From the editor

Just imagine. A compelling but little-known memoir is transformed into a television hit. But then the trilogy that inspired this Sunday-night blockbuster runs out. And the most famous face in your cast moves on.

The real story of Call the Midwife echoes the drama that now transfixes more than ten million people. The team behind it didn't quit after they'd adapted all Jennifer Worth's stories about being an East End midwife in the 1950s and Miranda Hart left. Instead they were reborn – marching confidently into the 1960s tackling difficult issues from thalidomide to female genital mutilation.

The sixth series climaxes this week with, aptly, a birth as well as a wedding. We talk to the creative team behind Call the Midwife on page 10. They'll also be appearing at the BFI & Radio Times Television Festival next month. Book tickets for more than 40 events – see page 29.

WHAT GETS US TALKING...

MATT SMITH, PRINCE OF WHALES

Does the Queen watch The Crown, I hear you ask? My Palace sources tell me that she hasn't yet seen the drama, which may not come as a surprise. Still, the Palace is generally pleased with The Crown, although there are some concerns about the depiction of the Duke of Edinburgh, played by Matt Smith. Some courtiers feel he has been unfairly painted as something of a dilettante, I gather. "Series two should cover his important work with the World Wildlife Trust so there could be some restitution of that," says my source.

THE TROUBLE WITH ITN NEWS

ITV shunted News at Ten to 10.30pm to make way for The Nightly Show – but ratings have been poor for the new entertainment show, with just over a million viewers per episode. Questions are already being asked about whether it will last its planned eight-week run. ITV's news provider, ITN, is miffed about the move, even though ITV programmes boss Kevin Lygo visited staff there earlier this year to reassure them that the news bulletin would be returning to 10pm when The Nightly Show finishes. And Lygo better keep his word. A number of ITN staff are keeping detailed records of Lygo's assurances...

MORE NEWS ON THE NEWS

And finally on the News at Ten saga... ITN's big fear is that ITV will implement further cuts to the news – with one of either the 6.30pm or 10.30pm bulletins disappearing. "When the world needs quality broadcast news like never before, ITV is treating it like an embarrassing old lady who needs to be shuffled out of a party," thunders one former senior ITN reporter (who asked not to be named). "ITV did the same when they moved the news in 1999 with the 'News at When' saga and they haven't learned their lesson. What other great British brand would be treated so shabbily?"

CUNK ON...

Diane Morgan, AKA dimwitted presenter Philomena Cunk, says she has new ideas for her character, as and when required. Last year she made Cunk On Shakespeare and Cunk on Christmas and she tells me that she wants to do Cunk on Jane Austen to mark the 200th anniversary of the writer's death this year. At some point she also wants to do what may be the most obvious idea: Cunk on Punk.

CORY – THE DAY HE WAS BORN

Ian McLeod was so smitten with his newborn son Cory he wanted to chronicle him growing up – a photograph for every day of his first 21 years.

"I thought I might keep it up for a couple of years, but found I couldn't stop in case I regretted it," says Ian. "But as Cory got older it became more difficult to keep on top of it, so we decided to end the project on his 21st birthday." The resulting 7,000-plus photographs are now neatly catalogued in albums at their home in Harrogate in north Yorkshire.

Ian's story is one of five featured in a film that looks at family collections, part of BBC4's photography season Britain in Focus.

Weather warning

Viewers need forecasts – not fear-mongering

We seem to have been inundated with weather warnings this winter, not least when Storm Doris crashed in from the Atlantic in February, bringing misery to great swathes of the country. Whatever you think of the Met Office practice of naming storms, it's designed to add to the drama and credibility of the warning.

But when we receive as many warnings as we do, are they effective? And should the weather presenters scare us with the effects of the storm, or should they just stick to the meteorology? This has been a dilemma since 11 January 1954, when the first weatherman, George Cowling, appeared on our television screens.

'To be effective, our forecasters must beware of behaving like nannies'

When I began my career on screen it was forbidden to mention flooding. The Met Office view at that time was, "We forecast the rain coming out of the clouds but when it hits the ground, it's a local authority problem, not ours!" We got around it by talking about "excess surface water" on roads and pavements, but that was a coded warning. On frosty and snowy nights does the forecaster really need to tell people to watch out on untreated roads and pavements? I think they could safely just mention the ice and expect viewers to use their common sense.

Cast your mind back a little further to January, when we were being told about high levels of pollution and freezing fog combining to give us the dreaded smog. Again, should the weather presenters really tell their listeners and viewers not to go out in it? No one wants to give healthy individuals a cause for worry, or an unnecessary reason not to go to work.

Of course, if the forecast is for exceptionally severe weather, which happens about once every five years, then due warnings and possible consequences must be given. But to do this with all of the dozen or so named winter storms risks making people immune to the warnings. And just because we're now into spring – at least where weather forecasters are concerned – it doesn't mean the warnings will stop. We have yet to get the summer thunderstorms and consequent flooding as well as a warning of impending heatwaves.

So while we must consider the effects of severe weather on the population at large rather than just pure weather information, for weather warnings to be effective our forecasters must beware of behaving like nannies. The Met Office already has a great relationship with the Environment Agency and the two sets of forecasters work together to issue the flood warnings. Only sensible warnings of the effects of bad weather, duly considered by all of the experts, would be given out when relevant and it would reduce the number of off-the-cuff remarks that happen today.

Of course the forecasters have a very difficult job, and March is an awkward time as we move from winter into spring because it's a battle between milder, wetter Atlantic weather and cold air from the continent – and it's no different this year.

So here's my personal forecast for the weeks ahead. I think much of England, Wales and Northern Ireland will be mild with periods of rain, whereas Scotland could still be in the grip of winter. But there is a chance, albeit fairly small, that sunnier, colder weather, with night frosts, could encroach further south. The second half of March should continue in the same vein, with milder wetter weather still the most likely, but the Scandinavian high pressure doesn't give in that easily and could still give us another flavour of winter – so there's every chance of damaging frosts well into April.

Which, as a gardener, is the one weather warning I do really want to hear.

FANTASY TV

BY TIM DOWLING

PR experts have long understood TV's ability to shift popular opinion favourably, and the following programmes in development show that the phenomenon is more prevalent than ever.

SCARY KING OF SHOPS

Sir Philip Green takes it upon himself to save ailing British businesses through a combination of tough love, hard truths and straightforward abuse. In the pilot episode the staff of an underperforming seaside B&B are press-ganged aboard Sir Philip's yacht to find out what real work feels like.

DINNER WITH JULIAN

Wikileaks founder Julian Assange welcomes a different dinner guest to the Ecuadorian embassy each week. First up is Warren Beatty, who explains why the chaos surrounding his Oscars best picture announcement was anyone's fault but his. Assange himself offers a compelling theory about Russian involvement in the envelope mix-up.

KATIE GO HOME

Renowned controversialist Katie Hopkins agrees to be deported to Romania in order to experience what life might be like for EU citizens in the event of a "hard Brexit". At first Hopkins adjusts well to her new home, but soon discovers that the paperwork revoking her British citizenship is irreversible.

PAUL NUTTALL: GOING TO MARS

The Ukip leader, professional footballer and unsuccessful candidate for Stoke Central allows the cameras to record his arduous training regime leading up to his one-man mission to Mars, planned for the autumn of 2019. Nuttall seeks advice on the effects of long-term space travel, leading to an awkward encounter when Nasa security personnel refuse to accept his home-made ID card.

GETTY

It's difficult to imagine how Call the Midwife could become any more touching, but this week writer Heidi Thomas pulls it off yet again with a spectacular scene revealing nuns, nurses, doctors and locals all going weak at the knees at the entrance of the beautiful bride, Nurse Barbara, in her fur-trimmed cloak. Pulling together life's great dramatic events, which we all recognise from our own experience, has been one of the key ingredients to the drama's phenomenal success, attracting more than ten million viewers.

However, this is Call the Midwife, not Bless the Bride, and although the wedding makes a fitting climax, it is, as always, all about the babies. Indeed, there is even the arrival of a baby to a midwife herself this week. And yes, the show may well have expanded into key areas of social history such as female contraception and East End immigration, but the special moment is when the newborn turns up. All the babies are adorable, and truly newborns. There's no CGI montage going on here. These are real, beady-eyed babies, just hatched, exuding their mysterious wisdom and waving their arms around in that gorgeous manner that only actual newborns do. It must be wonderful having them on set.

> 'We use about 60 to 70 babies a series'
> SERIES PRODUCER ANN TRICKLEBANK

"Well, they are real divas," says Charlotte Ritchie, who plays Nurse Barbara Gilbert, whose wedding takes place in this week's episode.

What? Surely not? Yes, says the unrepentant Ritchie. "They cry all the time. They have 15-minute breaks every 15 minutes and everyone has to be hushed when they turn up! They get everything they want."

She can't seriously be piqued by being upstaged by a newborn? Well, no. Ritchie admits they are rather sweet and working with them has some advantages. "The other day I was on a train and someone handed me their baby while she went off to the loo. I didn't feel nervous, I felt at ease. It was nice. I feel much more of an impulse to help mums and dads on their own."

How was filming the wedding? "That was very nerve-racking, wearing a real wedding dress and going through the whole ceremony. Having to keep my dress white and make sure I didn't spill tea down my front was a major concern."

But back to the babies. Surely it's difficult to ▷

‘I LOVE CALL THE MIDWIFE – I’M IN IT!’

Alice Brown, aged three, has grown up over three series of the show

Alice was eight months old when she first played Angela (right), the adopted daughter of the Turners: midwife Shelagh and her GP husband Patrick. And as Alice has grown, so has Angela. Laura Main, who plays Shelagh, explains what a special bond they have forged over the past two and a half years.

“We have about ten days of filming with Alice in each series, and we have become like little friends. She’s like one of my nieces, she’s adorable, and it has been incredible seeing the difference in her each year. I think the penny dropped about filming when she was about two. It was during the scene when we were camping, and when she realised she had to do the same thing over and over again. At the end of the day she said, ‘I did it!’ She had grasped the basics of acting for the camera. Doing series six with her has been a delight. I think she’s really enjoyed it.”

Alice’s father Joseph says she’s having a great time. “She’s got to the stage where she realises what she’s doing. She’s made the connection between being on set and then, a few months later, seeing herself do the same things on TV.”

He says there was no plan to put her forward as a child performer. “Annabel, my wife, just knew someone on the production and Alice’s arrival coincided with the storyline. It simply started from there.”

Joseph says the crew all make a huge fuss of his daughter. “For her it’s like having a day, or an afternoon, out. Before they do any filming, or anything on set, Laura and Stephen play with her, doing colouring or building things, so a rapport is there and when the cameras and a crew of 50 people arrive, she’s comfortable.

“Do I now have any interest in her being a child actor in any other way? Zero interest. To be honest, we will simply enjoy playing the episodes back to her when she is older, and embarrassing her on her wedding day, and of course she now has quite a nice nest egg in her savings account.”

Babies get what “you might call a nominal fee” per session, says Tricklebank. “It’s less than three figures – a bit more than £40, but not much more.” Then there’s the chaperone. “Every child under 16 on set must have a proper, qualified chaperone independent from the parent. They log the time that the baby or child works and check that everything is done properly within the law.”

It seems the Brown family is so modest about their daughter’s role in a hit show that they haven’t told the world. “The other day at nursery,” says Joseph, “Alice was asked what her favourite TV programme was, and of course she said Call the Midwife. When her teacher asked why, she said, ‘Because I’m in it.’ Her teacher thought she was making it up, and laughed. When she found out Alice was telling the truth, she said she was astounded, and really rather shocked that she had doubted her for a second.” RM

◁ find parents who are willing to give up their newborns to appear in Call the Midwife? Not at all, says series producer Ann Tricklebank. “Lots of eager parents contact us and say, ‘We are having a baby, would you like it on the show?’ But the reality is that we need our newborns at very specific times due to the filming schedule, and so we get most of our babies through a specialist talent agency. We use babies up to about eight weeks old, and sometimes we have special demands, for example with regard to ethnicity. Or perhaps if we’re covering a premature birth, we will need a tiny baby.

“We can’t use babies of people who write in because the baby has to tie in to the shooting schedule, not the other way round. Although of course, once the baby is on set, we have to comply with regulations about working time, and we are very happy to do that.”

Shooting the birth is a complicated affair, according to Tricklebank. “One baby being born on screen will take at least five hours to shoot, and very often the actor playing the mother will never have had a baby herself. So first of all we have to rehearse what that experience is like. Our midwifery adviser Terri Coates puts the actor through the birthing process following the structure of that week’s story, whether the birth is at home or in hospital or in the back of a car.”

Of course, the real newborns don’t have to show up for rehearsals. “We rehearse the birth with what we call a ‘jelly baby’, which is essentially a silicone model that feels and looks just like a real baby. But when the time comes to shoot, we use a real baby. We pass it under the actor’s thigh and she brings it up, holding the baby and its umbilical cord, which is made of silicone, and then she holds it against its tummy.”

‘One baby being born on screen takes five hours to shoot’

ANN TRICKLEBANK

It can’t be easy coping with a wriggling, slippery baby and having to remember to hold the cord in the right place. What happens if there is a gap caught on camera between cord and baby? “We correct it with CGI.” And what about the authentic slipperiness? “Grape juice and stage blood, basically.” What do the babies’ mothers think of this? “They are fine. They can either sit on set with us or watch the filming on a nearby monitor. It’s a big day for them, too.”

It’s all incredibly well thought out. However, as every actor knows, children aren’t easy to film with, so newborns must be no exception. ▷

INSPIRING
Laura Main studied videos of real women giving birth to prepare for Shelagh's delivery scene

JELLY BABY
The silicone newborn is spookily authentic

◁ Has Tricklebank ever had to film a birth with a furious newborn not happy about being launched so early into its acting career?

"No, we know how to handle babies. The room is as warm and quiet as possible. Our crew is well used to babies. They know when the baby arrives on set, they must all be quiet and still."

'We rehearse with a silicone model that looks and feels real'

Ah yes, the diva quotient. What happens when problem births are covered? "If it's a difficult birth, we might look to use newborn twins, who can give us twice as much time filming on camera." And disability? "When we were doing our thalidomide story, we used the head of a real toddler and the arms and legs were done by animatronics. I think all parents who have had able-bodied babies are happy to help, and in this case support parents and babies who went through thalidomide 50 years ago. I think that's why Call the Midwife is so loved. Because what happens in it could happen to anyone."

Over the years the show has gone through a lot of babies. "We use about 60 to 70 a series," says Tricklebank. "And upwards of 200 small children. That's a lot, but we don't think we'll run out. The parents love it because they have a little scene with their baby that they can keep for ever. It's special."

It's pretty memorable for the actor portraying the birth, too. Laura Main, who plays Shelagh Turner, has her baby in this week's episode. She has not had any children herself, so how did she prepare for the role?

"I talked to Terri [Coates, the midwifery adviser] about the different stages of labour, and I watched people giving birth on YouTube. They haven't been edited too much, and it's pretty difficult to watch! But the women have no inhibitions and they are very inspiring."

When it came to filming day, Main admits she was pretty nervous. "I was worried I would be embarrassed doing a birth scene. But the crew was very supportive and of course Jenny [Agutter, who plays Sister Julienne] and Stephen [McGann, who plays Shelagh's husband Dr Turner] were amazing. And women who are giving birth go into a zone, don't they? You block it all out and just go for it. It was a very memorable day. After all, I started on the show as Sister Bernadette, a nun who thought she was infertile. And here I am as midwife Shelagh giving birth.

"It was just lovely. And nice for me as an actress to play another massive aspect of life. It makes me want to have a baby of my own."

An audience with Dame Joan

Michael Buerk dares to ask the starlet who never grew up about money, politics – and ageing

Joan Collins is not in the best of moods. Her London flat has been flooded and developers are turning Belgravia into Bedlam, according to her Twitter feed. She can't go to her other home in New York, or the one in Hollywood, or even her villa outside St Tropez, because she has to plug her latest film, The Time of Their Lives. And that means she has to tolerate whippersnappers like me asking questions she thinks are either inane or unacceptable. Questions like, "Has age made you calmer?"

"Certainly not. Not when my fing ceiling's fallen down."

I should have known. I should have known not to chew the end of my glasses (she's making me nervous). "Why are you doing that? Have you got an itchy mouth?"

I should have known not to make much of her age, even though she's nearly 84, and it's the point of the movie we're discussing. "Everybody's so incredibly ageist in this country! Anyway, how old are you?" Seventy, as it happens. "What have you got that's wrong with you?"

Things aren't going well and I'm heartbroken. The only other time we met she came hurtling across the baggage hall at Nice airport, pressed me to her bosom, and told me, breathily, how much she admired me. I nearly fainted. I was still trying to get pictures from the airport CCTV months afterwards. This time, I have invested in a selfie stick. I never get a chance to use it.

She doesn't look bad for a woman born on the very day Hitler took absolute power in Germany in 1933. I would never dare think that normally, let alone say it, but Dame Joan has made several fortunes out of still being considered glamorous after a quarter of a century as a pensioner. She's sold 50 million books, container-loads of Timeless Beauty cosmetics, and whole warehouses of wigs – "now you can look gorgeous morning, noon and night".

She's dolled up to the nine-and-a-halfs, the raven hair is buoyantly bouffed, the trademark scarlet lips for the most part tight with disapproval. I would tell you more but I'm half-blinded by the light reflecting off her truly staggering amounts of jewellery. And, anyway, I'm too busy apologising for being here.

She's certainly glamorous, but it's been a very long time since her mother had to hang a notice on her pram saying "Do Not Kiss". The Rank starlet became a Hollywood beauty, then a brand and finally a phenomenon, well on her way to being the world's first centenarian vamp.

She's good at playing divas. She's at it again in The Time of Their Lives, playing Joan Collins, or at least an aged Hollywood star whose fading glamour is shored up with weapons-grade cosmetics, but whose spirit is undimmed. Her character, Helen, escapes from an old folks’ home to go to the funeral of an ex-husband with the help of a downtrodden frump called Priscilla (Pauline Collins – no relation – playing Shirley Valentine again). The film’s trying to press so many buttons it’s difficult to tell whether it’s a comedy or a tragedy. It would be a road movie if it went anywhere; a feel-good film if it weren’t so busy pelting you with pathos. It will probably be a huge success – “oldies on the lam” plays well with my generation.

CALL ME A VAMP
As Fontaine in The Bitch (top) based on her sister Jackie's novel; and (above) as Helen in The Time of Their Lives

‘I’m not exactly rich... I’ve a lifestyle to support’

I wonder aloud what drives her – “after all, you’re rich”. She bridles. “What’s rich?” she snaps. I would say four homes all worth several million, and a personal fortune, according to the papers, of $30 million. If I had the nerve. “I’m not exactly rich, no. Rich, as Robert Wagner said to me, is having f-you money. I don’t have that and I’ve a lifestyle to support.”

I ask her if, like the character she plays, she might be looking for a last adventure? To squeeze a bit more out of life before the curtain comes down? “Is that a question? You’re bumbling! I am a big squeezer of life. I couldn’t squeeze more out than I do.” Five marriages and a romantic life delicately described as “vivid” probably proves her point.

Desperate now, I turn to politics. She’s smart and opinionated, though when I say so she treats it as a slur. She’s said Donald Trump was an inspiration for her most famous character, Alexis in the 80s soap Dynasty.

“Are you a fan of Trump?”

“I don’t know.”

She was, for a time, a very public supporter of Ukip, wrote articles advocating Brexit, and has been quoted as saying “this tiny island” is going to “sink into the sea because of immigration”.

“Are you pleased with the way things are going in Britain?”

“I don’t know.”

I’ve been told I only have 40 minutes with Dame Joan but that’s beginning to feel like a fortnight. I ask her what she thinks about her father, who famously said she would be washed up at 23, now she’s still a star in her mid-80s.

“I’ve done well.”

It’s all down to exercise, she says, unbuttoning a fraction, and instructs me to do some “or you’ll be all bent over and won’t reach 80”. What exercises does she do? “I’m not going to tell you.”

A decided chill falls on the room. Finally, I ask her how she would like to be remembered. “As somebody who gave a lot of people a lot of pleasure.” “Of course,” I say. And with that, 20 minutes early, the audience is over.

No ordinary boy

Meet the 11-year-old refugee who crossed continents alone

Eleven-year-old Emran should be at school. Should be with his mum and dad and younger siblings enjoying a peace apparently secured in his native Afghanistan by Allied forces. Instead this boy with an ever-present smile and unquenchable spirit is on the road, navigating his own way across southern and mainland Europe because, as he puts it very matter-of-factly, "The Taliban started killing children as they walked to school, so my father sent me to Europe."

Imagine that. Aged just 11 and "sent" by his parents on a journey that would take him from Iran to Turkey, across the sea to Greece and then through a continent pockmarked with danger from kidnappers and smugglers and populated with people weary and wary of those like him – refugees.

Film-maker Jamie Roberts (The Jihadis Next Door) first met Emran at a camp in Idomeni on the Greek-Macedonian border early last year. He wanted to tell the story of child refugees, but the crossing had just been closed and the boy's search for sanctuary in Germany appeared to be thwarted. "He'd already been through an awful time, but he was a ray of light," says Roberts. "He just stood out. He had perfect English – much of which he'd picked up on the road – and this huge smile. I had to keep reminding myself that he's only 11."

But desire breeds resourcefulness and money from home, wired to a Western Union bureau that had sprung up in the camp to feed a need for euros, meant that Emran and the small group he was travelling with could buy the services of smugglers.

Roberts says: "The most valuable thing to the refugees is their phone. It not only enables them to stay in touch with their families but also, more importantly, with the smugglers, who help them along what has become a well-trodden route. The whole route is lined with people exploiting the refugees. Everyone is making money from them."

Roberts was also following two other children – 12-year-olds Hussein, also from Afghanistan, and Rawan, travelling from Aleppo in Syria with her mother, father and four siblings. The moment when the GPS on Rawan's phone reveals that they have crossed from Austria into Germany will melt the coldest of hearts.

Six months after leaving his parents in Afghanistan, Emran, too, made it to Germany, where he was reunited with his older brother who made the same journey two years earlier. He is now in high school and thriving. "It's kind of a miracle that any of them made it. But Emran always seemed like the one who had that ingenuity and wit to do it. He adores Afghanistan and misses it and one day he wants to go back and work as a doctor. But he loves Germany as well. He already speaks brilliant German and brilliant English [he narrates Roberts's film]. He just soaks it up. I am in complete awe of him."

Roberts crisscrossed mainland Europe to document the three separate journeys of his refugee subjects. Did any of them – or any others he encountered along the way – speak of a desire to come to the UK?

"They would love to come here, because they know the language and respect the culture. But they also know how difficult and dangerous it is to get here. Also, they have no interest in sitting in a camp for months on end. They want to get integrated as quickly as possible and start their future. Germany has offered them that hope."

Roberts also has a hope: that his film will make a difference to how we view child refugees.

"Go to Germany and if you're British you will be questioned about why we are so horrible to refugees. Emran is one of tens of thousands of unaccompanied children seeking refuge in Europe. He's a number, a statistic. And all we want to do is provide a face and a story to that statistic."

For Emran, that story is just beginning. "I speak with my parents every day. Dad has told me to work hard and make him proud." TERRY PAYNE

Scruffts: Britain's Favourite Dog
Friday 8.00pm Channel 4

Fleur has nearly died three times in her six-year life. After being abandoned, the border collie cross was caught by dog catchers in the Romanian capital Bucharest in 2014 and taken to a shelter, where a spaying operation went drastically wrong. She was sewn up with string and her intestines were severely damaged, leaving her barely breathing.

