pals, Vito was caught putting the moves on his old friend Dasha Zhukova, 35, the wife of Russian investor Roman Abramovich.

"He and Dasha had just eaten with a group of friends, and they split off from the group," says an inside source. "It looked very intimate — he was caressing Dasha and whispering lustfully into her ear. It was clear what his intentions were — and not so clear that he had a girlfriend." Adds the source, "There are rumors that Vito carried a torch for Dasha for years. They've been seen at society parties in London and Miami together, but he's been with Heidi, and Dasha's been married to one of the world's most ruthless businessmen. Even if she didn't reciprocate it looks bad for him."

A source suggests that Vito may have acted out of revenge: He was reportedly peeved that Heidi had recently spent the holidays in Aspen with her ex-husband, Seal, and their four kids. But Heidi, who's claimed she and Vito have "an amazing connection," isn't interested in her younger beau's games. Cautions a source, "She loves Vito, but she won't be so forgiving this time."

DANIEL & RACHEL'S

ack in 2010, Daniel Craig and Rachel Weisz began their romance under rather sensational circumstances: They were both engaged to other people. But a source close to the erstwhile James Bond says that, unlike his signature character, the 49-year-old actor prefers a very traditional domestic life. ("Being on your own would be sad, sick and weird," he once said. "I need that balance.") In fact, he's been "desperate to start a family all of these years," the source says. Alas, his wish has yet to come true - and time may be running out.

DADDY DREAMS DASHED

It seems his wife of almost six years simply isn't on the same page anymore... if she ever was. Rachel's 10-year-old son, Henry (with director Darren Aronofsky), was still a toddler when she and Daniel fell in love, the source notes, so while she was open to the idea of having a baby back then, "it didn't feel terribly urgent to her." Now that she's 46 — and hell-bent on reigniting her career, with six films in the works over the next two years — Daniel is realizing that it might be too late. "With Rachel plotting this career comeback, it doesn't leave any room for him, and certainly not for a child," says the source.

BOND

SOURCES SAY CONFLICTS OVER CAREER AND CHILDREN HAVE DANIEL CRAIG AND RACHEL WEISZ' NEARLY SIX-YEAR MARRIAGE ON THE ROCKS

Of course, Daniel already has his own child, 24-year-old Ella (whose mother is his first wife, Fiona Loudon). But his dream was for him and Rachel to "raise a child together," the source says. "Now, her lack of interest might cost them their marriage."

In the meantime, the couple are barely together enough to focus on their relationship. "Right now, he's filming in L.A., and she's in London," the source says. "They can barely sync their schedules to talk on the phone." Given their history — they were friends for 15 years before becoming a couple — they had high hopes for their union. But, the source says, "they've dropped the ball. It's beginning to look like they won't work it out."

BAD BEGINNINGS...

RACHEL AND DANIEL BROKE UP LONG-TERM RELATIONSHIPS TO BE TOGETHER

When they began working together on the 2011 film Dream House, Rachel had been engaged for five years to Darren Aronofsky and Daniel was reportedly set to wed producer Satsuki Mitchell. But all that went by the wayside once they fell for each other. "They couldn't stand to be apart," the source recalls. "Every time they were alone, it was all they could do not to rip each other's clothes off." Too bad for their exes!

A recent rash of robberies in Kris Jenner's gated Hidden Hills community have the family – especially Kim – on edge ince being bound and robbed at gunpoint in October, a traumatized Kim Kardashian has become obsessed with her safety. She parted ways with her bodyguard, hired a new security team and even overhauled her blingtastic Instagram persona, trading flashy pics – like the ones of her $4 million diamond ring that lured those Paris robbers to her jewelry stash – for more subdued and family-centric shots.

In addition, she's been staying at her mom Kris Jenner's shrouded manse in tony Hidden Hills, Calif., nestled beyond an imposing fence and multiple guarded checkpoints.

But she may need to change up her hiding place in the wake of a recent spate of break-ins and burglaries in the neighborhood — a half-dozen since December. "Kim is shaken to the core by this sudden crime spree," says an insider. "She feels like these robbers are closing in on her, and it's only a matter of time before they strike again."

Kris, too, is deeply disturbed that burglars could penetrate a community that she thought was "like a fortress," the insider says. "Kris doesn't want Kim to constantly relive the pain of what happened to her in Paris. She's demanded to know where the security guards were during these break-ins, and she'll hire extra bodyguards if necessary. She refuses to be an open target."

The Brit actress and ex-Bond girl upped her cups for her role as a voracious cougar in the 2005 comedy Wedding Crashers. "I'd breast-fed my kids and things weren't what they had been," she said. "I had to replace what the kids ate."

Naya Rivera

The former Glee star was only 18 when she got her assets amped up, and 10 years later, "they still make me happy when I look in the mirror," she's said. "My new boobs were a confidence thing, not a sexual thing." Could have fooled us!