Animal rescue organisation Valgrays brought her over to the UK a year later to live with Wendy Morris, who already had two rescue dogs from the charity. Three weeks later Fleur collapsed and had to have more than 60cm of her intestine removed. The vet suggested she was unlikely to survive and should be put down.

But Wendy found a specialist vet at the Royal Veterinary College in London and set up a fundraising page on Facebook to get the £10,000 needed for Fleur's treatment. After a five-hour operation involving three vets, and a fortnight in intensive care, Fleur went home to Hampshire.

So how did a dog that was so abused and unwell make it into the final of Britain's biggest dog show? Fleur will be shown off to judges in the main arena at Crufts, surrounded by glossy, purebred pooches. Except that she's actually competing in an offshoot of the dog show called

'Fleur's operation took three vets five hours'

Scruffts, which began in earnest in 2001, giving everyday dogs and their owners a chance to shine. While Crufts is a parade of Dandie Dinmont terriers and Afghan hounds bred to very high standards, Scruffts is full of loveable mongrels like those you see in your local park.

Fleur has already won the Best Rescue category and is now vying for the ultimate Scruffts prize: Family Crossbreed of the Year. She'll be going up against the winners in the categories Child's Best Friend, Good Citizen Dog Scheme, Most Handsome Dog, Prettiest Bitch and Golden Oldie – all of which are featured in the panel overleaf.

"This is the opportunity for dogs who don't go to normal competitions to get some recognition," says one of this year's judges, David Guy. "Scruffts puts a real emphasis on the fact that despite not being pedigree, a dog can be brilliant as a member of the family. The most important thing is that the animal is healthy, happy and in super condition. It's not just about appearance, it's about the overall health of the animal. There's room for everybody in the dog world."

As a documentary about the competition airs this week, it's clear TV is having a dog moment, with a swathe of shows about our most popular pets begging for our attention on screen. ▷

IS YOUR DOG A CHAMPION?

Scruffts judge David Guy reveals what makes a winner

◁ Over the years, Crufts has often been overshadowed by controversy over how pedigree dogs are being bred, with accusations that breeders prioritise looks over the health of the dog. So it's tempting to see Scruffts as an antidote to this, a competition where happy, healthy dogs rule. In reality, crossbreeds can have similar health problems to pedigree dogs – but Scruffts doesn't focus on breeds, which means the dogs that enter are ordinary mongrels of all types, ages, shapes and sizes.

So how does Crufts feel about its scruffier cousin? "The dog-show world does have a slightly mixed view of it," says Caroline Kisko, Secretary of the Kennel Club. "Those who are more purist will have the view that perhaps they shouldn't be there, but there will be plenty of others who own scruffy dogs themselves or simply love all dogs and think it's a great idea to have them there."

For Fleur's owner, the very existence of Scruffts was a joyful surprise. "When I found out I thought it would be fun and a lovely way to bond even more with Fleur," says Morris. "At the semi-finals, she walked on, waggy tailed, and sat there very calmly. She even let the judges stroke her tummy, which she loved, and she was put through to the final."

'The dog-show world has a mixed view of Scruffts'

Despite such a traumatic start to life, Fleur is an affectionate and trusting pet. "Considering what she's been through, she's amazingly playful," says Morris. "There are occasions where there's a loud noise or a really tall man might approach her and she'll cower – but I can read those clues. She's brilliant with my grandchildren.

"Fleur made it because she's a dog that wasn't willing to die and is now walking, running and playing like any normal family dog. She was this dirty, yellow, scared, unwell animal and now look at her – she's in the final. It just goes to show: never give up on a dog." KASIA DELGADO AND SARAH CARSON

THE CONTENDERS

The six Scruffts finalists are already winners in their own category and will now be going up against each other for the ultimate Scruffts prize, Family Crossbreed of the Year. Here are Fleur's rivals...

MOST HANDSOME DOG ▶ Monique Nerman and her dog King Tommy, who she rescued from India. He'd had boiling water thrown on him and was tied to a pole and starving.

GOOD CITIZEN DOG SCHEME Fourteen-year-old Joshua King and his German shepherd/border collie cross Biscuit.

◀ GOLDEN OLDIE Sarah Atkins and her dog Vinny, a 12-year-old terrier/Jack Russell cross. "He's very agile for his age. He's got a few grey hairs coming on now but has all his own teeth..."

PRETTIEST BITCH Judy Rigby and her cavalier/poodle/bichon cross Ginny.

▼ CHILD'S BEST FRIEND Twelve-year-old Grace Mead and her pug/beagle cross Bonnie. "All children would be better off if they had a dog," says Grace. "I get to spend so much time with my best friend. Normal dogs can't enter Crufts because they're not pedigrees but they're just as amazing as show dogs." KD

The birth of a nation

The Last Kingdom isn't just furs and fury – it offers a powerful message for our times

Dark Age drama is having a moment. From Game of Thrones and Vikings to Beowulf: Return to the Shieldlands, hairy, scary warriors are rampaging across the schedules. This week sees the return to BBC2 of The Last Kingdom, the acclaimed blood-feud-and-bearskins saga adapted from the first two of Bernard Cornwell's bestselling Saxon Stories.

Series two opens, pleasingly, with Uhtred, son of Uhtred (Alexander Dreymon) sprawled on a bed of furs. Sleep, however, is not the warrior's friend. Uhtred has places to go, people to kill. There's barely time to tighten his ponytail before galloping north to his ancestral lands.

"It's gonna be epic," promises Dreymon. "It's like the whole drama just got bigger." Shorn of Uhtred's shaggy up-do, in jeans and leather jacket, today he seems oddly domesticated, like a wolfhound in a bandana. Uhtred's hair, he admits, is just too much bother, and he marvels at the grooming stamina of ninth-century Danes. "We know they took their look very seriously – tweezers and combs were found in Viking graves. The warriors would file their teeth down to make them pointy, use kohl to make their eyes look darker and red pigment on their teeth to make them look bloody."

David Dawson, who stars alongside Dreymon as the Saxon King Alfred, loves the show's interplay of fact and fantasy: "I'm a total history geek, and Alfred is just this endlessly interesting character; he was huge, for example, on education and believed passionately that the working classes should be literate.

"I also love the fact that 'our' Alfred is not just some monarch whose word is law – he's created this think-tank called the Witan, which is essentially the first parliament, and he achieves his aim though democracy and diplomacy. I think this is really what scares his enemies – he's not your big stocky champion on horseback – he's someone who thinks carefully about how to manipulate his enemy, like it's a giant game of chess."

On and off screen, Dreymon (American Horror Story) and Dawson (Ripper Street, Peaky Blinders) make an odd couple. Dreymon, German-born and French-educated, is the epitome of laid-back Euro-cool; Dawson, natty in tweeds, is slight and sharp as a blade.

"My favourite scenes are the ones between Uhtred and Alfred," says Dreymon. "It's totally a bromance between them. The way David plays Alfred, he's this very frail and delicate character, but at the same time he has a steely inner strength, he's the rock in a tumultuous sea. Meanwhile, Uhtred is running round doing his thing – he's the unpredictable element in the story."

Dawson adds, "Basically, both men hate that they need the other to achieve their goals, and it gets very intense between them. I went to the gym the other day, and somebody came up to me and said, 'I love The Last Kingdom so much, but stop being such a dick to Uhtred!' I take his point, but I prefer to think of it as tough love."

The collision of two moral universes – Arthur is Christian, Uhtred resolutely pagan – gives The Last Kingdom heft beyond exceptional production values and intricacies of plot. It takes a few episodes, for example, to get your head round the fact that, for the Danes, slaughter is practically a sacred act.

"It's a moral code that coincides less with ours today," Dreymon acknowledges. "Though certain aspects of Uhtred's world view are, in a way, saner than ours. Not the business of going out and killing 50 people before breakfast – but in a world where every day could be your last, it kind of makes sense to be less self-punishing about living your life and enjoying it."

ON EQUAL TERMS

At a time when nationalism and nationhood are high on the global news agenda, both actors admire The Last Kingdom's vision of a blended tribe: "Alfred's real dream is to create an identity for his people," says Dawson. "This whole series is basically about what it means to be English, and if you look at our history, we've always been a multicultural society. It wasn't just the Saxons and the Danes – you've got Angles, Goths, Normans... all these separate influences that have left their mark.

"We were all on set when we heard about Brexit, and it was like a black cloud hanging over everybody's head," recalls Dreymon. "The atmosphere was palpably dire. I think it's really important, right now, to have a drama that shows how different traditions coming together makes a nation stronger."

It's possible that fans aren't just tuning in for the politics. Uhtred often peels off his jerkin to have sex on furs (well, you'd get sweaty) and, with the decapitation of his prophetess lover Iseult at the end of series one, he's currently in need of comfort.

There's a game ex-nun in the picture, and a flame still burns for his old companion-in-arms, Brida (Emily Cox).

"There's this immense love between Uhtred and Brida that never gets lost, it just changes ▷

‘This whole series is about what it means to be English’

Day 2 York

Enjoy a guided walking tour of York, seeing the magnificent Minster and the quaint Shambles. Following the tour you are free. The National Railway Museum (entry free) should not be missed. For a unique view of York, walk along the 13th century city walls.

Day 3 North Yorkshire

We take the train across the North Yorkshire Moors to Whitby, travelling in heritage carriages through the breathtaking North York Moors. Crowned by its brooding abbey, and famous as the setting for Bram Stoker's Dracula, Whitby boasts some of the UK's finest fish and chip restaurants. Enjoy free time here to explore.

Day 4 Oxenhope

Enjoy a nostalgic journey on the heritage Keighley & Worth Valley Railway. The steam-hauled* trip takes you up the Worth Valley to Oxenhope, passing the rugged hills, rustic stone cottages and wild farmland immortalised in the 1970 film 'The Railway Children'. Later, continue to picturesque Haworth. Here you visit the Brontë Parsonage, the home of the famous literary sisters. It was here that the Brontës were inspired to write their novels.

Day 5 York

After breakfast you are free to depart at your leisure.

Steam-hauled wherever possible.*

On selected departures you can experience this tour whilst based in Harrogate. Prices may vary. Please call for details.

The Isle of Man

This superb tour includes three full days of varied excursions to the island's quaint towns, pretty fishing ports and breathtakingly picturesque coastline on the different historic railways.

Day 1 To Douglas

Meet in Heysham, Lancashire, for the ferry to the Isle of Man. Arriving into Douglas, you transfer to the 3* Ascot Hotel, for a five-night stay.

Day 2 Port Erin

Take the Isle of Man Steam Railway, the island's oldest rail system, to Port Erin before enjoying a scenic coach journey back to Douglas, calling at The Sound and Castletown, the island's ancient capital, along the way.

Day 3 Peel

Today's excursion is to Peel. You break the journey with a call at Tynwald Hill in St John's to see the Church of St John and the Tynwald Exhibition. In Peel you have free time. Then travel by coach along some of the famous TT race course to Ramsey. From here join the Manx Electric Railway to Douglas. At 17 miles, the railway is the British Isles' longest narrow-gauge vintage line.

Day 4 Laxey

Enjoy a horse drawn carriage ride to Manx Electric Railway station, and board the Snaefell Mountain Railway. Take the historic route to Laxey, climbing the summit of Snaefell, the island's highest peak. After arrival in Laxey, you are free to explore.

Days 5-6 At leisure and home

Today is free for you to explore the island. On Day 6 you leave Douglas for the ferry back to Heysham.

Highlands By Steam

Explore historic Edinburgh, admire the countryside of Perthshire and enjoy a traditional steam train ride through the Cairngorm Mountains as you take an unforgettable rail holiday across the Scottish Highlands.

Day 1 Edinburgh

Your Tour Manager greets you in Edinburgh at the Ibis Edinburgh Centre South Bridge, where you are free for the rest of the day.

Day 2 Blair Atholl

Enjoy a morning at leisure in Scotland's proud capital, then in the afternoon travel across the Forth Bridge to Blair Atholl, your base for four nights.

Day 3 Pitlochry

Today's excursions take you to Queen's View, one of Scotland's most famous lookouts, and Pitlochry. In the afternoon enjoy a talk and tour of Blair Castle.

Day 4 Jacobite Railway

Join the Jacobite Steam Train in Fort William for a return journey on the West Highland Line in restored carriages. The train crosses the famous Glenfinnan Viaduct, and descends towards Mallaig.

Day 5 Strathspey Railway

Take a spectacular trip on the Strathspey Steam Railway through the Cairngorms from Aviemore, following the route of the historic Highland Railway. After this nostalgic journey, continue to the Cairngorm Mountain Railway, Scotland's only funicular railway, for a thrilling ride to the summit station at more than 3,500ft above sea level.

Day 6 Edinburgh

Return by train to Edinburgh where your tour concludes. Before departing you may like to explore this fine city one last time.

◁ character," says Dreymon. "They start out almost as brother and sister, then they become lovers, enemies, allies, but always she's his equal."

Powerful women abound in The Last Kingdom and are entirely credible (it's thought that up to 50 per cent of Viking warriors were female). And, for all the "humping" (the series writers' preferred, if etymologically dubious, term), female characters are also celebrated for their minds.

"Alfred's daughter, Aethelflaed, is going to play a major part in the new series," reveals Dawson. "She was a fiercely intelligent woman – Arthur trained her up as a kind of mirror image of himself – and she later became ruler of Mercia. We don't hear much about her now, but she was a real legend, and I've really enjoyed seeing the rise of this fantastic woman in our story."

Good citizenship, it's fair to say, takes a nose-dive in the battle scenes, but if violence in The Last Kingdom is extreme, Dreymon argues that it is, at least, accurate. "We had people on set who know a freakishly scary amount of information about how someone would behave if they had a sword through the heart, or if they were hamstrung, or stabbed in the stomach… where the blood would appear, how long it would take them to die.

"In the second series we really tried to make it more realistic – not to make it more violent, but just to take the gloss off it. I wouldn't want to be part of a show that showed violence for the sake of it – and I don't honestly think we do that – it's just where the story goes."

'We wanted to show how grim and grubby this world was'

Dawson agrees: "We never wanted to do those kind of gung-ho 'shields at the ready and slaps on the back' kind of battle scenes. We wanted to show how grim and grubby this world was, and I think the very dark humour that runs through the series makes you feel that violence is something that happens daily in these people's lives."

It's 15 months since the first series aired, and a third series is a big commitment for young actors. Dreymon is now based in Los Angeles; Dawson prefers "grim old London", where he can work in theatre. Would they sign up for another roll in the mud?

"Like a shot," says Dawson, while Dreymon points out that there are many more books to go in Bernard Cornwell's original series. "And I miss everyone terribly when we're not shooting." He just needs a bit of notice so he can start growing his hair. E JANE DICKSON

RAIN OF TERROR
Extras on location try to keep dry between takes

FOREVER ENGLAND

Looking to re-create the Dark Ages in Wessex? Then head east – to Hungary…

I'm sick of building Saxon barns, I'm sick of mud, I'm sick of killing the grass." Martyn John, The Last Kingdom's production designer, is joking, but his laughter has a mildly maniacal edge. Small wonder, after a gruelling seven-month shoot. But at least the efforts of John (whose previous work ranges from Foyle's War to The White Queen) and his team look like paying off. As we squelch our way through the mud, dung and straw, it's hard to deny that the set looks, feels and even smells pretty authentic. No one watching would be under any illusions that life in ninth-century England was tough.

The main set of The Last Kingdom spans about eight acres just outside Budapest in Hungary, owned by Korda Studios and used to film period and fantasy dramas including Sky's costume romp The Borgias, the Ken Follett adaptation World without End and Emerald City, the recent reimagining of The Wizard of Oz.

Recycling, it becomes clear, is essential. Not just of general items (although I see little 21st-century litter during my tour), but of entire sets, with Winchester doubling as York, Leeds, Northampton and assorted other conurbations in Wessex and East Anglia. With a few tweaks, some canny camera angles and the many ginnels and alleyways around the walled city, it's hard to see the joins. John is even the sort of heathen who will happily re-dress a cathedral as a pagan meeting hall if it services the series.

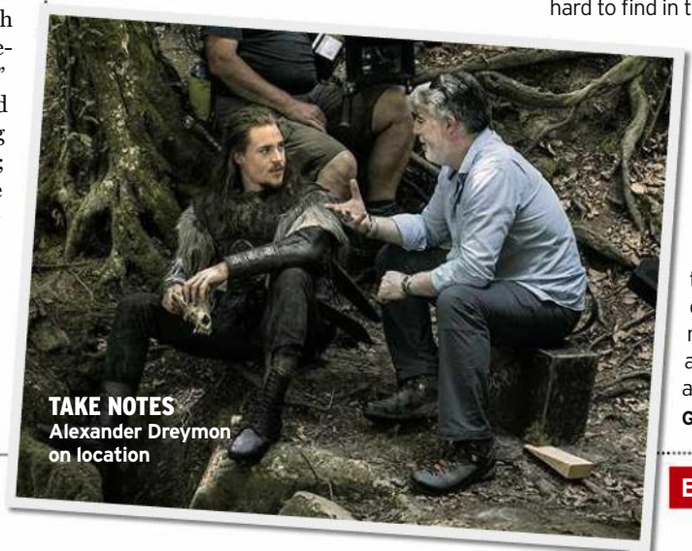

The story also once again takes to the seas, when Uhtred is enslaved on a Viking longship: a conundrum for a production at the heart of a landlocked country. While authenticity is the watchword for John and his team, green screen was deployed for some seabound sequences that were, in fact, shot in the studio car park.

For the rest, John used the site's man-made lake. A few hundred metres away, meanwhile, is a seemingly redundant bog that was repurposed as a marshland village in the first series at a cost of £30,000 (John estimates the equivalent in the UK would have cost five times as much).

E4's The Aliens, Sky's upcoming Roman invasion epic Britannia and the BBC's Robin Hood are just a few to have joined The Last Kingdom in filming there. Part of the reason is budgetary, as construction costs are much cheaper, but there are aesthetic benefits, too.

"For The Last Kingdom," says one of the series directors, Jon East, who also filmed ITV's Maigret revival in Budapest, "Hungary offers many unspoilt acres of un-farmed and un-bordered grassland and forest. These are hard to find in the UK, where walls and fences fragment the landscape, clearly announcing that it is not a ninth-century world. It's cheaper to shoot abroad in a 'virgin' landscape than it is to digitally remove all the trappings of the 21st-century in post-production. The same goes for Maigret: Budapest is easier to transform into 1950s Paris than either Paris itself or any other major UK city, because there are fewer and smaller unspoilt architectural areas."

Best 21st century drama

Vote for your No 1

Pick your favourite contemporary drama – and win tickets to the BFI & RT TV Festival

1 Appropriate Adult

Dominic West (right) and Monica Dolan froze the blood as serial killers Fred and Rosemary West, in a true-life drama that stuck closely to their shocking statements to police. (ITV, 2011)

2 Bodies

The most gruesome medical drama of all time: Jed Mercurio's angry portrait of a rogue obstetrician shattered our ideals about saintly, trustworthy doctors. (BBC3, 2004)

3 Clocking Off

Paul Abbott's loosely linked stories of Manchester factory workers put ordinary characters into dramas with a satisfying Play for Today neatness. (BBC1, 2000)

4 Cucumber

A follow-up, of sorts, to Queer as Folk: Russell T Davies portrayed the aftermath of a middle-aged couple's split with profound, devastating honesty. (C4, 2015)

5 Doctor Foster

The sleeper hit of 2015. Audiences became entranced by Suranne Jones as a GP apparently wronged by adultery – or worse. (BBC1, 2015)

6 Last Tango in Halifax

Two pensioners bringing their clans together by finding love late in life was the catalyst for a nimble drama about class, families and whether people can change. (BBC1, 2012)

7 London Spy

A stunning melding of style and story saw Ben Whishaw's plucky, vulnerable young loner cast into a hellish game by the death of his mysterious lover. (BBC2, 2015)

8 Murdered by My Boyfriend

9 The Night Manager

Spy thrillers were never classier. Tom Hiddleston's mole and Hugh Laurie's evil arms dealer danced an intricate ballet of death in a faultless le Carré dramatisation. (BBC1, 2016)

Best 21st century drama

10 Ordinary Lies

There was much, much more to the staff of two "ordinary" workplaces than met the eye, in a series of nicely interlinked fables about fallible everyday folk. (BBC1, 2015)

11 Skins

A great teen drama, yes, but the early series were simply great drama. Skins (above) didn't just know what teens did. It knew what they were thinking and feeling. (E4, 2007)

12 Spooks

Spies protected Britain, themselves and each other in a series that was unafraid to kill its best characters when we least expected it – in spectacular fashion. (BBC1, 2002)

13 The Honourable Woman

Most dramatists wouldn't dare touch Israel/Palestine; Hugo Blick dived in with a layered, sophisticated thriller, led by the coolly measured Maggie Gyllenhaal. (BBC2, 2014)

14 The Street

15 This Is England 86

The first of three series conjured northern Britain at the end of the 80s: a changing, harsh place, as experienced by a group of friends trying to stick together through good times and very bad times. (C4, 2010)

16 Doc Martin

Martin Clunes was the rude, blood-phobic ex-surgeon working as a GP in Cornwall, in an escapist comedy drama that was funnier and sharper than its detractors allowed. (ITV, 2004)

17 Fresh Meat

Almost a sitcom, but hour-long episodes let us get to know and love a house full of blundering students, as well as laugh at their faltering efforts to be adults. (C4, 2011)

18 Marvellous

Toby Jones drove Peter Bowker's immensely heart-warming biography of Neil "Nello" Baldwin: Stoke City kit man, friend of the stars and incorrigible optimist. (BBC2, 2014)

19 Shameless

With David Threlfall in overdrive as alcoholic patriarch Frank Gallagher, the council-estate comedy drama was a scabrous walk on Britain's wild side. (C4, 2004)

20 Unforgiven

Suranne Jones announced herself as an A-list star playing a woman desperately seeking redemption, in yet another Sally Wainwright masterpiece. (ITV, 2009)

HOW TO VOTE

Vote online at radiotimes.com/bestdramapoll. Voting for best contemporary drama closes on 17 March.

This is the fourth shortlist in our Best 21st Century Drama poll. The others – foreign language and sci-fi – will be revealed next week in RT. You may vote once in each category. The winning show from each group will go into a final shortlist, from which the overall winner will be crowned. The shortlists include only dramas that began in 2000 or after, and were drawn up by RT experts.

WIN TICKETS TO THE BFI & RADIO TIMES TELEVISION FESTIVAL

Everyone who votes will be in with a chance to win TWO GOLDEN TICKETS to the BFI and RT Television Festival, which allow entry into all events across the weekend, plus a celebrity goodie bag.

Wild man

He loves danger – but Steve Backshall is glad he's not a woman in the Dani tribe

Fame. It's a fickle thing. Mobbed in Morocco, largely anonymous in America. But breezy TV action man Steve Backshall takes it all in his intrepid stride. "The warmth you get from being recognised is nice, but it's good to be invisible as well," he laughs.

Backshall has just returned from a sell-out three-month speaking tour of Australia, Singapore and India with his new wife, gold medal-winning Olympic rower Helen Glover. His huge popularity is due in no small measure to the BBC children's series Deadly 60. It's been sold to 157 countries worldwide including Australia, where he seems to have filled a vacuum created by the death of Steve Irwin in 2006.

"Steve is still a massive hero in Australia, and every single show that I do out there I get compared with him." Is he flattered? Irwin was, after all, a fairly controversial figure among wildlife experts because of the boisterous way he engaged with animals. "I'm fairly pragmatic. There's no doubt that the programmes Steve made had more of an impact on how people perceive reptiles, crocodilians and snakes than any other work that had gone before."

Backshall is also big in Papua, Indonesia, the setting for his latest TV adventure, in which he attempts to navigate a treacherous, previously unexplored river. He speaks the language pretty fluently, having visited before, so wasn't too perplexed when invited to spend the night sleeping with the 200-year-old mummified corpse of a celebrated warrior chief.

"He would originally have been smoked over a fire for six months with his knees clenched into his chest and it's a pretty eerie sight. He has all of his skin, like black leather, drawn back across his bones. I wouldn't say I slept, but I spent the entire night pretty much alongside him. It was a very strange experience."

The much-travelled Backshall is no stranger to bizarre tribal rituals, many of them troubling to our western sensitivities. The Dani tribe, for instance, mourn the loss of family by chopping off the ends of their fingers. At least, that's what the women have to do.

'Bereaved women have to chop off their fingers'

"Yes, the attitude towards women is appalling. They do absolutely all the work while the men sit around on their backsides, smoking cigarettes, and there are these awful practices where bereaved women have to remove their own digits or parts of their ears, and men don't have to do any of that. But you can't go into these villages with a full-on, forceful, modern sensibility, because you will learn nothing, you will offend everyone, and actually there is so much to be gained from their cultures that I think we're losing from our own, such as the respect they have for their elders, who are the most respected members of the tribe."

Backshall left the Dani to continue his white-water river odyssey not just with their blessing but also encouragement to take many wives. "I haven't mentioned that bit to Helen," he laughs. "I'm not sure she would approve. And anyway, I have more than enough with my one wife!"

The 43-year-old admits that he and 30-year-old Glover are already at a bit of a crossroads early on in their marriage – whether to pursue their all-consuming careers or take their foot off the pedal and settle down and have children.

"Helen hasn't quite decided yet whether she wants to continue with the rowing. She's absolutely at the pinnacle of her sport and it's going to be very hard for her to be away from that. So I think we'll have a few more months, possibly up to a year, and then we'll decide."

In the meantime, this Easter they're going to kayak 125 miles from Devizes to Westminster in under 24 hours to raise money to help buy and save a bit of the Borneo rainforest – that's the real value of fame.

COUNTRY FAN
Comedian
Rich Hall

Country music isn't all pick-up trucks and halter tops – and it's big in Britain, says Rich Hall

Something strange and banjo-shaped has taken hold of British music fans. First there was Radio 2 and DJ Bob Harris's steadfast helping of twang on Thursdays; next the explosive ascension of US sweetheart Taylor Swift; then came megawatt musical melodrama Nashville. Before we knew it, we were under country music's spell.

This weekend, for the fifth year in a row, tens of thousands of fans will descend upon London's O_2, as its stages are invaded by the brightest stars in the southern states for the C2C Country to Country festival, which will be celebrated on a pop-up digital station, Radio 2 Country.

"A lot of different forces have fused together to create this moment," says Bob Harris, who comperes the festival. "It's been amazing over the past three or four years to see artists like Kacey Musgraves move into the mainstream. American artists love to play to a British crowd, and they tell me that, over here, we go deeper into an album than any other listeners," he says.

It's not just American artists dominating the charts: a British country scene is rising with the Shires, a Bedfordshire-Hertfordshire duo, shining a light on the phenomenon in a BBC4 documentary this Friday. On the same night, US comedian Rich Hall traces country's Appalachian, blues and Celtic roots, before heading to the genre's heartlands, of Nashville, Tennessee, and Austin, Texas, to explore how the music scene differs in the two cities.

'Kacey Musgraves is better than Taylor Swift'
RICH HALL

You won't be surprised to learn that Hall has his own take on the state of country music – and he's no fan of the "formulaic, guy in a cowboy hat, singing about pick-up trucks" that, he says, most UK listeners are probably used to.

"Nashville's a great city and has its charms, but lots of the music doesn't come from any real emotional centre. In Austin, they're not focused on being a factory for hits – they celebrate individuality and artistic endeavour, as opposed to commodity."

"It used to be that the rural lifestyle created the music. Now it's the other way around. People sing what the audience want to hear, and it seems every song on the radio goes, 'If I could drink a beer with Jesus…' It's ridiculous – first of all, Jesus drank wine, if he drank anything! Lots of the biggest stars in country aren't really the blue-collar people they claim to be – and music should appeal to listeners who identify with the lyrics, more than the singer. If you want to sit and listen to someone tell real, authentic musical stories, you'll realise country isn't all just pick-up trucks and halter tops."

So what should we be listening to? "Nashville always has to have its darlings – and at the moment it's Kacey Musgraves. She's 28, and brings in a new, young audience like Taylor Swift did before her, and that's always good for music. But she's a better songwriter than Taylor – her music sounds older, it's more progressive and more literate. She's one of my favourite female singers. And if you talk to people in the know, they'll tell you Chris Stapleton is the next big thing. He's the real deal."

RISING STAR
Kacey Musgraves is bringing in a young audience

If you're new to country, Hall suggests turning first to the greats, then, "if you like Dolly Parton, listen to Matraca Berg, or the Quebe Sisters – incredible harmonists. And if you love Johnny Cash, try troubadour types like Sturgill Simpson, Hayes Carll, Chris Knight and Slaid Cleaves."

But, like Harris, Hall isn't surprised country music is experiencing its moment in the spotlight on this side of the pond. "Country is about the roots of everyone's existence – it can be either really light and translucent, or very dark. It wasn't created in a big city in a studio; it was created out in farms and fields and on front porches when people had to entertain themselves. That's what lots of it still celebrates – it hasn't really ever got away from its essence."

Both Hall and Harris agree: the genre is diverse, and from rhinestone-clad divas to traditional bluegrass beats, we Brits are doffing our Stetsons and embracing country rhythms like never before. SARAH CARSON

When horses fly

Forget the jockeys and the craic – at Cheltenham the horses are the stars of the show, says Simon Barnes

Cheltenham Festival
Tue, Wed, Thu, Fri 1.00pm ITV

Have you ever sat on a horse while it leapt over a fence? It's the nearest you will ever get to owning a pair of wings. Just to hop over a pole or two is a kind of miracle, and to take a heftier jump at speed and land safe and fast – well, that's pretty much like entering the vaults of heaven. For every rider, every horse that was ever foaled is Pegasus.

And that's what the Cheltenham Festival is all about. Horses, that is. Horses and leaping. Any other way of understanding the Festival misses the point. It's not about Ireland, and it's not about Anglo-Irish rivalry, though such things play their part. (After all, this is England's annual four-day festival of Irish envy: many English Festival-goers genuinely believe that good craic is directly related to the amount of Guinness you drink.)

But it's not all about drink, and it's not all about betting either, although a fair amount of both of those things goes on. My belief is that betting is a safe way of flying. It's the closest you can get to that heart-stopping mixture of fear and exhilaration that comes in the take-off stride without actually leaving the ground.

We'll hear a lot about and a lot from the jockeys and trainers, of course, and great people they often are, too. We listen to them for one very good reason: they can talk. But it's not about them, either. They are no more the stars than the best boy or chief grip are the stars of your favourite film.

Cheltenham Festival is about horses; it's great because it takes the best horses and tests them in the most searching and satisfying way. Everything else that happens is a by-product of the utter fabulousness of horses in general, and these horses in particular.

My favourite Cheltenham horse of all time is Istabraq, who won the Champion Hurdle three times. Hurdlers race over comparatively flimsy, yielding obstacles, so a hurdle race is about speed and agility. Istabraq was master at that long, low, rather swooping kind of leap that characterises the very best kind of hurdlers. And he was all speed, that horse: so wired up it seemed that he might vanish in a puff of smoke if you startled him.

'Jumping a fence on a horse is the nearest you will ever get to owning a pair of wings'

I met him once at Ballydoyle. After a horrible interview with his trainer, the great but cripplingly shy Aidan O'Brien, which was tooth-pullingly painful for us both, O'Brien took me on a tour of his place – and it was great. In his 4x4, freed from the burden of eye contact, we talked the horse talk that all horse people talk, and that revealed a horseman as sensitive and hyperaware as Istabraq himself.

And that's what it's all about: great horses and the human affinity for such animals. I remember the first triumph of Best Mate in the Gold Cup, trained by the brilliant ex-schoolteacher, Henrietta Knight; I remember the lone win of the dearly beloved grey, Desert Orchid; I remember the ludicrously improbable victory of Norton's Coin, winning at the Cup 100-1 after his trainer Sirrell Griffiths had got up to milk the cows on the day of the race.

Which horse will we remember from this year? In a way, the answer's the same as it is every year – all of them. Here's an old Arab proverb: the wind of heaven is that which blows between a horse's ears.

True-life crime stories are all the rage… but Room dares to be different, says Andrew Collins

Crime does pay

Room
Saturday 9.00pm C4

In April 2008, Josef Fritzl was detained by police after he took 19-year-old Kerstin to the local hospital in Amstetten, Lower Austria, for medical attention.

The arrest, it transpired, was because he was her father and grandfather. A serial abuser and rapist, he fathered seven children – including Kerstin – with his daughter Elisabeth, whom he kept captive in a cellar for 24 years from when she was 18. Though a psychiatrist diagnosed him as having schizoid personality disorder, he was sentenced to life imprisonment in March 2009. In June 2013, the basement was filled with concrete.

Although the Fritzl case, one of the most horrific and lurid of this century, has not been dramatised for TV or film, it was the inspiration for Emma Donoghue's Booker-shortlisted novel Room, which itself became the source of the multi-Oscar-nominated film by director Lenny Abrahamson. Relocated to Akron, Ohio, it is categorically not a Fritzl movie. What Donoghue was interested in was the relationship between a kidnapped woman, her captor, and the son she had in a basement with him.

As such, Room is anything but true crime. Instead, it's an emotional story about the mother–son bond, albeit set against a horrific backdrop and with a driving thriller element, as mum Brie Larson and her five-year-old (an astonishing Jacob Tremblay) plot to escape. The Fritzl surrogate, whose face is hardly shown, is identified only by their nickname for him, "Old Nick".

'It transpired that Fritzl was her father and grandfather'

Apparently driven by the success of award-winning podcast Serial, whose legal detective work has led to appeals, true crime seems to have migrated profitably to feature-length TV. Forensic re-investigations bring life to court reports and case studies, and turn documentaries such as HBO's The Jinx (built around new testimony from accused murderer Robert Durst) and the compelling Netflix series Making a Murderer (the story of Steven Avery, wrongfully imprisoned for attempted murder) into unexpected hits.

But with subjects as grisly and disturbing as abduction, abuse and murder, it's easy to see why film-makers might shy away from exploiting public knowledge of famous crimes. The ghoulishly deadpan Austrian drama Michael was little seen on its release in 2011, perhaps because it fictionalised the real-life Natascha Kampusch kidnap case in a more chilling fashion. Abducted aged ten in 1998 and imprisoned in a basement for eight years, Kampusch was an Austrian schoolgirl, but in the film she becomes a he and writer/director Markus Schleinzer focuses on the obscene surrogate father–son relationship.

Recent two-part dramatisation The Moorside, based on the disappearance in 2008 of Shannon Matthews, was careful not to feature images of the nine-year-old herself and made its story about the adults caught up in the media circus.

'With things as grisly as abuse and murder, it's easy to see why film-makers shy away'

Its writer, Neil McKay, had previously put serial killer Fred West (played by Dominic West) on the screen in Appropriate Adult. But The Moorside drew ire from relatives of the families involved: Shannon's grandmother called it "sick and disgusting." She went on, "It's real life and it hasn't been ten years since it happened."

PERHAPS SHE HAS a point. For 2014 film The Face of an Angel (Sunday BBC2, not N Ireland), director Michael Winterbottom and writer Paul Viragh adapted a non-fiction account of the 2007 murder in Italy of exchange student Meredith Kercher, changing the names of the protagonists to make the drama more personal. But in the pre-publicity, it was inevitably thumbnailed as "the Amanda Knox movie" after the accused.

Ironically, with the reality fudged, it lost all its power. The more bluntly titled TV movie Amanda Knox: Murder on Trial in Italy (2011) was an upfront, dramatised account of Knox's first trial but had to add a captioned amendment to acknowledge the appeal, thus spoiling its own neat ending.

It seems there is such a thing as too soon, and as such a documentary is the only respectful way of reporting the facts of a crime. Dramatists have shown undue haste with their tabloid tales about the likes of Myra Hindley and Ian Brady, Harold Shipman, Peter Sutcliffe, Beverly Allitt, often in high-profile TV dramas, and in many cases just a few years after conviction.

But Room, which won Larson an Oscar and established her as a major star (she's in Kong: Skull Island out on Thursday 9 March), ripped a story from the headlines and turned it, against all odds, into something uplifting.

Le Carré gets angry

John le Carré dedicated this film – as he did the novel from which it was derived – to "all aid workers who lived and died giving a damn". To any list of those who gave a damn, we must surely add Le Carré's name because both in print and on screen this is probably his angriest work – the anger directed at corrupt government, big business and, more specifically, international drugs companies.

The titular character in this cleverly made political thriller-cum-love story is Ralph Fiennes, a low-level British diplomat and enthusiastic gardener in Kenya, not a man to make waves or raise a fuss until he learns that his wife, Rachel Weisz, had been found dead, murdered, in the countryside.

The couple had met and apparently fallen in love in London, although Weisz, an Amnesty activist, doesn't tell her husband that one strong reason she wanted to go to Kenya was to investigate and expose a dodgy drugs trial there. But as she goes about this business, she comes rather too close to uncovering the deeply murky secrets of a big pharmaceutical company and along with a colleague is brutally murdered.

As Fiennes sets out to uncover the whys and wherefores of his wife's death he, too, comes up against this company, which is illegally testing a new drug, supposedly to cure tuberculosis, on unsuspecting African subjects, not always with desirable results.

The story, directed with a fresh, keen eye by the Brazilian Fernando Meirelles, is told in the here and now and in flashback both in Kenya and London where, as he pursues his investigation, Fiennes comes into contact with such smooth, plausible characters as Bill Nighy, head of the Africa Desk at the Foreign Office, and Danny Huston, British High Commissioner in Nairobi. Meanwhile, Fiennes himself is in danger. He had found an incriminating report, which Weisz had hidden from him, concerning the effects caused by the new drug and now he, too, has aroused the ire of the pharmaceutical company.

This is an intelligent, moving film, tense and seething with the anger Fiennes feels towards the cold-blooded behaviour of the drugs firm and the cynical hypocrisy of the British government. And there is tenderness here, too, as Fiennes learns more and more about his late wife and falls in love with her all over again.

Jeffrey Caine's screenplay is witty and true to Le Carré's book and the performances are remarkably good. Nighy doesn't put a foot wrong, while Fiennes and Weisz are at their very best, the latter particularly so. She has long been a fine actress but here she exceeds expectations; the film had four Oscar nominations (including best adapted screenplay) and Weisz deservedly took the gong for best supporting actress.

DANCE DRAMA The most overpraised film of recent years is Black Swan – cliché-ridden, predictable and unexceptional in every way. As a ballet-cum-horror movie, it doesn't bear comparison with Powell and Pressburger's The Red Shoes. For a start their star, Moira Shearer, could really dance (unlike Natalie Portman) and beyond that the story is told with a sophistication foreign to the makers of Black Swan. Essentially, this is the Hans Christian Andersen fable about the ballerina whose red shoes will not allow her to stop dancing. Around it, P&P (surely the best of all film-making partnerships) construct a believable ballet company ruled by the cold, autocratic Anton Walbrook, and a romance between Shearer and a composer, Marius Goring, which culminates in a decision she has to make – whether to dance for Walbrook or go away with Goring. The ballet sequences are splendid; so is Shearer in her first film. Ultimately, The Red Shoes is chilling, unforgettable. By comparison, Black Swan is just soppy. (UK 1948, HD)

COMEDY You can almost smell the school dinners in this wonderful comedy. The bones of contention that arise when Margaret Rutherford's academy for young ladies is accidentally evacuated to a building already occupied by Alastair Sim's boys' school are beautifully observed, but the comic highlight is undoubtedly the precision with which the pupils scurry around the school to avoid groups of visiting VIPs. COMEDY The nostalgic appeal of Jerome K Jerome's Victorian trio is undimmed, perhaps even enhanced, by a rather childish approach to their messing about on the Thames with a scene-stealing dog. Despite a pretend feud between Jimmy Edwards and Laurence Harvey kept up throughout filming for publicity purposes, the ensemble, including David Tomlinson, is amiability itself, while the parasol-toting girls (Shirley Eaton, Jill Ireland, Lisa Gastoni) are as radiant as the golden days of yesteryear. TH (UK 1956)

FANTASY Director Peter Jackson fulfilled his lifelong ambition with this second remake of the 1933 classic, which sees maverick film-maker Jack Black journey to the mysterious Skull Island to shoot his latest adventure. The scenes involving a dinosaur stampede, a scary T rex battle and a gorge full of creepy giant insects may add to the film's extreme length, but Jackson's return of the King boasts some brilliantly executed CGI and delivers sensational entertainment. ADVENTURE This irreverent medieval caper sets out its stall right at the start, with jousting fans singing rock songs, emcees talking up contestants like it's WWF wrestling, and dancers at a royal banquet grooving to David Bowie's Golden Years. Heath Ledger plays the commoner who dreams of being a knight, and so impersonates one with the help of sidekicks Mark Addy, Alan Tudyk and Paul Bettany (who casually steals the film with his portrayal of writer Geoffrey Chaucer). DRAMA Emma Donoghue skilfully adapts her own acclaimed novel, which was inspired by the case of Josef Fritzl, the Austrian man who incarcerated his daughter in a basement for 24 years, raping and impregnating her. Both book and film tell their story from the point of view of five-year-old Jack (Jacob Tremblay), born into the cramped captivity he shares with his mother (Oscar-winning Brie Larson). Directed with tactile, close-up empathy by Lenny Abrahamson (Frank), Room establishes an almost mundane routine of home education, exercise and co-dependence, punctuated by the nocturnal visitations of the pair's captor (Sean Bridgers). Though the book's readers will know the outcome, seeing this almost unbearable nightmare realised with such care and restraint is an ultimately uplifting experience. AC (Can/Ire 2015, swearing, HD)

COMEDY DRAMA Ostensibly, the focus here is on Jack Nicholson, who plays a homophobic bigot who insults everyone, lives alone, writes trashy novels for a living and has obsessive-compulsive disorder. However, the movie is really about Helen Hunt, who plays that corniest of Hollywood characters – the lonely, frustrated waitress with a problem child. Yet Hunt (who, like Nicholson, won an Oscar for her pains) breathes life into the part, outshining her co-star and his trademark grouchy act. It's lazily directed and far too long, but Hunt is a revelation and the reason to stick with it. AT (US 1997, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

The excellent script won an Oscar, as did Kim Basinger for her hard-edged vamp, but the movie really deserved a hatful in the year James Cameron's Titanic cleaned up. JC (US 1997, violence, swearing, brief nudity, HD)

CRIME Edward Woodward fans may fondly recall The Equalizer, his US crime series of the late 1980s, but you can approach this slick 2014 upgrade with no prior knowledge of his character. Robert McCall, a retired, widowed black ops agent works off the grid at a Boston DIY store and now looks like Denzel Washington. "Old man's gotta be the old man, fish has gotta be the fish," he philosophises in a diner to Chloë Grace Moretz's sharp teen prostitute, forging a bond that drives the plot when the Russian mafia enter. A high-octane vigilante ballet from Antoine Fuqua (who also steered Denzel to Oscar glory in Training Day), its scenes of violence are exquisitely staged in vari-speed, and a cueball-headed Washington exudes righteous cool while agents Melissa Leo and Bill Pullman, also retired, feed him intel. BIOPIC The first 20 minutes of this movie are truly exhilarating – a fast-moving, flashy Technicolor sequence set in the famous music hall, with cancan dancers, amazing period characters and a magnificent sense of the vibrancy of 1880s Paris. The segment is one of director John Huston's finest achievements and helped the film win its Oscars for best art direction and costume design. The film goes on to tell the morbid tale of artist Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, memorably played by José Ferrer, much of it on his knees. Ferrer is brilliant, seeking not a shred of sympathy as he fleshes out the disabled artist's weaknesses. It well deserved its seven Oscar nominations. TS (US/UK 1952)

Gorillas in the Mist ★★★★

12.50-3.20pm C5 12

BIOPIC Sigourney Weaver gives a tour-de-force performance in this fascinating account of Dian Fossey's ground-breaking research into the closed world of the gorilla. She admirably presents a warts-and-all portrait of the woman who slowly gained access to a tribe of remote primates facing extinction; according to Michael Apted's movie, Fossey's passion for her gorillas was offset by her coldness as a human being and a commitment to her work that bordered on obsession. Apted's direction is sympathetic and he makes the most of the stunning jungle location. Bryan Brown is good as Weaver's lover, but the real acting accolades must go to the apes themselves. JF (US 1988, edited for violence, swearing, HD)

Look Who's Talking ★★★

2.00-3.50pm Gold 12

COMEDY A triumph of high concept from Hollywood, this is the smash-hit comedy that brought John Travolta back from the wilderness into the public eye and spawned two increasingly silly sequels. Kirstie Alley plays the single mother on the lookout for the perfect husband, even though we know that lowly taxi driver Travolta is the safe bet from the outset. Bruce Willis, the wisecracking voice of baby Mikey, has the best lines, although Travolta and Alley are an amiable pairing, and there's nice support from Olympia Dukakis and George Segal. JF (US 1989, swearing)

Shall We Dance ★★

2.20-4.00pm BBC2 12

ROMANTIC COMEDY Hollywood plunders the world cinema archives once again here, with a remake of Masayuki Suo's 1995 dance-floor delight. But it loses the warmth and wry social observation that gave the original its appeal. To his credit, Richard Gere makes a charming lead, playing a jaded Chicago lawyer and family man who secretly takes up ballroom dancing lessons. Unfortunately, the casting of Jennifer Lopez as his dance instructor is where the film falls down. Only Stanley Tucci as a clandestine salsa addict demonstrates any genuine vitality and joy, but his performance isn't enough to save this clumsy feature. SF (US/Can 2004, edited for language)

EVENING

Eclipse ★★★★

6.30-9.00pm E4 12

ROMANTIC HORROR In this lively third instalment of the Twilight series, the pressure is mounting on moody Bella (Kristen Stewart) to make a fangs-or-fur choice between vampire boyfriend Edward (Robert Pattinson) and werewolf friend Jacob (Taylor Lautner). But as pallid Edward and six-packed Jacob come close to blows, their respective clans find themselves forced to forge a truce to fight a common foe – an army of vicious vampire "newborns" led by an old enemy. British director David Slade (30 Days of Night) balances the blend of action and romance far better than the directors of the two previous movies, and although Eclipse remains primarily for dedicated fans, it's still easily accessible to series newcomers. Why not record this, so you can watch it after Thursday's Twilight on Sony Movie Channel? DA (US 2010, some violence, HD)

P The Lunchbox ★★★★

9.00-10.40pm BBC4 PG

ROMANCE Despite being dependent on a whopping contrivance, writer/director Ritesh Batra's debut exudes wit, warmth and charm. Demonstrating in an opening montage how the 5,000-strong dabbawallah (or box-carrier) service gets lunch pails from housewives to husbands across the teeming city of Mumbai, Batra makes use of a rare delivery error to engage Saajan (Irrfan Khan), a grumpy claims accountant, in an epistolary relationship with Ila (Nimrat Kaur), who is trying to tantalise the taste buds of her husband (Nakul Vaid) to rekindle their marriage. Without fetishising the dishes, Batra keeps the focus on the food and the notion of variety being the spice of life. But it's the way he, cinematographer Michael Simmonds and editor John Lyons convey urban alienation and aloneness that makes this beautifully acted picture so affecting. DP (Ind/Fr/Ger/US 2013, HD)