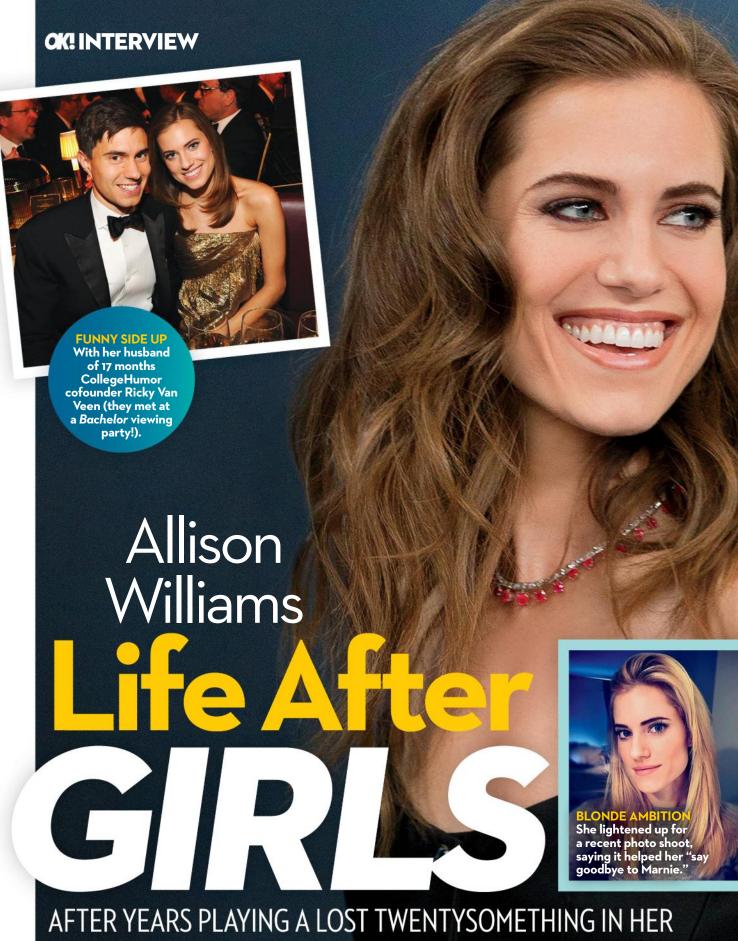

Iggy Azalea

Girl just can't keep a secret! The Aussie rapper was so happy after getting implants in 2015 that she couldn't wait to spill the beans. In fact, Iggy even posted a picture of herself and her plastic surgeon on Instagram, saying "he's the reason I have fabulously perky boobs (LOL)."

Kelly Rowland

The X Factor judge and ex-Destiny's Child singer delayed getting a boob job after her mom — and Beyoncé's — told her to think hard before taking the plunge. Kelly waited 10 years, and now couldn't be happier, saying, "I love them!"

stars in the buzzy horror movie Get Out, in theaters Feb. 24, written and directed by Key & Peele's Jordan Peele. has a book of short fiction, Best and Always, due this year, and she's working on a pilot for a new HBO series, Max, set in 1960s New York. recently split from her husband; the mom of two will costar with Jamie Dornan in a dramedy called Untogether.

don't know my adult life without Marnie in it," says Allison Williams, who has spent the last five years playing the tightly wound yet vulnerable Marnie Michaels on HBO's Girls. Now that the influential series is in its last season, she and her costars are moving on — but not without some pangs of loss. Allison talks about how she's facing the future, and dishes on the sex scenes that could make even the boldest star blush.

Has your life dovetailed with Marnie's in any way?

We started out so similarly and then she went on all these little adventures, and I kind of stayed where we were. I've gotten older and added [things] to my life, like a husband [entrepreneur Ricky Van Veen, 36] and dog, but the big joke in my group is that they would say things like, "There's this job in San Francisco..." and I would say, "Take it! I'll still be here doing this job, in this apartment, with this dude and nothing is going to change." I feel so boring by comparison.

Do you feel you've missed out? I don't feel like a grown-up. Marnie has been doing a lot of that for me — I got to experience it without actually having to do it, which my friends promise is better. But I'm worried that I, Allison, am about to go through all of that [for] the first time. I just hope I can learn from Marnie's mistakes.

The show presents sex in a very frank way. Did that scare you? In the [series'] first episode I'm wearing no makeup and I have a retainer in, and once you start there, it's very freeing. I didn't have time to develop vanity [or be] scared of sex scenes. It was the best first job for those reasons. Whenever I read a script with a sex scene in it now, I realize there are a lot of actors wondering if they can cut it, [but] I'm like, "All right!"

Girls is almost a time capsule for millennials. Would it be different if the series kicked off this year? I think if [creator] Lena [Dunham] were to come on the scene this year it might be pretty similar, because the thing about these girls is they are so self-absorbed that it almost doesn't matter what else is happening in the world. That's one of the big criticisms [we had], but it's so real — it's that phase in life. OK!

LOVE HER KNOT

"Knots are the new braids," says celeb stylist Riawna Capri from Nine Zero One Salon in Los Angeles, who created this funky twisted pony for Julianne Hough.

RIAWNA'S TIPS TO GET THE LOOK:

- 1. Mist volumizing spray throughout damp hair and blow-dry.
- 2. Once hair is 100 percent dry, split into two sections and create your first knot where a low pony would sit. Tie the hair at the base of the knot and split the extra hair into two, making another knot to tie at the base.
 - 3. Continue this until you run out of hair and mist with strong hold hairspray.

Sun., March 5, at 10 PM ET on FX

Though actresses Bette Davis and Joan Crawford played nice as the cameras rolled to film the hit 1962 thriller What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?, behind the scenes, the two clashed constantly, giving birth to a bitter rivalry. That strife is the basis for the first installment of Ryan Murphy's latest anthology, which stars Susan Sarandon as Bette and Jessica Lange as Joan. The dishy show documents how the two women fiercely battled each other, ageism, sexism and the myriad pressures of Hollywood.