P The Face of an Angel ★★★

10.00-11.40pm BBC2 15

DRAMA Though it is not directly the subject of this film, the 2007 murder of British student Meredith Kercher in Perugia provides the backdrop for this intelligent and surprisingly sensitive meditation on the way our society and its various media react to violent crime. Daniel Brühl stars as Thomas, a film-maker who agrees to develop a script based on a notorious trial in Italy, but, as a divorced father with a young daughter of his own, he soon suffers a crisis of conscience. Helping him find his way are Kate Beckinsale, as a worldly reporter, and model Cara Delevingne as a British student who rekindles his faith in humankind. DW (UK/It/Sp 2014, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)

THRILLER This gritty revenge tale was labelled a Death Wish for the noughties, though it has as much to say about social conditions in inner-city areas as it does about Michael Caine's doddery dispenser of justice. Caine (see choice, p88) plays the title character, a 70-something ex-serviceman whose life on a run-down estate is thrown upside down when his best friend is murdered. Determined to see justice done, Harry hobbles into gun-toting, death-dealing action. Director Daniel Barber's movie is a shade melodramatic, but Caine is surprisingly convincing as the avenger. DA (UK 2009, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Star Wars Episode IV: a New Hope

★★★★★ 8.00-10.20pm Sky1 U

SCI-FI Argument still goes on over which is the best film in George Lucas's lucrative sci-fi franchise. For me it's this one (aka simply Star Wars) because it was the first and because we'd never seen anything quite like it before. Essentially it's a western set in a galaxy far, far away where the plucky Rebel Alliance is threatened by the evil Galactic Empire – a pretty corny plot really. But the special effects were state of the art at the time and with them came a deep attention to detail and characterisation, and a seamless blend of various cinematic genres. Add to all that a likeable trio of heroes (Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher and Mark Hamill), a frightening villain in Darth Vader (David Prowse and the voice of James Earl Jones), the Jedi knight Obi-Wan Kenobi (Alec Guinness) and a bunch of vivid supporting characters in C-3PO, R2-D2 and Chewbacca, and the result is a joyous blend of action, thrills and rich entertainment. (US 1977, HD)

A Kid for Two Farthings ★★★

4.00-5.45pm Talking Pictures TV U
(FreeviewHD 81, Freesat 306, Sky 343)

FANTASY This is a delightful urban fairy tale set in London's East End after the Second World War. Adapted from his own novel by Wolf Mankowitz, the story of a small boy who finds a one-horned goat that he is convinced is a miracle-working unicorn is handled with a wonderfully light touch by director Carol Reed and beautifully played by a cast of top Brits. DP (UK 1955)

The Core ★★★

6.25-9.00pm Film4 12

SCI-FI The Hollywood disaster movie moves on to esoteric cataclysms: in this case, the Earth's core ceasing to rotate, so a secret team of top scientists builds a burrowing machine designed to penetrate the core and set it spinning again. This is by-the-numbers movie-making, but with enough excitingly staged set pieces to offset the daft plot. Aaron Eckhart puts in a pleasing turn as a boffin recruited to save the planet, while Stanley Tucci is amusingly slimy as his duplicitous colleague. AS (US/UK 2002, violence, edited for language, HD)

The Hunger Games ★★★★

9.00-11.45pm E4 12

SCI-FI In this impressive action thriller, adapted from Suzanne Collins's bestselling trilogy, a failed revolution in what used to be called America has led to the creation of 12 downtrodden districts that serve the wealthy Capitol. As penance for the uprising, every year two young people from each district are drafted to fight to the death in a televised spectacle. Resourceful heroine Katniss Everdeen (Jennifer Lawrence) fans the flames of working-class unrest with her iron will to survive. Director Gary Ross keeps the sci-fi themes vivid and relevant, the camerawork jittery and involving, and the action speedy and thrilling. Bolstering Lawrence's magnetic performance are marvellous turns by smitten fellow competitor Josh Hutcherson, jaded mentor Woody Harrelson and smarmy TV host Stanley Tucci (again!). AJ (US 2012, violence, HD)

Cruel Intentions ★★★

9.00-10.55pm Sony Movie Channel
(Freeview 32, Sky 323, Virgin 425) 15

DRAMA Dangerous Liaisons for the under-20s is the premise of this sexed-up teen picture. Sarah Michelle Gellar and Ryan Phillippe star as the contemporary Merteuil and Valmont, circulating around New York society and laying their bet as to whether or not Phillippe can bed Reese Witherspoon. With teenagers at its centre, the same plot seems to reverberate with unprovoked spite and, with the depth gone, Roger Kumble's film is simply an entertaining romp. The sequel follows, but with Amy Adams in the Gellar role (see page 78). LH (US 1999, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse)

Spider ★★★★

11.00pm-1.00am AMC (Sky 192, BT 332) 15

DRAMA David Cronenberg's intense exploration of mental illness combines pain and sadness with a frighteningly innovative dexterity. Based on Patrick McGrath's novel, it depicts the destitute Spider (an excellent Ralph Fiennes) watching his younger self go through the harrowing motions of misunderstanding and misrepresenting his mother's "murder". Spinning a melancholy web of sexually confused, obsessive compulsion, Cronenberg's unravelling of one man's mind is intellectually demanding and courageous. AJ (Can/UK/Jpn/Fr 2002, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity)

ACTION This is the thriller that minted Bruce Willis's career, launched a franchise and remains a giant of the genre. It places a group of office workers at a Christmas party in peril when suave Alan Rickman and his Euro-terrorists take them hostage. One man (Willis, naturally) is charged with saving them. Director John McTiernan handles the set pieces with aplomb and the script oozes dry wit, but the star of the show is Willis. Andrew Collins (US 1988, violence, swearing, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Descendants ★★★★

9.00-11.15pm More4 15

COMEDY DRAMA George Clooney is an inspiration to men in their 50s everywhere. He's going grey naturally, appears not to have had "work" done, and he's in terrific films like Gravity and Hail, Caesar! But let's scroll back to 2011 when he turned 50. As written and directed by Alexander Payne (Sideways), his Honolulu lawyer (whose unfaithful wife is in a coma after a boating accident) is atypically baggy and uncool. Hawaiian music, skilfully rationed humorous relief, a verdant landscape... the film is subtle and gentle, while the tragedy veers towards the absurd. And George admirably displays moving pathos as an older dad coping with stasis in his life. (US/UK 2011, swearing, HD)

Invitation to a Gunfighter ★★★★

7.05-9.00pm Movies4Men U

WESTERN George Segal plays a Confederate soldier who returns from the war to find the Union townspeople have seized his farm and hired a gunfighter to kill him. Written and directed by Richard Wilson, an associate of Orson Welles back in the Mercury theatre and Citizen Kane days, it's an allegory about political exile and conformity that spends too much time in debate at the expense of action. Nevertheless, it's an engrossing effort, lifted by a knockout performance from Yul Brynner as the elegant, Creole gunfighter Jules Gaspard D'Estaing – and you'd better pronounce that right... a role that he regurgitated and turned into an android for the sci-fi film Westworld. AT (US 1964)

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead ★★★

9.00-11.00pm Sky Arts PG

COMEDY Tom Stoppard's screen version of his own hit play has largely been dismissed by the critics, who disapproved of his opening out of what had been a delightful theatrical experience. Gary Oldman and Tim Roth play the minor characters from Hamlet, combining the screenplay's verbal dexterity with precise slapstick timing to capture the boredom and bewilderment of their situation with disarming charm. Richard Dreyfuss as the Player and Ian Richardson as Polonius also score palpable hits. DP (US 1990, nudity, HD)

P Ida ★★★★

11.15pm-12.55am Film4 12

DRAMA British-based Polish director Pawel Pawlikowski's sublime, Oscar-winning drama is set in Communist Poland in 1962, and focuses on Anna (Agata Trzebuchowska), an orphaned novice nun who's about to take her vows when her aunt, a state prosecutor, informs her that she is in fact Jewish, her real name is Ida and her parents were killed during the Nazi occupation. This distinctly odd couple then embark on a road trip to find the graves of Ida's parents. Stunningly rendered in monochrome photography, it's stark but beautiful, understated yet entrancing. JA (Pol/Den 2013, some swearing, BW, HD)

RoboCop ★★★★

12.45-2.45am ITV4 12

SCI-FI Brazilian director José Padilha (Elite Squad) brings visceral grit and propulsive punch to this slick reboot of the 1987 sci-fi masterpiece. FANTASY A teenage girl falls for a vampire in the first film adapted from Stephenie Meyer's bestselling series of novels. Kristen Stewart is suitably enigmatic as the heroine, Bella, who's sent to a small town to live with her dad. There she falls for handsome Edward Cullen (Robert Pattinson) but danger begins to loom. Pattinson overdoes the James Dean-like brooding, but his chemistry with Stewart more than makes amends. Stella Papamichael (US/UK 2008, some violence)

Morning Glory ★★★
6.50-9.00pm Film4 12

COMEDY Harrison Ford and Rachel McAdams make an unlikely but likeable team in Notting Hill director Roger Michell's lively comedy. She's a perky TV producer saddled with a failing morning show, while he's the station's veteran but time-serving news anchor who's forced to front the detested programme. Like Broadcast News, it's more wry than laugh-out-loud funny, but Michell's seamless, steady direction lets McAdams's energy shine through and allows Ford and his fellow news anchor Diane Keaton to craft beautifully timed performances. KK (US/UK 2010, swearing, sexual references, HD)

Six Bullets ★★★
12.25-2.40am ITV4 15

ACTION There are shades of Taken in this gritty and thought-provoking kidnap tale, as guilt-ridden ex-merc Jean-Claude Van Damme helps an American couple rescue their teenage daughter from Eastern European sex traffickers. JCVD's ferocious knife fights, hard kicks and gunplay deliver plenty of high-octane thrills, but it's his rarely seen emotional depth that really lifts the flick above cliché and increasingly far-fetched plotting. SF (US 2012, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

A Simple Plan ★★★★
1.05-3.00am BBC2 15

THRILLER This bleak, snowbound thriller from Scott B Smith's debut novel in which money leads to murder is showing as a tribute to Bill Paxton, who died last month, aged 61. With Stephen King parallels in its domestic tale of small-town equilibrium shattered by an unexpected event, it tells a simple story: mill worker Paxton and not-so-brainy brother Billy Bob Thornton stumble upon a crashed plane and a duffel bag containing $4 million in cash. Paxton's Lady Macbeth-like pregnant wife (Bridget Fonda) pushes him deeper into trouble, involving blackmail, lies and the inevitable. Director Sam Raimi makes atmospheric capital from snowy footprints and slow progress, while Thornton asks his bro, "Do you ever feel evil?" Chilly, engrossing and human, it recalls Shallow Grave and The Treasure of the Sierra Madre. And it's a nice, lesser-seen gem from Paxton's foreshortened career. (US/UK/Jpn/Ger/Fr 1998, violence, swearing, HD)

The Inbetweeners Movie ★★★
9.00-10.55pm Film4 15

COMEDY The first big-screen excursion for E4's cult sitcom sees the show's suburban teens – nerdy Will (Simon Bird), lovesick Simon (Joe Thomas), oblivious Neil (Blake Harrison) and mouthy Jay (James Buckley) – head for the Greek party town of Malia, where their hormonal insecurities play out against sun, sea and strobe lights. Although the gross-out is ramped up and many of the situations were covered in Kevin & Perry Go Large, a heart does beat beneath the laddish antics. AC (UK 2011, swearing, sexual references, HD)
A nice little earner: p118

Red 2 ★★★ 9.00-11.15pm E4 12

ACTION More antiquated, globetrotting nonsense fuels this OAP espionage caper, though it is slightly better than the original. This time, Frank (Bruce Willis) calls on his ageing secret agent buddies (including John Malkovich and Helen Mirren) to track down a nuclear device invented by a Cold War era genius (Anthony Hopkins) whose mental instability poses a threat to peace. As before, the winning rapport between the stars is the film's best asset. Catherine Zeta-Jones's femme fatale adds little, but new addition Byung-hun Lee makes a big impression as a contract killer on Willis's trail. AJ (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

American Pie: the Wedding ★★★
9.00-11.00pm ITV2 15

COMEDY How you feel about a third helping of American Pie will of course depend on how the first two servings of the adolescent sex romp went down. In this supposedly ultimate slice, in which series regulars Jim (Jason Biggs) and Michelle (Alyson Hannigan) attempt to tie the knot, writer Adam Herz delivers the familiar recipe of bawdy set pieces that culminate in a shamelessly upbeat and sentimental ending. Nothing new then, and as revolting and foul-mouthed as ever, but this will be a reasonably satisfying "final" course for Pie fans. AS (US/Ger 2003, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest ★★★
10.35pm-12.55am BBC1 12

ADVENTURE Johnny Depp's lovable rogue Jack Sparrow returns for more swashbuckling high jinks in this frenetic follow-up to The Curse of the Black Pearl. Only this time, it's not just Sparrow's neck that's in danger but his very soul, as cunning undead captain Davy Jones (a squid-faced Bill Nighy) and his supernatural crew emerge from the ocean depths to recover the ultimate unpaid debt. There's scarcely a moment to catch your breath as the film-makers unleash an exhausting avalanche of visual thrills, incorporating everything from angry cannibals to a fabulous sea monster. SF (US 2006, violence, HD)

The Internship ★★
11.00pm-1.25am 5STAR 12

COMEDY Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn seem to be going through the motions in director Shawn Levy's clunky work culture-clash yarn. They play a pair of redundant, old-school salesmen who fetch up at Google HQ in California where they compete with other (much younger) interns for a job by taking part in a tedious series of challenges. Levy's film may boast a hi-tech backdrop, but it's an old banger of a comedy, with Vaughn's mile-a-minute spiel especially rusty and Wilson becalmed. SP (US 2013, swearing, sexual references)

30 Days of Night ★★★
12.45-2.40am C4 18

HORROR This shocker offers genuine surprises not seen in an undead movie since Near Dark. The premise here is that the Alaskan town of Barrow spends 30 days each year cut off from the world in polar winter darkness, which makes it ideal territory for feral bloodsuckers up for an uninterrupted buffet. Survivors led by sheriff Josh Hartnett therefore must wait out the interminable month without attracting the attention of the fiends. It's a variation on the classic siege-by-monsters scenario with snowy landscapes adding to the chilling, slow-building terror. AJ (NZ/US 2007, violence, swearing, HD)

P Nocturnal Animals ★★★★★ 15

From Mon Sky Store and Virgin Movies (also on DVD, Blu-ray and download)

THRILLER With his long-awaited follow-up to 2009 debut A Single Man, fashion designer turned director Tom Ford created one of the most brutal and intelligent nerve-jangling thrillers of 2016.

Based on Austin Wright's novel Tony and Susan, it is effectively two films in one, as art gallery owner Susan (Amy Adams) takes delivery of the debut novel by her ex, Edward (Jake Gyllenhaal). As Susan reads, Ford takes us into her mind, imagining Edward as the story's hero: a mild-mannered husband who is forced into the role of avenging vigilante after his wife and daughter are kidnapped.

Both of the film's timelines are totally gripping, but in different ways; when the fictional story plays out to its shocking end, Ford has us on tenterhooks to discover its real-world implications. Damon Wise (US 2016, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

DVD OF THE WEEK

The Light between Oceans ★★★ 12 13 March on DVD, Blu-ray and download

Michael Fassbender stars here as a war hero managing an isolated Australian lighthouse whose happiness is threatened when hopes of a family with wife Alicia Vikander seem destined not to be. However, when a baby girl washes up in a rowboat, they decide to keep her – a decision that has devastating consequences. Derek Cianfrance's film piles tragedy upon tragedy and, despite compelling performances including Rachel Weisz as the infant's biological mother, the overlong narrative seeks to elicit tears at every conceivable turn and rapidly gets a bit soggy. The DVD includes a making-of featurette. Emma Simmonds RT Offer To order the DVD for £13.99, call 0844 848 7300 (call charges apply, see website), quoting reference RT1489. That's rich!

Why is the BBC blowing my money on this, asks Alison Graham

THE UNEXAMINED LIFE is not worth living, Socrates said, and he knew a thing or two. Though I doubt he was referring to the painful self-scrutiny involved in deciding whether or not to swap an expensive shower gel for a cheaper brand.

Shop Well for Less? (Thursdays BBC1) is full of critical decisions like this. If you haven't seen it, you should, before I try my best to get it removed from our screens for ever. It's where Steph McGovern and Alex Jones try to persuade high-spending families to, indeed, shop well for less.

'Don't expect me to feel sorry for someone with an expensive bubble-bath habit'

So yes, they are helping people who spend too much money. Boo flipping hoo. As families are being murdered by their own government in Syrian hellholes (see the harrowing documentary War Child on Sunday, Channel 4), BBC1 is helping people who spend too much money.

I'm not as pious as my anger about this series suggests. I enjoy spending money – who doesn't? I'm not some aesthete who needs only a well-thumbed copy of Proust and soup made from pine cones for my intellectual and physical sustenance. Let me tell you, I am helpless in the face of a pair of rock crystal drop earrings.

We must all treat ourselves, if we can. But endless, pointless conspicuous consumption of stuff, stuff and more stuff is depressing. Just look at the family in this week's Shop Well for Less? He's a mechanic and she's a beautician and they have an eight-year-old daughter.

Mum is obsessed by designer labels and won't wear the same outfit twice because she's appalled at the prospect of people seeing her on social media wearing something she's been photographed in before. Why? Apart from the fact you must wonder at the calibre of friends and acquaintances who are even going to notice or care about this. But, just, why? Of course, she has a wardrobe of clothes she's never worn, still with their price tags on.

She also, on an impulse (on an impulse) spent £29,000 on a Range Rover because she likes driving a car that says Range Rover on it. As part of their austerity plan Steph and Alex persuade her to drive a similar-looking but much cheaper car for a few days. This makes her feel "sick to her stomach".

Meanwhile, Dad uses three expensive bottles of bubble bath every week. Fine, go on, knock yourself out. But don't expect me to feel sorry for you at every agonising step on your conversion as both of you try to decide whether to use a cheaper handwash.

This couple clearly love outward displays of wealth and enjoy nights out with, we are told, £100 bottles of champagne. Again, great, go ahead. But they don't actually enjoy eating in good restaurants because they are always preoccupied by who might be watching and admiring them. So they are taught by Alex and Steph that having a night in with pals and a takeaway is fun and cheap!

SIMILARLY, SHE GETS her big expensive car valeted regularly, both in and out, so Steph and Alex teach the family that washing the car together with a bucket and some suds is fun and cheap!

I've never wanted to be the kind of person who says, "This isn't why I pay my licence fee", but this isn't why I pay my licence fee. Showing people how to have fun or wash a car isn't a public service. Or persuading someone to switch from sunbed sessions to cheap fake tan isn't educational or instructive.

There are people in real need and in real debt across the country. Send Alex and Steph to help them.

MY HEART SINKS

Vintage TV, which I have never in my life knowingly watched, sent me a press release for a new show called Ladies Lounge (the title is written in pink, of course). Ladies Lounge. A lounge for ladies. With Loose Women's Jenny Powell and Atomic Kitten Liz McClarnon.

If you hand me a bucket I'll tell you the rest – "Plump up the cushions, pull up the sofa and settle in for a gorgeous girls' get-together in our lovely Ladies Lounge... Don't just be a lady who lunches, be a lady who lounges!"

Did you hear that noise? That was this lady's heart plummeting like a faulty lift.

1 Hand of God

WHERE TO NOW?

Amazon Prime

Strong performances by Ron Perlman and Dana Delany uphold this odd US drama about a corrupt judge who, driven by family trauma, hallucinations and evangelical Christianity, turns to vigilantism. It's not coming back for a third season, so the new, second run – following on from the double twist in last year's finale – ends the story.
Available from 10 March

NEW SEASON

5 Love

Netflix

When it debuted last year, this indie romantic dramedy at first seemed as awkward as its male protagonist, played by co-creator Paul Rust. Once it overcame a slow start to put his dorky cynic Gus in some kind of relationship with disdainful addict Mickey (Gillian Jacobs), it clicked into a uniquely honest look at modern dating. The new, hopefully tighter second season continues the story.
Available from 10 March

DID HE DO IT?

6 Killing for Love

iPlayer (BBC4)

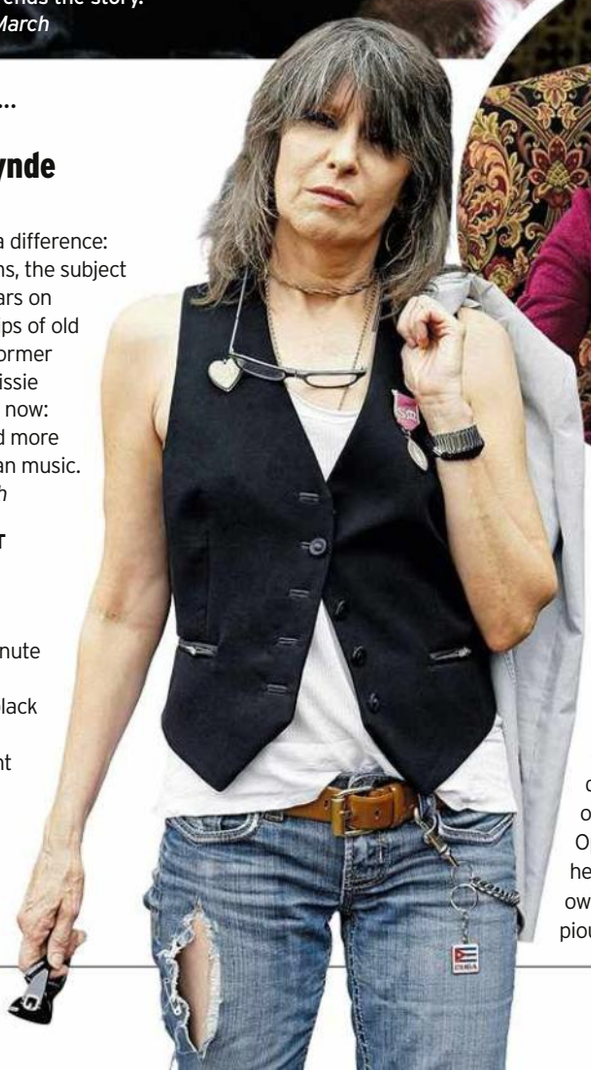

A self-contained feature version was enough for BBC4 at nearly two hours, but if you're particularly fascinated by the true-crime story of Jens Soering – who in 1985 confessed to the murder of his girlfriend's parents in Virginia, but later recanted – iPlayer has it as a Making a Murderer-style series. Around an extra hour of footage creates a six-part saga.
Available from 10pm, Tue 7 March

ANOTHER SIDE OF...

2 Alone with Chrissie Hynde

iPlayer (BBC4)

A rockumentary with a difference: unlike many music films, the subject is both alive and appears on camera. Among the clips of old glories are scenes of former Pretenders leader Chrissie Hynde (right) as she is now: reflective, content, and more concerned with art than music.
Available until 12 March

SHORT BUT SWEET

3 The Break

BBC3

A second run of six-minute micro-dramas, each of them written by new black and minority ethnic writers. They're brilliant at lightly sketching a memorable story. The last one hits BBC3's website and YouTube channel (not iPlayer) on Sunday (12 March).

SOAPY US DRAMA

4 Greenleaf

Netflix

A family-run mega-church in Tennessee is the setting for a classy soap that has something to say about religion, and organised religion, while it's dishing out addictive plot lines full of secrets, lies and affairs. It airs on Oprah Winfrey's US network: Oprah herself appears, as a blues-bar owner destined to clash with her pious sister (Lynn Whitfield, above).

THE WHOLE MASTERPIECE

7 Wagner's Ring Cycle

iPlayer (BBC4)

Another example of iPlayer being able to do what terrestrial TV doesn't have time for: understandably, BBC4 didn't broadcast all 14-and-a-half hours of the Ring, even in a well received production by Opera North, on a Sunday night last month. But for fans of Wagner the full cycle is available online in all its monumental majesty, with plenty of time to catch the latter parts.

NEW EURO-DRAMA

8 Nick's Law

Walter Presents

A colossal hit in its native Germany, this cop show works as a shameless gallop through all the exciting excesses of maverick law-enforcer shows. Til Schweiger (Inglourious Basterds) is the titular Nick, a lone wolf who's just joined Hamburg CID. Immediately he gruffly starts shooting bad guys in the face, starting with the bosses of a local prostitution ring – to the chagrin of both his neglected wife and the city's sassy, white-bloused DA. Grrr!

WOMEN OF ROCK

9 Girl in a Band

iPlayer (BBC4)

Not girl bands, but girls who are in bands, ie women making their way in the male-dominated and sometimes aggressively masculine world of indie and rock. This illuminating 2015 rockumentary meets them, from Brix Smith of the Fall (above) and Tina Weymouth from Talking Heads to Kim Deal of Pixies and Miki Berenyi of Lush. They have sometimes dark, mostly drily witty tales to tell. Available until 12 March

LAST CHANCE

10 Thirteen

iPlayer (BBC3)

BBC3 programmes live a long life on iPlayer, but don't stay for ever... if the growing hype around this addictive drama passed you by last year, catch up now. Jodie Comer is excellent as a kidnapped girl who suddenly returns – if she's the same person – as a damaged adult. Available until 15 March

YOUR NEXT BINGE

A smash and grab raid on tired old cop shows

If I'm Sorry I Haven't a Clue is the antidote to panel games, then No Offence is the antidote to crime dramas. The most popular crime shows – in Britain at least – tend to rely on atmosphere, weaving their mood slowly, like a tapestry spread on a wall. No Offence has none of that. It smashes through the wall and keeps on going, scattering plotlines and caustic dialogue as it goes.

Put simply, it's the story of a Manchester police station run by unstoppable alpha female DI Viv Deering (Joanna Scanlon).

For a typical line of Viv dialogue try this, about a man found to be grooming underage girls online, but probably not the suspect they're looking for: "On the nonce spectrum, he's looking more Polanski than Savile," she tells her officers.

Later in the same episode, Viv needs to stop gangsters getting to a witness she's got holed up in a hotel. In some dramas, that would mean an anodyne line like Lewis saying, "I want officers on the door, round the clock." Or Nikki in Silent Witness saying, "I know you feel vulnerable but I promise we'll keep you safe." Not in No Offence. Instead Viv barks angrily: "Right! This gimp is going to be more protected than the truth about Lady Di's ginger one."

So generally, there is plenty of offence to be had here. But we don't get to dwell on it, because each episode is so restlessly over-plotted, it's always whisking us on to the next set piece or mouthy confrontation.

It's chaotic and occasionally daft, and like Paul Abbott's previous creation, Shameless, it might be best watched in a state of mild inebriation. That's certainly the best way to enjoy lines like Viv telling her boss (another woman – all the main characters are) "Do you know what they call you upstairs? Nuremberg. Because everything's a trial with you."

Dying battery? Don't panic

Eventually, your devices' built-in batteries will fade and die. When you respond is down to your own patience – replace the battery when it starts to irritate you. But you could just ask your device.

If you use a Macbook, hold the alt key and click the battery symbol at the top of the screen: if it says "Condition: Replace Soon", do so. Or use the free program coconutBattery (coconut-flavour.com/coconutbattery), which will also work on iPhones and iPads. On Android, the free GSam Battery Monitor app lets you shut down battery-hogging apps. On Windows 8 and 10, open the program Command Prompt, type "powercfg/batteryreport", then hit enter. This will generate a factfile that shows how much your battery is underperforming.

If you decide it's time to replace it, be safe. Cheap knock-offs can literally explode, so only use official parts from the manufacturer's website. Android phones and Windows laptops tend to have "user-replaceable" batteries: simply plug in the new one and recycle the old (batteryback.org). For Apple products, use the specialist service via apple.com/batteries. A depleted battery is most likely out of warranty: it cost me £130 and I had to leave it for a few hours at an Apple Store, but that's cheaper than a new laptop. JONATHAN HOLMES

SATURDAY Choices

The pick of today's TV

TRYING TWO
Scotland's Stuart Hogg (far left) takes on England's Elliot Daly

PICK OF THE DAY Six Nations Rugby From 12.30pm ITV

Italy v France (kick-off 1.30pm) Italy tried everything against England two weeks ago, including twisting the rules so far that the English players had to ask the referee what was going on. It was legal, if bizarre, and for 40 minutes it had Twickenham seriously flustered. It's unlikely Italy will be able to spring the same sort of surprise against France this afternoon, but at least they have made coaches scratch their heads.

England v Scotland (kick-off 4pm) Eddie Jones's England, so often in cruise control this year, have finally been made to look a little jumpy, something that will please the resurgent Scots in the final game of the weekend. The likes of Stuart Hogg and Finn Russell have taken mischievous delight in winding up opposition players this year, each underhand nudge followed by a flash of a smile to their teammates. It's a mark of their new-found bravado – provocateur-in-chief Eddie Jones best be wary. JAMES GILL

Dogs Behaving Badly

6.05pm C4

DOCUMENTARY When a dog misbehaves, it's often the fault of the owner who is unwittingly rewarding the animal's bad behaviour. They haven't taught them about boundaries or consequences, nor do they praise their pets when they do something right (or stop doing something bad).

Following in the paw-prints of TV dog behaviourists such as Barbara Woodhouse and Cesar Millan, the "Dogfather" Graeme Hall zips about the country "fixing" dogs that are aggressive, destroying their homes or running away. "It's mostly about fixing the owner. Fix them first and then they can fix the dog," he says. And it seems to take him less than an hour to do it. JANE RACKHAM

Let's Sing and Dance for Comic Relief

6.45pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT You can never tell who's going to be outstanding and who's going to be out the door quicker than you can say "Comic Relief" in this fundraiser because the standard is so... well, variable. But as The Chase's Mark Labbett says, "Where else can a tone-deaf, 27-stone man with two left feet get to sing and dance in front of the nation?"

As well as the Chasers' Wizard of Oz medley, EastEnders' Danny-Boy Hatchard does Elton John's I'm Still Standing, while Strictly's Ola and James Jordan perform Meghan Trainor's All about That Bass. They'll be fine with the dance moves, but apparently have "ropey voices". JR

Grand Tours of the Scottish Islands

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY The landscape of the northern tip of Skye, according to Paul Murton, makes you feel like you're walking through the pages of The Lord of the Rings. The island is steeped in stories about giants and fairies, atmospheric mists swirl spectacularly around the mountains, and the Gaelic place names conjure up romantic images. He even discovers real dinosaur footprints.

In contrast, the locals are a pragmatic lot, playing brutal games of shinty and making their herds of cows swim to new pastures on a neighbouring island. Fans of Celtic folk rock band Runrig should note that Murton talks to former frontman Donnie Munro. JR

Dad's Army

8.30pm BBC2

SITCOM BBC2 has naturally had to skip the three lost stories from 1968, but it's a shame last year's lovingly restored, animated version of one of them, A Stripe for Frazer, isn't being shown. So we leap ahead to The Armoured Might of Lance Corporal Jones from 1969, which was the first episode to be made in colour.

Daily life at the butcher's is nicely sketched, and includes the sole appearance of Jones's assistant "Ray-Mond". Wilson manages to impress Mainwaring with a well-marshalled drill. And there's an early TV outing for Yes Minister's Nigel Hawthorne as "Angry Man", but we kick off with possibly the least effectual gas-mask lecture ever. MARK BRAXTON

COMIC RELIEF HIGHLIGHTS

■ Let's Sing and Dance for Comic Relief (6.45pm BBC1) is only the start of this year's festivities.
■ Red Nose Day is Friday 24 March. The most talked-about feature of the night is a ten-minute Love Actually reunion, starring Hugh Grant, Keira Knightley, Colin Firth and Liam Neeson (right with Thomas Brodie Sangster).
■ There'll be sketches from Mrs Brown's Boys, Reeves and Mortimer, a Graham Norton Show special, and Ed Sheeran has sung with children on the streets of Liberian capital Monrovia.

The Voice UK

8.30pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Now that Sir Tom and Ms H have got their teams sorted, they can sit back and relax. Tonight it's the turn of Will.i.am to put his six acts to the test. It's the same format as last week: the two singers who get the most viewers' votes go straight through to the next round, leaving Will to pick a third person to join them.

Whether he gives his personal email address to the departing contestants (as he did to Charlie Drew in the battle rounds, saying, "Let's connect") remains to be seen.

Gavin Rossdale performs tonight, before his acts take to the stage in tomorrow's show, when Will.i.am performs live. JR

Casualty

8.40pm BBC1

DRAMA Something very odd has happened to hitherto mild-mannered, nervous nurse David. He wakes up in a strange bed, covered in tattoos, only to put on the most hideous purple suit and crocodile shoes before he struts down the street like John Travolta in Saturday Night Fever.

It would be funny, only it isn't, as David (Jason Durr) is clearly unravelling now he's stopped taking the drugs prescribed for his mental health problems. It's painful to see his erratic behaviour escalate to the point where he makes highly inappropriate remarks to a dying patient. He also tries to bring sunshine into the life of curmudgeonly old dear Sally (Pam St Clement), but she sees right through him. ALISON GRAHAM TV EDITOR

Follow the Money

9.00pm, 10.00pm BBC4

DRAMA "The rissoles are ready, Albert" has to be my favourite subtitle in a decade of Scandi drama. Otherwise, this is serious business as the malignant giant Nova Bank closes in on small-fry Absalon Bank. Siblings Simon and Amanda, who run Absalon, try to contain Amanda's cocaine habit and must rely on new ally Claudia to rally their wavering shareholders.

Fraud cops Mads and Alf are like bottom feeders pecking at Nova's nether regions for scraps. How many small concerns has Nova forced into bankruptcy? Lowest in the food chain is henchman Nicky. He shafts his mate Bimse, blackmails and boots a banker half to death, but underneath seems quite a nice chap. PATRICK MULKERN

Line of Duty

12 midnight, 1.00am BBC1

DRAMA Series four of Jed Mercurio's visceral, wrong-footing police series starts soon, so if you need a reminder of where we left the AC-12 anti-corruption gang, catch up with this series-three re-run. In tonight's two episodes (see the rest nightly from Monday), Sgt Danny Waldron (Daniel Mays) leads a firearms team on a raid. But it ends badly, and our old pals DS Steve Arnott, DS Kate Fleming and the magnificent Supt Ted Hastings are brought in to get to the truth. AG

BACK TO THE 90s
Geri Horner reflects on the decade that launched her

Geri's 1990s: My Drive to Freedom

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY It's been 20 years since Geri Halliwell (now Horner) performed with her fellow Spice Girls at the Brits in a Union Jack mini-dress – a garment that still provides an apt visual summary of the daring and confidence of the 1990s. So the singer formerly known as Ginger Spice seems an obvious choice to take viewers back to the time of Cool Britannia, New Labour and Girl Power.

It's the latest in the BBC's My Generation strand and may struggle to match the cool majesty of Keith Richards's take on the 60s last year; it feels like more of a Geri-centric take on the era, charting her rise from a working-class upbringing in Watford to the moment she bought a sporty red car with her first "fat pay cheque" from Virgin Records (hence the title). Little wonder she calls it "a decade of hope, opportunity and change, in all areas of life". What went wrong, eh? BEN DOWELL

9.00 Geri's 1990s: My Drive to Freedom
RT Geri Horner shot to stardom as Ginger Spice in the 1990s when the "girl power" of the Spice Girls topped the world's charts and the Union Jack dress she wore came to epitomise "Cool Britannia". Here, Geri reflects on how a working-class girl from Watford came to symbolise the gender politics of a turbulent era when young people felt free to be themselves and break down barriers. She also reflects on some key events of the decade, and talks about her close friendship with George Michael, who offered invaluable support when she left the Spice Girls to embark on a solo career. See page 51.

Six Nations Rugby Live 3.30pm Livewire winger Jack Nowell could stretch the Scottish defence

3.30pm Six Nations Rugby Live

RT England v Scotland The old rivals do battle in this year's Calcutta Cup clash at Twickenham (kick-off 4.00), with the famous trophy and much national pride at stake.

Today's match is likely to be fought out in a more traditional fashion after England were bamboozled by Italy's "no-rucking" tactics for 40 minutes before coming out on top with a bonus-point victory to retain their 100 per cent record so far in defence of the title. Scotland haven't beaten England since 2008, but they played splendidly to defeat Wales 29–13 at Murrayfield last time out.

Presenter Mark Pougatch is joined by Sir Clive Woodward, Sir Ian McGeechan, Jonny Wilkinson and Greig Laidlaw. With commentary by Scott Hastings, Lawrence Dallaglio and Nick Mullins, and pitchside contributions from Dallaglio, Martin Bayfield and Jim Hamilton. See page 50.

Although a standard found-footage horror in many respects, writer/director Elliot Goldner's well-crafted feature debut wins extra points for having at its core the appealing double act of Gordon Kennedy and Robin Hill. Their easy-going chemistry firmly anchors this slow-burning but consistently witty shocker, which sends the pair to an isolated West Country church to gather evidence of an insidious presence. ALAN JONES

Miller's Crossing ★★★★★ 8.00pm Sky Greats

This Prohibition-era gangster saga from the Coen brothers is magnificent on all levels. It focuses on the friendship between politician Albert Finney and the power behind his throne, Gabriel Byrne, and the bloody Mob war that erupts when they fall in love with the same woman, Marcia Gay Harden. Byrne is simply outstanding as the cool, calculating catalyst around whom the whole vivid spectacle revolves. ALAN JONES

A weepie to wallow in

Me before You ★★★ Netflix

Emilia Clarke is the chirpiest of romantic leads in this story about a young woman who falls for the man she is employed to care for (Sam Claflin). The saccharine romance they go through may be hard to swallow, but their chemistry isn't, making the last act particularly affecting. JAMES LUXFORD

The pick of today's TV

HARD LABOUR
Sister Julienne (Jenny Agutter) helps Shelagh (Laura Main)

PICK OF THE DAY

Call the Midwife 8.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Once the final episode in the current series is over, the Thames Barrier will close and beacons warning of imminent flooding by a wash of tears must be lit across the land. It's as outrageously soppy as a television drama can ever be, so don't back away, there's no point, surrender to sobs and the full spectrum of human life – birth, marriage and death.

Sweet young couple Barbara and Tom decide to wed within three weeks, so the bride's vicar father can conduct the ceremony. Amid a twirl of dress fittings, Barbara (Charlotte Ritchie) takes advantage of the new family planning clinic, assuring a surprised Tom that "all measures will be in place for our wedding night". Oh, stop it, I'm blushing.

Meanwhile, Shelagh is puffing and panting in labour, Barbara does a nice thing for Phyllis and you'll leave Poplar for now, convinced that there's so much goodness in the world. ALISON GRAHAM

See feature: page 10

FA Cup Match of the Day Live

1.30pm BBC1 (kick-off 2pm)

Tottenham Hotspur v Millwall

Having dumped Leicester out of the Cup last month (possibly smashing the final nail into Claudio Ranieri's coffin in the process), Millwall's reward is a glamour tie against Spurs – and a coveted slot on national TV.

The League One side arrive in spectacular form, having beaten three Premier League sides in previous rounds – and at the time of writing unbeaten in 16 games. Also, they haven't conceded in 14 hours of football.

Surely they won't be capable of an upset at White Hart Lane, though, especially as the north Londoners have hit the net nine times in their three FA Cup ties. GARY ROSE

The Big Painting Challenge

6.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT "I am failing here," says the excellent Suman as she tries to draw a ballerina in motion. The series goes a bit Degas this week as the remaining painters are told to capture moving dancers on a static canvas. How? Well, they're pulled in two directions on that: the judges demand accuracy and proportion but if the contestants are too precise then mentors Pascal and Diana step in and tell them to break loose and be freer with the paint.

No wonder the hopeful amateurs are starting to look worn down by the process, confidence eroded and natural style scattered to the wind. But it's still good to see their work. Next: the final. DAVID BUTCHER

Robot Wars

7.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT Part of the fun of this new incarnation of Robot Wars is seeing old battlers from the original series return, only to be brought low by the new generation of faster, more powerful young 'bots. For example, last series saw the destruction of fan favourite Razer and the early defeat of the seemingly impregnable Behemoth, and we're sure the routings rankled for engineers once ranked among the best in the arena.

Still, a revamped Behemoth is back this week for another shot, taking on newer machines with names that sound like brands of male deodorant such as Cobra, Cherub and Eruption. Hopefully, there's life in the old robo-dog yet. HUW FULLERTON

Top Gear

8.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT Alfa Romeos are the car fan's car. The adage goes that you're not a true believer unless you've owned one. The marque is part of Fiat, which also owns Ferrari, leading some to dub Alfa's new saloon a sort of mid-market Ferrari-in-drag. Chris Harris puts that to the test by taking on a peculiarly Top Gear sort of challenge: can he drift the car sideways at speed through a car-shaped cut-out in a polystyrene wall, as in much-missed BBC1 game show Hole in the Wall? If he can't, it won't be for want of trying.

Elsewhere, Matt LeBlanc and Chris Harris drive supercars across America and David Tennant takes a spin in the new Reasonably Fast Car. DB

TV CV LEANNE BEST

■ Leanne Best stars as Debbie Smart in The Good Karma Hospital (9pm ITV).

■ The actress is best known for playing bohemian councillor Jane in Ripper Street, and starred as landlady Tina in last year's Cold Feet revival and teacher Teresa in Home Fires. Also in 2016, she starred in Line of Duty and Undercover.

■ She played Celia in Fortitude, has appeared in episodes of Tin Star and Black Mirror, and will star as Rose Deeks in the upcoming BBC Barbara Windsor biopic, Babs.

Dazzling Duets at the BBC

8.00pm BBC4

MUSIC The BBC archive again yields an embarrassment of riches. Taking it from the top are Stéphane Grappelli and Yehudi Menuhin having a ball duetting on Gershwin's I Got Rhythm on Parkinson in 1976. Piano star Lang Lang toys with his own father Lang Guoren on an erhu (Chinese violin) at the Proms in 2008.

From 1984, there's jazz piano improvisation from Oscar Peterson and André Previn. There are soaring operatic duets and, before it becomes too earnest, a spot of comedy pianism from Victor Borge and Sahan Arzruni, fighting over Liszt and one keyboard back in 1974. In all, an hour of scintillating musical conversation.

PATRICK MULKERN

SS-GB

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA It's just as well that our hero, Superintendent Douglas Archer, never has much work to do. In the aftermath of last week's bombing in Highgate, this senior police officer stands around mutely doing nothing, as if none of it were anything do with him. Later, he occupies himself with getting his son to safety and tracking down his resistance-sympathising sergeant, Harry. But the day job? Pah – the Nazis are very forgiving bosses.

Huth in particular is more concerned with his SS turf war against the Wehrmacht over what Dougie calls "the nucular experiments". Not a lot of this makes a great deal of sense or makes us care as much as we should, but it's still strangely, sleekly enjoyable. DB

Down the Mighty River with Steve Backshall

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Backshall is the perfect action-man naturalist for this kind of series. He can be kayaking down rapids one minute, spotting a bird of paradise the next, then he'll bump into remote villagers and converse in the local language. Here he's in Western New Guinea, navigating the Baliem river from its source 500km to the sea. Look out for what must be the best subtitle of the week as one local tells her village elder, "Papa, make sure your penis gourd is tied on properly." DB

See page 33

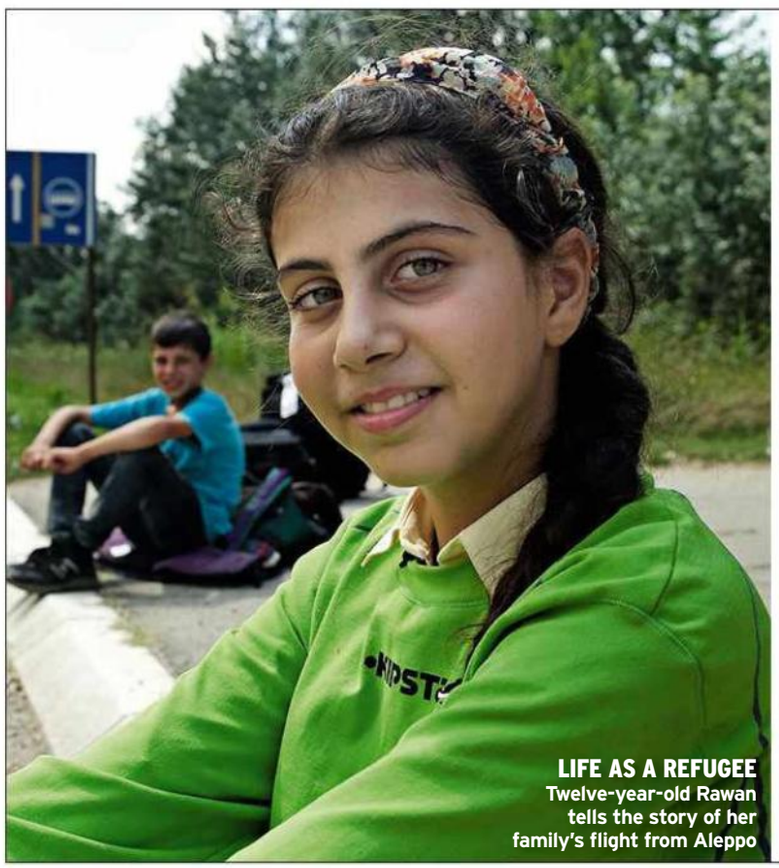

The Good Karma Hospital

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA The plotlines couldn't be more clearly signposted if they were painted on the side of a passing elephant, so when junior doctor Ruby announces she wants to take off travelling, you know that's never going to happen. Most of the other loose ends are tied up like a neat set of sutures, too. But while "Exotic Marigold Hospital" is about as sophisticated as Greg's beach bar cocktails, it's been engaging – surely it deserves a second series?

LIFE AS A REFUGEE
Twelve-year-old Rawan tells the story of her family's flight from Aleppo

War Child

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

Rawan is 12, with a beaming smile that rarely falters. She and her family were prosperous in their Syrian home town of Aleppo: "I came from a beautiful house, it had everything. We started crying when we left." Emran, 11, who speaks mellifluous English, left his parents in Afghanistan: "The Taliban started killing children as they walked to school so my father sent me to Europe." Both Rawan and Emran embarked on hellish journeys seeking sanctuary and even just a little kindness. This powerful, important film from award-winning director Jamie Roberts (The Jihadis Next Door) follows them as they try to build what lives they can in fetid refugee camps, on endless route marches through mountains and, in the case of Rawan's family, when they are held hostage by smugglers.

"I was young in Syria," says Rawan. "The road to here made me grow older." AG

First Knight ★★★

3.55pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

A terrible title but an idea ahead of its time, First Knight was an Arthurian romance that needed the Game of Thrones effect to make its clanging swords fashionable. Hence Guy Ritchie's new 3D action makeover, due in cinemas in May. Scimitars are cooler than Glocks this season, and with Charlie Hunnam (Sons of Anarchy), Jude Law and Aidan Gillen (erm, Game of Thrones) in the cast, it might just lance a lot. ANDREW COLLINS

Sky calls in its agents

Spy Sunday from 7.10am Sky Crime/Thriller

There's a whole day of espionage and megolamania to look forward to here, with Sky's dawn to dusk programme of globetrotting spy action. From London (Spooks: the Greater Good) and Paris (Ronin) to Bucharest (Dying of the Light) and everywhere else (Spectre, pictured), you'll be caught up in the world of shadowy organisations and secrecy, gadgets and car chases – and maybe the odd vodka martini. TOM FOLLEY

Escaping iPlayer

Papillon ★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

On its original release, the critics had few good words to say about this adaptation of Henri Charrière's account of his escape from Devil's Island. Steve McQueen is perhaps too enigmatic as the convict, but the film offers a harrowing study of confinement. DAVID PARKINSON

World Superbikes 7.00am Eurosport 2 Race two in the second round of this year's championship takes place in Buriram, Thailand, with much of the attention focused on Northern Ireland's Jonathan Rea, who's attempting to become the first rider to win three consecutive WSB titles. Rea topped the table last year 51 points ahead of Kawasaki team-mate Tom Sykes, with Chaz Davies third to complete a British 1–2–3. Davies finished the season strongly and could be a big threat to Rea. STEVE WALL

MONDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

SECRETS AND LIES
Will Trish (Julie Hesmondhalgh) reveal all to Cath (Sarah Parish)?

PICK OF THE DAY Broadchurch 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA OF THE WEEK The shockwaves from Trish Winterman's rape pulse through Broadchurch, where lives are woven together through long years of friendship and acquaintance. But suspicion casts a toxic cloud over those glowing bronze cliffs.

As the dogged Hardy and Miller (David Tennant and Olivia Colman) interview men who were at the 50th-birthday party where Trish was attacked: the audience sees other sides to the suspects; the shifty glances, the obfuscation.

Trish (Julie Hesmondhalgh) hangs on to a secret, and is being menaced by someone we don't see while her friends begin to doubt one another. It was Cath's (Sarah Parish) party and she's brittle with distrust of her own husband. Other male guests, including Trish's employer, farm shop owner Ed (Lenny Henry), sound hollow and grudging.

It's a great story with some punching surprises and moments of poignancy when you least expect them. ALISON GRAHAM

A Service of Celebration for Commonwealth Day

2.45pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE The UK's largest multi-faith celebration takes place at Westminster Abbey every year with testimonies, readings, songs and musical performances reflecting the diversity of the Commonwealth. The theme this year is "a peace-building Commonwealth", an inspirational choice at a time of increasing instability in the world.

Traditionally, the Queen and other members of the royal family attend, with senior politicians, dignitaries and almost 1,000 children from schools and youth groups. Reeta Chakrabarti presents live coverage from the Abbey. JANE RACKHAM

7.30pm BBC1 (kick-off 7.45pm)

Chelsea v Manchester United

Whatever your views on the rights and wrongs of live football on primetime BBC1 on a school night, the gods of the FA Cup draw have smiled on them here. This is a quarter-final you could eat with a spoon. Jose Mourinho leads United to his old stomping ground of Stamford Bridge, where in 2015 he guided Chelsea to a Premier League title, only to be sacked later that year.

There's also a more recent score to settle in that Antonio Conte's well-oiled machine thumped United 4–0 at their last meeting and Chelsea now sit regally at the top of the table. But in a cup tie, anything's possible... DAVID BUTCHER

Mary Berry Everyday

8.30pm BBC2

FOOD This week's dishes are what Mary Berry calls crowd pleasers. Not that many of us would welcome more than 1,000 visitors to our garden for a church fundraiser as calmly as she does. The trick, she says, is "to make it simple, be organised and get as much done in advance as you can". Even so, Mary...

But there's something wonderfully reassuring about Mary's food. Watching her in her enviable kitchen preparing a rich beef and ale stew, a sinfully creamy artichoke dip (which is OK, apparently, because she's serving it with vegetable crudités) or a glorious no-cook cheesecake makes you feel everything is right with the world. JR

Meet the Lords

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY It's the last in the series and the day of the Queen's Speech – the busiest of the year for the staff at the Houses of Parliament. It's also the buzziest, apparently, with all the peers getting dressed up in their ceremonial finery – apart from Labour peer Lord Foulkes, who considers it an annoying interruption to business – and Black Rod (or the Darkness, as he's known to some) checking the tiniest of details.

But the Palace is showing its age, especially the Victorian sewage system, which is struggling to cope with the increased volume of... er, waste generated by MPs and Lords. More seriously, the peers are voting on Article 50 – and they've got a lot to say about it. JR

THE WEEK IN SOAPLAND

CORONATION STREET
Nathan is in need of an alibi once again when he's arrested for assault. Enter Bethany (right), who needs to secure her boyfriend's release so that he can make it for dinner at the Platts'. But how will Sarah and Gary react when they discover that Nathan is older than they are? Michelle is playing dirty to get what she wants: first, she hacks Steve's email account, then she makes a move on Nick! But will he respond?

EASTENDERS
More stress for the Carters as Mick throws himself into turning things around, while Tina struggles with Sylvie. Bex reveals that she's not going back to school. And Lauren decides to visit Max at work. Will she discover that he's some kind of sleeper agent with a mission to raze the Square to the ground? I know, it's ridiculous.

EMMERDALE
Well, that didn't take long, did it? Mere weeks after their wedding, #Robron are in trouble. Admittedly, Aaron's prison sentence hasn't exactly been a honeymoon period, but expect the trouble to really start when Robert realises that his husband has been taking drugs. By Thursday, Robert has hit the bottle – and, yes, he's made a move on Rebecca. DAVID BROWN

Britain in Focus: a Photographic History

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY In the second of his engaging three-part exploration of the history of photography, Eamonn McCabe turns to photojournalism, and how it has shaped the way we consume the news. It's particularly personal for McCabe, who was present at the Heysel Stadium disaster in Brussels in 1985, and captured images of the tragedy in which 39 people were killed.

McCabe looks at the first photos used by British newspapers, and how photojournalism was used to report events in the First World War.

Later on, he finds out about the first people to treat photography as an art form, and meets photographers pioneering in the field today.

How'd You Get So Rich?

10.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY This is a simple pleasure. Nothing fancy, just comedian Katherine Ryan getting "up in the grill" of very rich people she follows around. It works because the voyeuristic side is jaw-dropping – tonight, a yacht party for Monaco billionaires – but also because Ryan's cheeky, say-anything approach is funny without getting overly judgemental.

Yes, some of the opulence is obscene, but Ryan's approach is that we may as well enjoy drinking it all in, and mocking it slightly.

Look out for a very funny scene where she deliberately (and unprintably) mishears Pimlico Plumbers' cockney boss Charlie's pronunciation. DAVID BUTCHER

Murder in Italy: Storyville

10.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Thirteen-year-old keen gymnast Yara Gambirasio was an average girl from an average family in an average town, but her murder in November 2010 prompted an investigation unprecedented in Italian criminal law. With little evidence to go on, the police pieced together an intricate puzzle from one fragment of suspect DNA – with no national database, they had to build their own from 23,000 samples. This absorbing film follows the painstaking detective work through each twist and turn.

At the centre of it all is the commanding figure of magistrate Letizia Ruggeri, as resolute a detective as any you'd find in a crime drama. DAVID CRAWFORD

LIFE IS SWEET
Madeline (Reese Witherspoon) is making a new friend

Big Little Lies

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA New series You couldn't ask for a better cast for David E Kelley's high-class dramatisation of Liane Moriarty's novel of dark deeds among the middle classes (see page 145), transposed from Australia to sunny California.

It starts off with a death. The residents of Monterey all have their theories as to what has happened, but first we have to get to know our protagonists. There's stay-at-home mum Madeline (Reese Witherspoon), her friend Celeste (Nicole Kidman) and new arrival Jane (Shailene Woodley). Everyone's friendly – "We pound people with nice," says Madeline – but under the surface tiny fissures are just waiting to be exposed. There are even ructions at the local kindergarten. But could these differences lead to murder?

The script fizzes, there are petty conflicts we can all recognise, and Witherspoon, in particular, is magnificent. Oh, and the interior design is to die for... GILL CRAWFORD

The Weight Cut

from 10am BBC3

Mixed martial arts – which is increasingly replacing boxing as a spectacle for young adults who like fighting sports – is all the more dangerous thanks to its weight limits. As this lid-lifting doc reveals, some contenders are risking their health to shed the required pounds before a bout.

CHILDREN'S CHOICE

My Life: New Boys in Town

5.30pm CBBC

At 12, Syrian Adel knows what it's like to be forced from your home, to go to a country where no one knows you and you can't even speak the language. Now he is trying to help young refugees cope with their new life in Bristol.

The teams' most recent encounter here was in October when the self-appointed "special one" saw his team succumb 4–0. Since then, Chelsea have steam-rollered all-comers to Stamford Bridge and have made the Premier League title theirs to lose. But United are in a rich vein of form themselves and are unbeaten in the league since that debacle at the Bridge. It has all the hallmarks of a titanic encounter. A Divine delight

Hairspray ★★★★ 9.00pm TCM

Not the John Travolta update, but the original affectionate salute to Z-grade teen movies from John Waters returns to TCM today after five years away. Ricki Lake stars as the fun-loving Tracy Turnblad, who becomes the new teen dancing queen much to the horror of wealthy snobs Debbie Harry and Sonny Bono. The soundtrack is a constant delight, as is the eclectic cast, which includes Waters regular Divine in his last movie. JOHN FERGUSON

Greta gets broody

P Maggie's Plan ★★★ 6.10pm Sky Premiere

Playing out like old-school Woody Allen, writer/director Rebecca Miller's screwball comedy is a consistently engaging diversion. Greta Gerwig is the insecure kook of the title, who plans to have a baby whether she finds Mr Right or not. After settling on pickle-selling sperm donor Travis Fimmel, she then clicks with married novelist Ethan Hawke. Gerwig's offbeat charm shines through in a sharp comedy full of funny one-liners. ALAN JONES

A star in the making

Cruel Intentions 2 ★★ 10.55pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

Catch five-time Oscar nominee Amy Adams in one of her early roles, slipping on Sarah Michelle Gellar's shoes in a prequel to high-school romp Cruel Intentions. Initially shot as a TV series, it won't bag any awards, but Adams lends it a touch of class. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL

Tennis 8.00pm Sky Sports 3 The ATP Indian Wells Masters, the first of the nine Masters 1000 Series events, reaches the third round on day five. Novak Djokovic has been the dominant force here in recent history, winning the last three tournaments in a row and lifting the trophy five times in total. The Serb swept all before him at the start of last year before ending 2016 looking strangely vulnerable, but the world number two clearly has a liking for this Californian stage of the Tour. STEVE WALL

CIDER INSIDE HER
Kate Humble tries out Natasha Bradley's Devon brew

PICK OF THE DAY

Back to the Land with Kate Humble

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY This could so easily have given a romanticised view of rural entrepreneurs. But while a few do extol the delights of exchanging an office job or frenetic city life for more artisan countryside pursuits, the programme's fairly realistic about starting your own business.

Kate Humble and Geetie Singh-Watson are in south Devon where they meet six innovators, including cheery cider-maker Natasha. After seven years of "making every mistake possible", she's expanding her business. However, it's precarious when you're reliant on nature: a wet spring results in such a poor crop of apples that Natasha has to rethink.

No one's making a fortune – a few are only breaking even – but their passion and commitment is obvious. Among them is a pair of charcutiers who set up with an investment of just £250, a 21-year-old with a flock of rare Dartmoor sheep and a husband-and-wife team using wool to make solid furniture. Yes, you read that correctly. JANE RACKHAM

Racing: Cheltenham Festival

1.00pm ITV

SPORT The most dramatic National Hunt meeting of the year is under starter's orders with ITV, the new terrestrial home of racing, promising to pull out all the stops in its coverage.

There's no other racing festival quite like Cheltenham – more than a quarter of a million punters will pass through the gates over its four days and the total prize money exceeds £4 million.

Today's big event is the Champion Hurdle, while the Gold Cup is on Friday, with Colin Tizzard's Cue Card and Native River among the favourites. The festivities coincide with St Patrick's Day and the Irish will be in town in numbers. STEVE WALL

The Best of British Takeaways

7.00pm BBC2

FOOD New series Fish and chips: there couldn't be a more British dish. Except, of course, its origins aren't really British at all. As well as giving a history lesson about one of our favourite takeaways, Cherry Healey and Tom Kerridge have selected three of the country's 10,000 chippies to go fryer-to-fryer in a Brixham harbourside competition.

Each restaurant has a speciality or a secret batter recipe that they reckon makes their food the best, but their final challenge is to reinvent fish and chips. One gives the dish a Mediterranean twist with battered halloumi, another flavours the batter with curry powder. Hmm, not sure about those. JR

The Secret Life of the Zoo

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Chester Zoo's 96 keepers know mealtimes are a useful way of exercising animals' brains. Challenging them to find treats hidden inside strange containers or in odd places is better than handing them food on a plate. Sadly, although cheetah Kinky Tail can eventually find the hidden food, she keeps vomiting it up.

One of the smartest species in the zoo is the chimp, but they can be very aggressive, especially when a new female is being introduced to the troop: "Chimps give Freddy Krueger nightmares," says keeper Niall, grimly. On a happier note, we meet an adorable family of otters, including runt of the litter Bo. JR

Portrait Artist of the Year

8.00pm, 9.00pm Sky Arts

ART We've had two months of burning concentration, fascinating demonstrations of technique and commendable patience on the part of the sitters. And tonight – in the most dignified, cerebral and soothing talent competition on television – the search for Britain's best portraitist concludes.

Sitting for the three finalists is actor Tom Courtenay, with a £10,000 commission awaiting the artist who captures him best. As ever, they'll be buoyed by Frank Skinner and Joan Bakewell, and their progress will be scrutinised by judges Tai Shan Schierenberg, Kathleen Soriano and Kate Bryan, before the trio decide on the winner. SARAH CARSON

TV CV ADAM JAMES

■ Adam James plays King Harold in tonight's conclusion to 1066: a Year to Conquer England (9pm BBC2).
■ James was recently seen in Doctor Foster, playing Neil, the Fosters' accountant and family friend. He played Cleveland O Petty, a paratrooper in Band of Brothers, was lawyer Pete Guildford in Casualty, and has been in Love Soup, Grantchester, Ashes to Ashes, Silent Witness and Endeavour.
■ Drama runs in his family: his mother is Liver Bird Polly James, his godfather Jon Pertwee.

The Replacement

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA You can see daylight through the plot holes in the last chapter of this silly thriller as rivals Ellen and Paula square up to one another in close-up after close-up. Yes, there's lots of meaningful staring but they might as well be eyeing up a prize marrow as sending pulsating glances of hatred.

As their relationship disintegrates, Ellen (Morven Christie) must convince everyone in her life that she's not paranoid and that Paula (Vicky McClure) really is out to get her. Meanwhile, Paula, who looks oddly like Mrs Danvers in the film of Rebecca, adopts various poses in some great-looking clothes.

Naturally the men behave like idiots and can't see the madness in front of them. ALISON GRAHAM

1066: a Year to Conquer England

9.00pm BBC2

HISTORY One of the problems with imagining medieval warfare is that no one today has seen a sword used in the heat of battle. In re-enactments we see blunt-edged weapons clanging against each other, but what would a bloody battlefield actually look like?

This series, with its fairly clunking dramatic scenes, doesn't have the answer, but it does at least have Dan Snow taking a properly sharp sword to a big hunk of meat hung from a tree, and when we see what it can do at a stroke, it's an eye-opener. As for the history, we've reached the crunch point in the story as William lands on the south coast – and promptly falls flat on his face. DAVID BUTCHER

PROPERTY In this über-aspirational series, jammy old Charlie Luxton gets to nose around houses in what must be the ideal environment for human habitation. In Ibiza, the architectural designer struts out onto balconies of ever-increasing stunningness, blown along by music that's trying a bit too hard to be anthemic.

At first it feels like an advert, but the marriage of luxury interiors and azure landscapes is constantly mesmerising. GARY ROSE

COMEDY OF THE WEEK

Money worries prompt Rob and Sharon to consider a downsize (of their house) and an outsize (modelling career for him). Poor, lumbering Rob. But at least they are getting on better, in a series that always works best when the two of them are in the same room together taking on the world ("You look like a magician," they tell their jewellery-laden estate agent).

Having said that, there is still some joy to be had from Sharon's mate, the trying Fran (Ashley Jensen), who is also looking to improve her fortunes via a surgical makeover. Her plastic surgeon is played by hunky Douglas Hodge, so she may be in luck. BEN DOWELL

IF THE SHOE FITS
Louise (Keeley Hawes), David (Reece Shearsmith) and Sally (Rosa Strudwick) are a troubled family

Inside No 9

10.00pm BBC2 (N Ireland: 11.15pm)

DRAMA In Diddle Diddle Dumpling, househusband David (Reece Shearsmith) is out jogging when he spots a single black shoe abandoned in the street right outside his house. He becomes obsessed with finding its owner – much to the consternation of his wife, Louise (Keeley Hawes, brilliant as ever). Her attempts to distract him are to no avail – he's fixated on that one wretched shoe. But what is really going on in this increasingly intense short story? Perhaps the truth is hidden in plain sight.

Popping up in supporting roles are Steve Pemberton (as an amiable colleague) and Mathew Baynton (crafty casting), as well as Danny Baker on the radio. But this is very much Shearsmith's show as he sensitively portrays David's descent into insanity.

It's hauntingly directed by Guillem Morales – and, as always, you must keep alert to the very end. PATRICK MULKERN

Happy birthday, sir

Get Carter ★★★★ 9.00pm TCM

My most recent audience with Michael Caine, who turns 84 today, was to discuss his first art house film, Youth. He also guffawed at the possibility of being in a film of the Hatton Garden robbery. The time before, in 1999, he was still insecure about being under-appreciated and seen as "a vulgarian", despite esteem for classics like Get Carter and a whole new chapter ahead in The Prestige (Sky Crime/Thriller) and The Dark Knight. ANDREW COLLINS

Disney shows the way

Life, Animated ★★★★ BBC iPlayer FREE TO VIEW

This rewarding documentary shows how love, sensitive parenting and watching tons of kids' movies can save a life. Owen Suskind was diagnosed with autism at an early age, but learned how to speak and communicate with others by echoing lines of dialogue from Disney films. Now in his 20s and living semi-independently, Owen is a walking success story, even if there remain gaps in his understanding that films can't fill. LESLIE FELPERIN

Watch it on Prime

Song of the Sea
★★★★ Amazon Prime

This enchanting fairy tale centres on a young Irish boy and his sister, who embark on a fantastical, cross-country journey involving much magical menace. With its beautiful animation and haunting score, this is a gorgeous piece of work that deserves to be celebrated.

Champions League Football 7.00pm BT Sport 2

Leicester City at last showed some of their spirit from last season when they lost by just 2–1 at Sevilla in the first leg of their last-16 tie, despite being outplayed for long spells. Tonight they try to overturn that deficit in front of their own supporters. Jamie Vardy scored that precious away goal in classic poaching fashion, and Foxes fans will pray his predatory instincts have been restored on a permanent basis. Also tonight, Juventus v FC Porto. STEVE WALL

GOOD COMPANIONS
The VIP OAPs say farewell to India

PICK OF THE DAY

The Real Marigold Hotel 9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY It's been delightful seeing the celebrity seniors embracing such a different lifestyle and culture. But I question whether it's a realistic portrait of retirement when they've had the luxury of being chaperoned, guided and chauffeured in a way non-TV folk wouldn't. They're unlikely to retire to India but as a travelogue-with-a-difference it's been fun.

In this final episode Sheila Ferguson gets emotional over an alternative therapy session, Paul Nicholas and Dennis Taylor take a slow train to Ooty, and Bill Oddie invites Rustie Lee and Miriam Stoppard on a wildlife expedition. All have realised that getting older is no barrier to enjoying life, while good company and having a laugh is definitely the best medicine. JANE RACKHAM

Doctors

1.45pm BBC1

DAYTIME CHOICE Mrs Tembe, Charles, Heston and Ruhma are at the theatre to watch a performance of Cosi fan tutte but during the interval, Charles spots someone from work he doesn't like and moans to Heston about him. Suddenly JJ appears and Mrs Tembe realises he has been the target of Charles and Heston's snide comments.

Elsewhere, Emma is irritated when she spots waitress Bella (Alice McCarthy) sketching her. But she's persuaded not to complain to the restaurant boss when Bella explains she's an art student who is desperate to keep her job. Later a customer recognises Bella as a lap dancer and his inappropriate behaviour results in police involvement. JR

The House That £100k Built

8.00pm BBC2

PROPERTY Neil and Amanda have decided to build, from scratch, a "medieval" beamed, timber-framed house in East Anglia with just £50,000 (so this should really be titled The House That £50k Built). Neil plans to do all the work himself and he does, bless him, toiling away for what turns out to be more than 18 months. Piers Taylor and Kieran Long do their best to cheerlead as they take the couple to stunning examples of barn-type places to show them what their own home might look like.

Neil and Amanda are accompanied by their placid baby daughter, who grows to toddlerdom through the build, falling asleep as Piers and Kieran make their final visit. ALISON GRAHAM

Hidden Restaurants with Michel Roux Jr

8.00pm C4

FOOD Michel Roux Jr falls in love with a fish shack serving street food slap on the beach at Tynemouth. And he's not the only one: the place is always rammed and its owner Adam Riley can get up to 500 visitors on a busy Saturday night. Inspired by the laid-back feel of the place, Roux Jr makes gourmet fish burgers for his hip, 18-cover restaurant in a Kent oast house. Though anyone who insists on having restaurant food served on actual plates might baulk at the starter being served in plant pots.

Elsewhere, he visits a tiny restaurant in an unprepossessing part of Newcastle city centre set up by an amateur cook in two shipping containers. AG

Incredible Medicine: Dr Weston's Casebook

9.00pm BBC2

SCIENCE Gabriel Weston's first case study this week introduces us to the ultimate endurance runner. Dean has run 50 marathons in 50 days and taken part in races of up to 200 miles. He once ran for as long as he could – which turned out to be three days and three nights. "That third night without sleep was really vexing," he says mildly. But he still did 350 miles without stopping.

How his body can manage this is the sort of thing the series explains well. We also meet the ridiculously bendy Claudia, whose hyper-mobile joints let her do things – like brushing her hair with her feet – that are both impressive and slightly disturbing. DAVID BUTCHER

HOW TO FIND HIDDEN RESTAURANTS

Stephen Leigh, series producer of Hidden Restaurants with Michel Roux Jr (8pm C4), says, "When finding where to eat, we looked for places that were visually interesting, had unusual food and were worth the extra effort to get there – not places that were wacky for the sake of it.

"We didn't want places that were so secret you couldn't find them – but we stayed off Tripadvisor and away from main roads. We mostly avoided supper clubs, because they can be too exclusive for all viewers, and we deliberately didn't do an episode on London – we wanted to show that good food is a national interest, not just for the 'metropolitan elite'."

Leigh adds, "Food blogs are a really good place to go if you're looking for hidden restaurants near you."

Benidorm

9.00pm ITV

SITCOM It's a joy to have Janine Duvitski back as Jacqueline, the sozzled swinger ("I've been in more positions than a Russian gymnast"). She's been a stalwart of Benidorm since day one, even if these days she's given little more to do than belch.

This week, Tiger and Joey strip down to their boxers as bar promoters and Kenneth suspects Troy is spying on Blow & Go salon, with a reveal so guessable, it shrieks. The unfunny Mr Wu is rolled out again, and little Jodie is up for an audition. Actress Honor Kneafsey is only 12, but has such sparkle she can hold her own against her larger-than-life elders. (She'll play a young Barbara Windsor in the Beeb's forthcoming Babs biopic.) PATRICK MULKERN

Pedalling Dreams: the Raleigh Story

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY There are some lovely, arch little films in this captivating chunk of nostalgia about Raleigh bicycles, with men in suits talking in that clipped way about bike making. As always, Testimony Films has done an amazing job in mining rich seams of archive footage.

Former Raleigh workers talk with misty-eyed delight about their former employer's Nottingham factory and the paternalistic approach of founder Frank Bowden. The company had its own ballroom and paid for an annual outing to Blackpool. "It was a cracking do," says one ex-employee.

So prepare to wallow in childhood memories, particularly about your Raleigh Chopper... AG

Mystery of the Man on the Moor

10.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY On a chilly December day in 2015 a man was found dead, killed by strychnine poisoning, on bleak Saddleworth Moor near Oldham. But police could find no clue as to his identity, despite huge press appeals.

This engrossing and poignant documentary follows Greater Manchester police as they spend a year painstakingly hunting for leads. One officer goes through hundreds of hours of CCTV: "It's not like in the films, where straight away you see the right person." For the entire team the need to find a name for the man they called "Neil Dovestone", after the spot where he was found, became personal. "It touched our hearts," says one detective. AG

DRAMA New series A man is woken by the noise of machinery. As the camera pans up we see he is tied to one of a helicopter's three rotor blades, which begin to rotate. It doesn't end well.

So begins an eight-part Scandi-noir that combines the current twin fads of eerie remote location (mountainous Kiruna in Sweden) and bi-national policier (it's a Swedish-French co-production).

The victim is identified as a French national, so Parisian homicide cop Kahina (Leila Bekhti) is sent to help the local investigation headed by jaded prosecutor Rutger (Peter Stormare) and his timid deputy, Anders (Gustaf Hammarsten).

Despite the baroque prelude and a later, equally outré dispatching, it's very much to the drama's credit that the protagonists' private lives are just as intriguing. Cinematically filmed, this is simultaneously otherworldly and somehow very human. MARK BRAXTON

Exploding onto Netflix

P The Nice Guys ★★★★ Netflix

Shane Black's breezy buddy movie sees louche gumshoe Ryan Gosling and sourpuss leg-breaker Russell Crowe drawn into a missing-person case involving the adult entertainment industry, Mob killers and municipal corruption. Perfect star chemistry (Gosling has a ball playing the fool; Crowe proves a fabulous straight man), snappy dialogue and laugh-out-loud hilarity ensure there's never a dull moment. JEREMY ASPINALL

In a killer's crosshairs

Tower Block ★★★★ My5 FREE TO VIEW

The top-floor residents of a derelict East End tower block come under attack from a psycho sniper in this riveting splatter thriller, available on catch-up. With the lifts booby-trapped and the exits obstructed, the killer has thought of every last detail to divide and conquer the panic-stricken sitting targets. Of the cast, Sheridan Smith stands out as the accidental heroine, while Jack O'Connell genially sends up his hardman persona. ALAN JONES

Caring, sharing Danes

P The Commune
★★★★ 10.10pm
Sky Premiere

This bittersweet study of a marriage in decline sees Ulrich Thomsen and Trine Dyrholm invite others into their mansion home to share the cost. But while the experiment itself flourishes, the couple wilfully sabotages their suburban utopia.

After Manchester City beat AS Monaco 5–3 in that crazy last-16 first-leg match, the sides reconvene in France to finish the job – there should be goals! Radamel Falcao, who struggled when he was at Manchester United and with Chelsea, showed his true worth as he scored two of Monaco's goals against City, the second an exquisite finish. Pep Guardiola says City need to score – he clearly believes, and fears, that the Ligue 1 outfit will. STEVE WALL

THURSDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

NORTHWARD BOUND
Uhtred (Alexander Dreymon) is on a mission for king and family

PICK OF THE DAY

The Last Kingdom 9.00pm BBC2

DRAMA As we return to the chaos and cruelty of ninth-century England, you could be forgiven for being confused. The swirl of plot information and new characters delivered in the first half-hour here risk blunting what should be – and was in the first series – an axe-sharp historical drama.

But the important thing is that we're back with Uhtred, Bernard Cornwell's likeable, long-haired warrior who, as part Anglo-Saxon and part Dane, balances on the faultline of his time. Having won a great victory for King Alfred, Uhtred now heads north to rescue his sister and, as a detour, help install a new king of Cumberland.

This series is often seen as a sort of own-brand Game of Thrones, with chunks of proper history. But for full value we really need lashings of the fighting, sex and intrigue it does best. At least with the return of Uhtred's old foe, the kohl-eyed Kjartan the Cruel, we have a baddie worth his salt. DAVID BUTCHER

7.00pm, 8.00pm ITV

SOAP The focus tonight is on two couples you know should be happy together, but who the writers just can't help heaping misery upon. First up: #Robron, whose recent wedding-day vows now seem like a lifetime ago, thanks to Aaron's drug-taking in prison and Robert's boozing. Throw in Rebecca for good measure and you can't help but wonder whether they'll make it to their one-year anniversary.

And then we have Zak and Lisa, who appear to be at an impasse when it comes to their relationship. Thankfully, there's an injection of much-needed fun thanks to – of all things – a drove of pigs that are in need of rounding up... DAVID BROWN

The Big Bang Theory

8.30pm E4

SITCOM "This doesn't happen very often, but here comes a hug." The most surprising thing about that line (and hug) is that it comes from touch-phobic Sheldon. The cause of such a spontaneous outburst? Leonard giving him a ticket to "the ultimate train experience". It's not an entirely altruistic gesture from Leonard, however, and fans will enjoy Sheldon having the last laugh.

Raj and Stuart, meanwhile, divide the child-minding duties when Penny and Amy take baby-blues Bernadette for a girls' night out. As they drive off there's a piquant female reflection on recapturing youth, but in a breezy sitcom of this brevity it's not given quite the oxygen it deserves. MARK BRAXTON

Prime Suspect 1973

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA At last there's a bit of dramatic meat on Prime Suspect 1973's skinny bones, with the release from jail of hard man Clifford Bentley. He's played by Alun Armstrong, who brings with him an air of barely suppressed menace and some momentum to the story.

Unfortunately there's still too much of the speak-your-weight detective inspector and his "You were only supposed to blow the bloody doors off" Lahndan accent. Luckily he's routinely struck dumb by the lovely Jane Tennison, the probationary WPC who sits at her typewriter, soaking up the atmosphere of the squad room. The squad room where no one appears to smoke. In a 1973 cop shop? Really? ALISON GRAHAM

Smile! The Nation's Family Album

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY "Makes you think all the world's a sunny day," sang Paul Simon in Kodachrome, a line that bottles some of the appeal of both the family snapshot and this lovely and evocative programme. It charts the importance and changing nature of family photos, from the era of prohibitive Victorian portraits to cost-free digitals. Watch a time-lapse film of Cory, whose picture was taken every day for 21 years (see p6), and hear Joanne talk of her dying relative: "We don't just need to remember the days when everything was perfect..." Hats off to the researchers for poring over countless prints and stories, and for capturing the warmth and quiet heroism of non-celebrity lives. MB

Walks with My Dog

9.00pm More4

DOCUMENTARY Kirsty Wark and her 20-month-old labrador Stella have the best stomping ground of this week's showbiz personality-pooch pairings – the stunning Isle of Arran in North Ayrshire, where a nostalgic Wark warmly recalls her childhood holidays.

On the South Downs, Julian Clary is joined by his canine companion Albert. The comedian is in typically saucy form as he forages for dinner and visits Anne of Cleves's home in Lewes, East Sussex, where he meets Martin, the Vistors' Services Assistant. "I'm a visitor," says Julian to Martin, "and I'd like you to service me." And Bill Bailey is back with his rescue dog Louie, enjoying the beauty of Exmoor. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Fortitude

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

DRAMA Going into an abandoned mine in any television drama is never a good idea. Going into an abandoned mine in Fortitude is a really terrible idea. No good can possibly come of it, considering there's a homicidal shaman on the loose. As the body count keeps clicking ever upwards, big men with big beards growl at one another, usually in Fortitude's grim-looking bar. Everyone is even more angry and on edge after what happened to their beloved governor Hildy. Her husband, police chief Eric, doesn't know what to do with himself, so he smashes up the office furniture.

Meanwhile, Natalie, the "reindeer vet with a grudge", looks peaky. AG

John Bishop: In Conversation with...

9.00pm W

TALK New series Most TV chat shows have a handful of guests plugging their film/TV series/book and hopefully telling a funny anecdote or two. John Bishop's show is different. It's more like Piers Morgan's Life Stories as there's only one guest (tonight it's actress Lindsay Lohan), so the conversations are more intimate and occasionally revealing.

In the brief clip we saw, Lohan opens up about her life and career, including a difficult relationship with her father, whom she describes as a Jekyll and Hyde character. JR

Extremely British Muslims

10.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY Abdul tries to rouse his teenage stepsons for morning prayers. He's keen to impose a rather stricter religious observance on them than they're used to. They grew up in Pakistan, whereas he grew up in Dudley and married their mother seven days after meeting her on Facebook. Abdul is a convert to Islam, known as Shaun until he converted. He's steeped in all the detailed rules of Islam, down to having to enter a toilet with your left foot.

It's clear these rules of Islam (the theme of this final programme) have given structure to Abdul's life and we meet others for whom they matter. But as an imam points out, wisely, "It's what's inside that counts." DB

Presenter Sara Cox is getting her hands dirty

The Great Pottery Throw Down

8.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT Comedian and ceramicist Johnny Vegas is the guest judge in tonight's semi-final, much to the glee of the four remaining contestants.

His challenge is brisk and odd – to make a teapot in a minute. Kate Malone, who was Vegas's degree course tutor, tells us that an example of this particular signature piece is in the V&A.

But this is just a jolly interlude. The real meat of the penultimate week is the Big Make. The little gang must make a toilet, they must decorate it and, crucially, they must plumb it in properly so it flushes without incident.

One semi-finalist wants to make a turtle shape so whoever's sitting there "will see a turtle head peeping out from between their legs". Er, lovely. AG

JOHNNY POTTER

"I taught at Middlesex Poly back in the 90s and I was Johnny Vegas's tutor," says Kate Malone, whose former student (right) joins her as a guest judge on The Great Pottery Throw Down tonight.

"I was constantly saying, 'You're really clever but you're not doing anything.' He ended up getting a low grade, and has been trying to get his own back on me ever since. His breakthrough came when he was drunk on stage and he threw on a pottery wheel using beer instead of water."

The first episode of Danny Baker's autobiographical sitcom isn't as confident in its storytelling as later editions, and Peter Kay's accent takes some getting used to, but it's still a warm rush of 1970s nostalgia – and the series develops into a crafted gem. First shown in 2015.

8.00 Shop Well for Less?
3/6 Series 2. The Williams family in north Wales are living a life of luxury in a home jam-packed with designer brands. Mum Katy has over £1,500 worth of make-up and won't be seen in the same outfit twice, dad Wayne likes to treat himself to luxury brands, and even eight-year-old Holly prefers outfits with the right label. Steph McGovern and Alex Jones get to the bottom of the problem by raiding the house and helping the family set up a pop-up shop filled with their belongings. The reality of their spending comes as a big shock to the Williamses, but after a week of trying out less expensive products and enjoying more time together as a family, will they be able to embrace the changes and curb their designer lifestyle?
Series producer Fiona Gay; Exec producer Jo Scarratt-Jones (S) (HD)

RT 7/8 Series 2. It's the week of the semi-final, and just four potters remain. For the throw down, comedian Johnny Vegas – a former pupil of Kate Malone – steps up to the wheel in place of judge Keith Brymer Jones. Can the contestants top his feat of throwing a working teapot in one minute by throwing five in five minutes? For the main make, the potters must hand-build and decorate a fully functional toilet over four gruelling days. Whose lavatory will be exhibited as pot of the week, and whose ambitions to make it to the final will be flushed right out of the pottery? Sara Cox presents. See p101.

Twilight ★★★ 9.00pm Sony Movie Channel FREEVIEW

If you're wondering who's singing Let Me Sign over one of the most moving sequences in the film (review, p44), it's Robert Pattinson, who composed the song himself independently of the production. When director Catherine Hardwicke finally persuaded him to play it for her (believe it or not, he's a very shy chap), she listened to it several times and, "Every time it sounded different, this raw feeling – that was my favourite day of filming." SUE ROBINSON

The Searchers ★★★★★ 10.20am TCM

Like Monument Valley, where it was filmed, John Ford's western of revenge and reconciliation is massive and unmissable. As John Wayne sets out to kill both the Comanche butcher of his brother's family and the abducted niece who, in his eyes, has turned native, his five-year quest becomes a search for his own soul. There's more Wayne western movie magic later with Rio Bravo and Angel and the Badman. TOM HUTCHINSON

Downhill all the way

P Attack of the Lederhosen Zombies

★★ 9.35pm Sky Premiere

A group of snowboarders get more than they bargained for when the ski resort they are stranded at suffers a zombie outbreak. This low-budget spoof will appeal to devotees of the undead genre, but it's too amateurish to stand out from the staggering crowd. JAMES LUXFORD

FRIDAY Choices The pick of today's TV

PICK OF THE DAY Tony Robinson: Coast to Coast 8.00pm Channel 5

DOCUMENTARY New series There's an element of Slow TV to this. The scene where workmen at Honister slate mine in Cumbria are chiselling off perfectly flat tiles from great hunks of rock is a pleasure to watch – it could happily make an hour's documentary on BBC4. Or half an hour, anyway.

And that's about the only activity Tony Robinson doesn't join in with, as he crosses England from west to east, helping to make gourmet scotch eggs and craft beer as he goes. Fortunately, the have-a-go presenting doesn't feel too contrived and even if it did, the landscapes are so pole-axingly beautiful it wouldn't matter. Afternoon sunshine on a broad Cumbrian valley is more or less unbeatable.

Starting at the intriguingly named St Bees, Robinson helps himself to a pebble, which he plans to deliver to the beach at Robin Hood's Bay on the other side of the country, and sets off, following in the footsteps of coast-to-coast pioneer Alfred Wainwright. DAVID BUTCHER

Unreported World

7.30pm C4

CURRENT AFFAIRS This is the 33rd series of Unreported World. And the first scene of tonight's edition gives an idea why the no-frills reportage strand has lasted. We open with Ade Adepitan in the Peruvian capital, Lima, where he visits a milkshake joint for a smoothie with a difference. From a small tank, the owner takes a live frog – apparently a Titicaca river frog, which is a critically endangered species – fries it, and then whizzes it in a food processor to make a fortifying health drink.

It's disturbing to watch, but just a minor part of the busy trade in endangered wildlife from the Amazon jungle. The baby monkeys that Adepitan finds for sale are pitifully sad. DB

Judge Rinder's Crime Stories

8.00pm ITV (not N Ireland, STV or Wales)

DOCUMENTARY Connoisseurs of ropey dramatic reconstructions will love this, the first in a series presented by "ITV's Judge Rinder" of cases that, apparently, "shocked the nation". Though I don't think they did. I'm not sure they "stunned the nation" either. The story at its heart is a sad one involving a man jailed for 17 years for an attempted rape in 1996 in Worcestershire, a crime that he didn't commit. But the soundless reconstructions are distracting. In one, the "accused" appears in a strangely denuded courtroom containing just three people, including the accused himself. ALISON GRAHAM

Scruffts: Britain's Favourite Dog

8.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY There's something rather special about a crossbreed dog. Our family took great pride in explaining that our black-and-white spotty sausage-shaped battering ram, Oz, was half dalmatian, half "God knows what". Scruffts celebrates the UK's mixed-up mutts, as 1,500 of them compete for a spot in the final at Crufts, and the chance to be crowned Britain's Favourite Family Crossbreed Dog.

Lurcher cross Bella took top honours in 2016. With awards for Best Rescue, Good Citizen Dog and Child's Best Friend up for grabs, expect plenty of canine mischief and tear-jerking tales. SARAH DORAN

Scruffy dog story: page 20

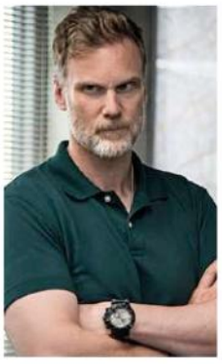

Lethal Weapon

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA Tonight's plot turns on a detail of California's marijuana law. Apparently, decriminalisation means there are now dispensaries where adults buy whatever variant of weed they feel like. But, in the world of this drama at least, because the law doesn't allow the shops to bank their money, they have to move about large amounts of cash – unless armed robbers get to it first.

When $14 million is stolen from a security truck, Riggs and Murtaugh wade in, not least because the driver is a retired colleague. Along the way, they stumble on some dopey dealers who are later decapitated by bad guys, allowing Riggs to joke with admirable tastelessness, "We found our potheads..." DB

TV CV DARREN BOYD

■ Boyd plays luckless detective Steve in Stan Lee's Lucky Man (10pm Sky1), and is the creepy Markus Huseklepp in Fortitude (Thu 9pm Sky Atlantic).
■ Boyd won a Bafta in 2012 for his role as MI5 spook Tim Elliot in Sky1 sitcom Spy, starred as Dr Jake Leaf in Green Wing, business partner Richard in Dirk Gently and sous-chef Bib in Whites.
■ He has also featured in National Treasure, Luther, The Delivery Man and Veep, plus films Bridget Jones's Baby, Four Lions and Alan Partridge: Alpha Papa.

Wild Ireland

9.00pm BBC2 (Wales: moves to Saturday 18 March)

DOCUMENTARY Hanging like an emerald jewel off the map of Europe, Ireland was for millennia the very edge of the known world for Europeans and the last stop for countless animals migrating westwards.

In the first of this two-part doc, wildlife cameraman Colin Stafford-Johnson travels along Ireland's spectacular western coastline, from Skellig Rocks to Clew Bay (where he now lives). Together with golden eagles, humpback whales and the island's last herd of red deer, he enjoys the extraordinary spectacle of vast numbers of seals coming ashore to fight and mate. He also spots a dolphin who has set up residence off the Burren coast. JANE RACKHAM

Rich Hall's Countrier than You

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY The wry comedian does a line in sarky reportage from his native United States. He's exploring the roots of country music, travelling to Nashville, Tennessee and Austin, Texas to compare the music scenes in the two cities. As ever, his stance on country music – of which he is a fan – is acerbic, and sometimes scathing. Hall has firm tastes of his own, and even performs his self-written song Working Dog to demonstrate how styles differ within the genre.

Afterwards (at 10.30pm), there's an intriguing documentary on British country duo the Shires, and the unexpected recent rise of British country music. SARAH CARSON

See page 35

The Team

9.00pm More4

DRAMA Our team of intrepid detectives is in danger of fracturing. After last week's shocking climax, Jackie Mueller is facing a bloody mess in a Berlin shopping centre and Jasmin Gerat is superb as the usually unflappable Jackie struggles while her life goes into freefall. This is the episode when many secrets and lies come home to roost. Loukauskis is made to squirm when, in a brilliantly chilling scene, his poised, calculating ex-wife breezes in to state her demands – and just why he will be meeting them. DAVID CRAWFORD

Stan Lee's Lucky Man

9.00pm Sky1

DRAMA There are more of those cringeworthy exchanges between Harry and his mystery woman, Isabella. "You look amazing," he tells her on their latest clinch. "I woke up like this," she replies. But we're getting the sense that Harry should be more wary of her: his other mystery woman, Eve, tells him, "She has a black heart; she will suck you down with her."

Meanwhile, there's a bizarre murder case involving a stroppy tech entrepreneur (Ryan Gage, from The Musketeers) and his software genius (Tamla Kari, from, er, The Musketeers).

It's all deeply silly but in a daft, undemanding way, likeable, too. DB

FUN RIDE
Nicola Adams, Diane Morgan and Frankie Boyle share their pet hates with Frank Skinner

Room 101

8.30pm BBC1

COMEDY "I'm now 44," Frankie Boyle says wearily. "I've got a body like a dropped lasagne. Women look at my naked body in the same fearful way that pensioners look at snow." It's one pearl among many in the final – and possibly best – episode of the series.

Boyle is on quietly imperious form, getting a big cheer from the audience when he nominates Richard Branson for the room of doom, calling him "a sun-dried Bee Gee". You couldn't ask for much more from this kind of show than Boyle batting back and forth with Frank Skinner, but there are also Diane Morgan's nominations to enjoy, notably "magicians".

Apart from anything else it allows for a couple of those magic-gone-wrong clips from the internet that bear watching again and again.

To be fair, third guest Olympic boxer Nicola Adams doesn't need to do much more than, like us, enjoy the ride. DB

A nice little earner

The Inbetweeners Movie ★★★

9.00pm Film4 FREEVIEW

E4's unassuming little TV comedy proved to be a monster when it hit the big screen. The movie (review, p44) broke the British box-office opening weekend record for a comedy, and went on to earn £45 million in the UK from a budget of £3.5 million. Just imagine what sort of damage the boys could do on that sort of payday, a whole lot more than on the dosh from Jay's dead grandad. TOM FOLLEY

Who's she gonna call?

P Ghostbusters ★★ 8.00pm Sky Premiere

This charmless reboot of the beloved 1984 comedy is a mess of misfiring humour, bloated action and chaotic CGI. The gender-reversed update sets itself too many nostalgic hurdles, as Melissa McCarthy, Kristen Wiig, Kate McKinnon and Leslie Jones try to stop a hotel janitor from unleashing spectral mayhem on Manhattan. The scattershot story barely hangs together, zipping from one frantic ghoulish escapade to the next. ALAN JONES

One for St Paddy's day

The Commitments ★★★★

9.00pm Sky Greats

Adapted from Roddy Doyle's debut novel, this tale of a bunch of young white Dubliners playing sweet soul music has bags of Irish charm. It's also very funny, not least during the band auditions held by the excellent Robert Arkins. DAVID PARKINSON

Super League 7.30pm Sky Sports 2 Leeds Rhinos and Wakefield Trinity clash tonight in a West Yorkshire derby at Headingley. After last year's uncharacteristically poor season, Leeds are looking more competitive and they have a proven finisher in England winger Ryan Hall, who's scored well over 800 points for his club and has an average of a try a game at international level. Wakefield, who haven't had the best of starts to the season, need to stop him getting a sight of the try line. STEVE WALL

Hancock lives again

The BBC is remaking lost episodes of Hancock's Half Hour – thanks to Harry Secombe's son

The Missing Hancocks
Tuesday 6.30pm Radio 4

One Friday night in 1955, Tony Hancock decided he'd had enough. He'd been recording Hancock's Half Hour for BBC radio every week and performing his own show in the West End. On this particular evening, he walked off stage and kept on walking without a word to anyone. He was due to record Hancock's Half Hour the following day, but that evening one of the producers received a call from a friend who worked in airport security. The friend said, "Is Tony doing the show tomorrow? I've got tickets to the recording." Yes, the producer confirmed, he is. "It's only," the friend said, "that I've just seen him walking on to a plane to Rome…"

SECOMBES Harry and son Andrew in 1975

Harry Secombe ended up standing in for Hancock for three episodes of Hancock's Half Hour, with a final fourth show featuring them both. For decades, those tapes have been lost – among 20 of the 103 episodes that Ray Galton and Alan Simpson wrote that were erased or chucked away by the BBC. But when actor and bibliophile Neil Pearson unearthed a stack of old radio scripts he found copies of all 20.

The BBC has decided to re-record all of these lost classics for broadcast on Radio 4. They've now reached the Secombe episodes – so the obvious choice to play Harry, who died in 2001, was his son, Andrew.

But back in 1955, how did the producers decide to recruit Harry to cover for the missing Tony Hancock? "They phoned my dad," says Andrew, 63. "I suppose they chose him because he was a well-known radio voice – he was doing The Goons and he'd done Educating Archie. He agreed at the last minute – and the first script was written for Hancock so he had to deliver exactly Hancock's lines."

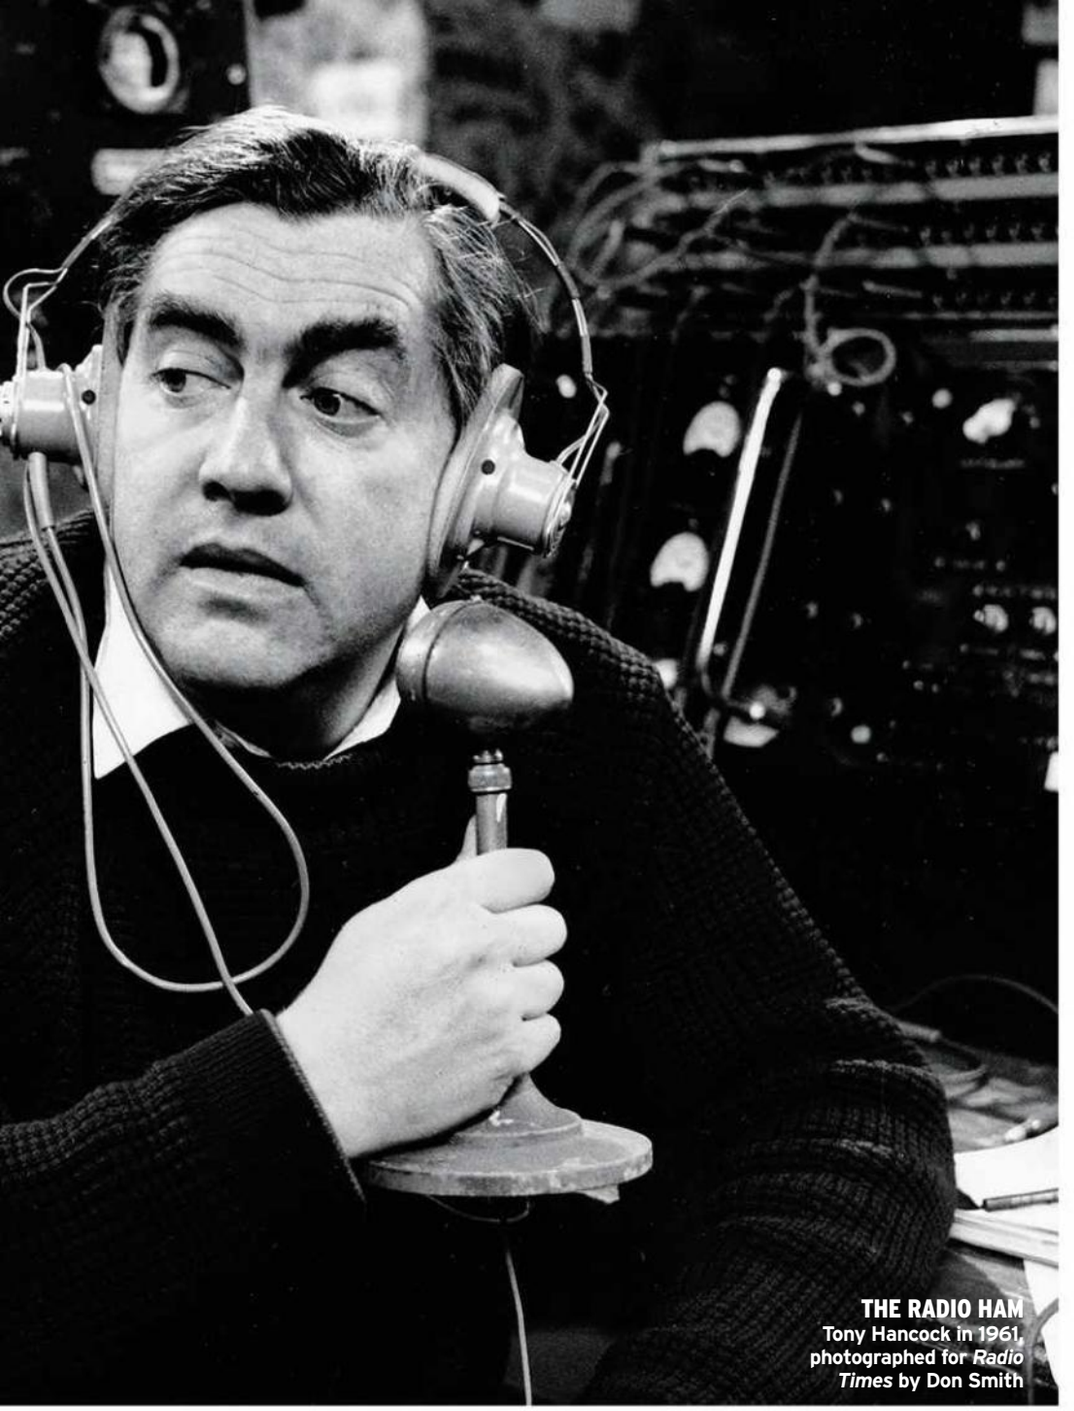

Although we'll never hear the original broadcast and get a sense of how nervous, confident or how different to Tony Hancock Secombe Senior was, Secombe Junior plays the first show with his dad's brio but all of Hancock's little verbal tics and mannerisms.

"I found it incredibly difficult because it's all in Tony Hancock's rhythms – he sort of undercuts everything, whereas my dad was big and enthusiastic," he explains. "But then, for the second and third show, Galton and Simpson started finding Dad's voice – the second is about him buying a racehorse, ending up the jockey and winning the race. That really wouldn't be a Hancock story."

It's not the first time Andrew has played his dad – back in 2000 he was cast as Neddie Seagoon in a 50th-anniversary Goons special.

"Originally, I said no," he recalls. "My dad was in hospital and when I went to see him, I mentioned it. He said, 'Oh, you've got to do it. It's such fun.' I couldn't argue with him and I'm very glad I didn't because he was right – it was great fun." He pauses and looks away for a second. His dad didn't get to hear it, he explains softly, as he died in April 2001. "They made me a disc, but I didn't take it to him. He was in no fit state to listen to it, which was a shame."

Was it weird playing your own father? He smiles and shakes his head. "With my dad, what you saw on stage was basically an exaggeration of how he was in real life. He came on stage at 90 miles an hour because, from his Army days, he was terrified of getting the bird, so the bags of energy meant nobody would dare interrupt him.

"I watched him for so many years – we used to spend every Saturday at the London Palladium and it was like my playground when I was a kid. I used to stand in the wings, watching, watching and watching." In fact, Andrew was the quietest of the sprawling, boisterous Secombe brood – two boys and two girls, who are all now actors or writers. "So they were a bit surprised when I went into the business," he nods. "It was a series of accidents, really. I swore I would never follow my father. I was quite shy and I wanted to be a journalist. Then my English teacher gave me a part in the form play – The Idiot. Why he chose me, I have no idea," he grins. "I was terrified – waited in the wings for my entrance. Then I heard my cue, thought of Dad and stumbled on to the stage where I fell over, got a big laugh and I'm afraid I was completely hooked."

'Dad left a little mark on every single Hancock'

He's a little disappointed there's only a short run of these shows – Secombe's role came to an abrupt end when Hancock heard how well he was going down, hurried back to restake his claim and Hancock's Half Hour returned to its original form – almost.

Andrew explains that they phased out Hancock's trademark monologue at the top of the show when Harry played the part, and when Tony returned, they didn't bother bringing it back. "So Dad left a little mark on every single Hancock after that," he says, smiling with affection and pride. STEPHEN ARMSTRONG

PICK OF THE WEEK

Changing opinions of mental health

Archive on 4: The Mind in the Media
Saturday 8.00pm Radio 4

I must admit to a personal reason for selecting this programme as my Pick of the Week. Like one in six people in this country, I suffer from depression.

Statistics released at the time of writing show that 127 million hours of work were lost in 2015 due to mental health-related absence – the equivalent of around 75,000 individuals losing the entire working year.

Mental health issues are unique: no two cases will ever be the same. But society has, over the years, attempted to simplify the disease, be it sending people to Bedlam or the "mad house" or through films such as One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest.

In this fascinating exploration of how the media and society have altered their approach towards mental illness, the author Nathan Filer – who began a career as a psychiatric nurse in 1999 – talks to people such as Alastair Campbell (right), one of a number of high-profile individuals who have gone out of their way to "normalise" mental illness across the media.

But, as Campbell and Filer both note, many myths still prevail about depression, treatment, diagnosis and recovery.

The Archers this week...

Money is the main talking point of the week: Kirsty has some but isn't sure she should keep it. Pip has none but can't admit to where it's gone. In the light of her miscarriage, Kirsty wants to return the cheque that Peggy gave her. But Peggy is shocked that Kirsty saw her gift as the down-payment on another great-grandchild. DAVID BROWN

Where's my seat?

The real problem with trains

To Gloucester to record an interview for iPM. The taxi driver who collects us from the railway station asks if we're up from London and when I tell him yes, but it's only for a couple of hours, he looks at me as though I'm an idiot. Trust me, I've seen that look before.

Here, fresh from memory, is how our conversation went.

Him Slow.

Me Slow in a good way or slow in a bad way?

Him Slow in a good way. Nothing much happens here, but when it does, it's huge. [Long pause] Fred West.

We continued the journey in silence, with me staring intently at the glove compartment.

I didn't see much else of the area during the rest of the visit. A colleague who hails from Gloucestershire emailed to advise me to take the opportunity of my day out of the office to "enjoy the longest platform in England while you're there, and observe the beautiful view of the cathedral, which if it is seen in winter sunshine is unbeatable". But as is so often the case on the road, our schedule afforded no time for sightseeing, and in any event this particular February day was wetter than Dr Foster's waders, with clouds so low they were on anti-depressants.

'Where on the platform is the optimum place to stand?'

I can advise, however, that at the time of writing, the road to the railway station is down to one lane so do leave extra time for your journey.

I forgot to take in the majesty of the platform because, as I always do, I spent several minutes preparing for the train's arrival wondering where on the platform was the optimum place to stand. Nothing worse than spending the first ten minutes of your journey clattering through seven carriages to find your seat.

There is often no information at stations to assist you. Your seat may be Coach C, number 52, but where coach C might stop is anyone's guess. Even when there are helpful station announcements, as at Gloucester, informing us all of the position on the forthcoming train of first and standard accommodation, the tuck shop and bike shed, I'm still bemused as I've no idea how long the train is or where it will stop.

My preferred method is to try to judge who, among my fellow platform-lurkers, might be a regular, and to stand near them. My preferred method is usually insanely wrong. I don't think I've ever caught a train without running several carriage-lengths along the platform.

Well, there is one way of knowing and that's to ask a member of staff. I did this recently at Dundee station. Bitter experience had told me that the train to London was longer than Wagner's Ring Cycle. On a previous occasion it had been Newcastle before I located my seat.

It transpires that what our parents told us was correct. Asking a grown-up is the right thing to do. Having plonked myself at one end of the platform at Dundee station (near the snack bar, if you know it), I enquired of a friendly Scotrail person where my carriage might be. He took pity on me, perhaps surmising I was doddery, out of the asylum or just stupid, and not only advised that I was completely in the wrong place, but kindly offered to escort me to the correct spot. It was so far away it was almost in Fife, but for the first time I didn't have to run for the train.

NICKY JOHNSTON

SOUND BITES

BY GILLIAN REYNOLDS

Let's salute Radio 4's living legend

My dentist should sue Radio 4's Today for making me grind my teeth. It ran an item recently on a radio drama festival at Herne Bay with barely a word about the fountain of drama that is BBC radio: plays by Pinter and Stoppard, John Mortimer and Joe Orton in the past, and by Sue Townsend, Lee Hall and Mike Bartlett and many another ever since. No mention, either, of actors who love radio (think of the brilliant pairing of Timothy West and Benedict Cumberbatch as the old and young Rumpoles). And not a thought for living legend Betty Davies on the day she was celebrating her 100th birthday. Davies produced, directed, wrote or adapted more than 2,000 radio plays across three decades. Some were classics, but there was many a writer (Muriel Spark, Mustapha Matura, Michael Abbensetts, Antonia Fraser and not forgetting Jeffey Archer) whose work she brought new to radio. It's time to salute her. Forget Today. What about a Betty Davies Day on Radio 4 Extra? Complete with an episode from her time on Mrs Dale's Diary, of course.

He's Jim, not Jimmy

It takes more than a great voice to make a good radio commercial. Jim Broadbent is one of the best actors of our time. He can do comedy, high drama, sinister or just plain cheery. He's brilliant. I wouldn't have thought there was a script in the land he couldn't fit. Alas, I was mistaken. There is one. It advertises a smart meter, one that promises to regulate your domestic energy supplies. But when Jim has to say, "It's time to get Gaz and Leccy under control", somehow it contradicts all probability. The last time I heard anyone say "leccy" it was Jimmy Corkhill on Channel 4 soap Brookside and even then it sounded, in parallel parlance, "manky".

Dream theme could be a nightmare

Radio 3 is off to Tyneside again on Friday for its annual Free Thinking festival at Sage, Gateshead. This year's theme is The Speed of Life and speakers include former racing driver Damon Hill, historian Bettany Hughes (below), author Sathnam Sanghera, humanitarian campaigner Terry Waite, physicist Professor Jim Al-Khalili, along with that reliable conveyor of combustible opinions Edwina Currie (who began her Oxford education reading chemistry). The keynote address is by Professor Russell Foster, respected neuroscientist. His chosen title, however, is "Sleep – Freedom to Think". Please don't regard it as an invitation.

Today's Choices

Between the Ears
9.30pm Radio 3

Government legislation and increased visibility in the media have made us more familiar with gender reassignment. But documentaries tend to concentrate on the transition of the body. Radio is the perfect medium to focus on the development of the voice. Whereas a trans man's voice deepens automatically with medication, a trans woman gradually gains a more feminine voice through speech therapy. For 18 months, theatre-makers Polly Thomas and Alex Bulmer have interviewed transgender people for a project about voice and gender identity. Here they talk to three trans women about creating a female voice, and there is music from Errollyn Wallen, whose work includes the opera The Silent Twins. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Parody Please
9.00am Radio 4 Extra

Our very own Gillian Reynolds (see page 123) assists Dead Ringers mistress of impersonations, Jan Ravens, in analysing radio's lone and lengthy relationship with parody. As Gillian rightly points out, parody only works when we have warm feelings towards the individual involved – these range from the Archers cast list to the BBC political editor Laura Kuenssberg. My personal highlight is an early episode of On the Hour (the joint creation of Armando Iannucci and Chris Morris, also the launch pad for Alan Partridge, aka Steve Coogan). JANE ANDERSON RADIO EDITOR

SUNDAY Radio

Today's Choices

Country to Country

From 12 noon Radio 2 Country

Thankfully, in my 23 years at Radio Times the only hate-mail and trolling has resulted, thus far, from a piece I wrote, many years ago, in which I suggested that fans of country and folk music were obliged to sport beards. My motivation was entirely humorous but the gross generalisation that I had made, understandably, provoked a huge and angry response. Radio 2's pop-up country station continues today on DAB or via bbc.in/R2Country with country superstar (and entirely beard-free) artist Marty Stuart (above). As you can see, he does not have a beard but this has not held him back from gargantuan success as a virtuoso player, singer and writer. Listen and learn from his facial folically-free musical choices. And, please, don't troll me. JANE ANDERSON RADIO EDITOR

Private Passions

12 noon Radio 3

With Lotte Lenya, Michael Nyman and the Pet Shop Boys among the choices, this is one of the more left-field editions of Private Passions, but that's what happens when the guest is someone as passionate about life, and as hungry for knowledge, as the actress Frances Barber. "I've always yearned to know about things I simply don't know anything about," she tells presenter Michael Berkeley. Although only 59, a couple of her stories definitely justify describing her as a survivor, and it all adds up to a rich mix in which there are walk-on parts for one-time boyfriend Danny Boyle, and – helping nurse her back to health after a horrible cycling accident – Ian McKellen. SIMON O'HAGAN

Wireless Nights

11.00pm Radio 4

Timing is the key here. There's no point listening to this unless you are about to fall asleep. Jarvis Cocker (above) gently suggests that you wear headphones – the programme is recorded in binaural sound – although he does acknowledge that headphones in bed are not to everyone's taste (me included – get an under-pillow speaker instead!). Cocker visits the remote Moroccan village of Joujouka, where at night musicians gather in a cave to play ancient Sufi trance music, meant to heal the heart, body, soul and mind. I must confess that I was very excited about the effect the music might have upon me, but it sounded more like grinding bagpipes than an entrancing trip to happy oblivion. Cocker's gentle narration worked better as a comforting enticement to sleep.

10.30pm Radio 2

Radio 2's new run of comedy showcases begins with this sitcom from Dead Ringers writer Max Davis. Really it's a semi-autobiographical tale for Romesh Ranganathan, who's in danger of typecasting himself as the sardonic Sri Lankan with the overbearing mother. Here he plays Roshan, an airline cost-benefits analyst who lives in Crawley with his wife Kate (Amanda Abbington) and two children, and is facing the dread of a school reunion. The set-up is trite, but there are some sharp one-liners and it's played neatly by Ranganathan and Abbington, with a cameo by the great Meera Syal as the overbearing mother. Syal is interviewed on page 162. DAVID CRAWFORD

TUESDAY Radio

Today's Choices

Barbara Nice; Harry and Paul Present: The Gentlemen's Club

10.00pm, 10.30pm Radio 2

Radio 2's comedy showcase of pilots continues with a double offering of delights. The comedian Jo Enright kicks things off at 10.00pm with a sitcom about a 50-plus couple that would fit more comfortably on Radio 4. She plays an "active" woman of retirement age who is shocked to discover that her couch potato of a husband is in better shape than she is, despite her obsessive consumption of vitamin pills and exercise regime. This is followed by an all-too-familiar offering from Harry Enfield and Paul Whitehouse (above). Set in a London "gentlemen's club", there are too many echoes of The Fast Show to spark a flame of originality. The laughs are guaranteed, of course, but there's no sense of innovation. JANE ANDERSON

Drama: The Ferryhill Philosophers

2.15pm Radio 4

The parents of a boy injured in a cycling accident face the terrible decision of whether to leave him on a life-support machine indefinitely or to switch it off. Alun Armstrong and Deborah Findlay star, respectively, as an ex-Durham miner and a university philosopher who together bring human compassion and philosophy to bear in facing up to some of life's hardest dilemmas. No tissues required in this opening episode but one cannot help but think that events will take a turn for the worse in the concluding part of this drama. Hats off to Armstrong and Findlay as the boy's parents. JANE ANDERSON

Just Grand

10.30pm Radio 2

In these cynical times it's reassuring to know there's still an audience for the family sitcom. They don't come more straightforward than Just Grand, in which working-class couple Sandra and Frank find themselves saddled with their estranged grandchildren – two privileged siblings from the Home Counties who quickly get under their feet. With their hopes dashed of escaping the drudgery of Stockport for the Costa del Sol, can the ageing pair come together in their reluctant roles to impart some sage wisdom? Generation-gap gags abound in a comedy which often feels like it's been done by numbers, but with a cast featuring Siobhan Finneran, Jason Watkins (above) and Denise Welch, and a script by Phil Mealey and Not Going Out's Daniel Peak, Just Grand's tried and tested formula is in safe hands. TOM GOULDING

Not Just Funny Animal Voices

6.30am Radio 4 Extra

I must use that hackneyed description "much loved" yet again because how else can one describe Johnny Morris (1916–1999), the radio and television storyteller who became a household name by putting words into the mouths of gorillas and geckos in the children's programme Animal Magic. This 2011 tribute by Morris's TV colleague Terry Nutkins tells of a drinker who hogged the limelight and disliked the children who tried to share it. But he was also a true pro, and very funny. We also hear from the BBC boss tasked with axing Animal Magic after it had had its day. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

DAVID YEO/THE SUNDAY TIMES

Jack Rooke: Good Grief
11.00pm Radio 4

Younger readers might already be acquainted with comedian Jack Rooke (above) through his regular contributions to Radio 1's Sunday Surgery, where he is the resident expert in bereavement and mental health issues. Still in his early 20s, one cannot help but wonder how he comes to hold this lofty position; the answer lies with the death of his father from cancer when Jack was only 15, followed by a couple of other deaths, which I won't expand upon as it would ruin the impact of this programme. It's almost a monologue, although there are recorded interjections from his wise and unintentionally funny grandmother Sicely. I hope that he is more than a one-trick pony and that there's more to come that does not have to focus on death. Having said this, it's a sublime examination of grief – with lots of unexpected laughs. JANE ANDERSON

Ramblings 3.00pm Radio 4

There are few pleasures quite like Ramblings. Clare Balding's windswept walks through familiar stretches of the UK countryside are a treat, particularly when you're not moving. In an interesting diversion, this week Balding takes a literary stroll to mark nearly 200 years since the death of Jane Austen, "Britain's greatest novelist". The five-mile circular walk from Chawton Cottage where Austen moved with her family in 1809 has become a rite of passage for many fans, and Balding takes on the route with volunteers from the local museum to discuss how walking in the Hampshire landscape shaped Austen's novels. TOM GOULDING

FRIDAY Radio

Today's Choices

STEPHANIE VON REISWITZ

The Free Thinking Lecture

10.00pm Radio 3

On average, human beings spend 33 per cent of their lives sleeping. Allegedly. In the first lecture from this year's Free Thinking Festival at Sage Gateshead, Professor Russell Foster argues that technology and the accelerated pace of life have led to our sleep patterns being increasingly at odds with our bodies' circadian rhythms. So what, I hear you cry. Well, Foster is head of the Nuffield Laboratory of Ophthalmology and of the Sleep and Circadian Neuroscience Institute, so if he thinks us not sleeping like Lenny Henry at a Premier Inn is a problem, we should listen. Here he'll outline what he believes are the serious health implications of sleep disorders, as well as his A to Zeds of how we can all snooze like Lenny (other budget hotel chains are available). DAVID CRAWFORD

Friday Night Is Music Night

8.00pm Radio 2

Following in the comedy-through-classical-music tradition of the likes of Gerard Hoffnung and Victor Borge, the British conductor and comedian Rainer Hirsch leads a night of merry musical quips. As a prelude to Comic Relief, the BBC Concert Orchestra and the London Voices provide a musical odyssey that includes Leroy Anderson's tap-tapping novelty The Typewriter (theme music for Radio 4's The News Quiz) and, from Leopold Mozart (Wolfgang's dad), the Concerto for Hosepipe and Strings. And there's a rare performance of the Missa Hilarious by PDQ Bach (aka Peter Schickele). DAVID GILLARD

Face behind the voice

Amy Oakden BBC Tees

Age 37
Current job Co-presenter (with Neil Green) of the BBC Tees weekday Breakfast Show (6am).
CV Born and brought up in Middlesbrough, she studied hospitality and catering management but joined TFM Teesside as a late-night show telephonist at the age of 18, becoming a broadcast journalist and staying for ten years. Moved to Century Radio, returned to TFM, and joined BBC Tees in 2013.
Best moment "Getting to know the listeners through the programme. They become friends."
Worst moment "We often help listeners raise funds for people who are seriously ill – many of them children – and follow their stories. If they pass away, it hits hard."
Off air "I live in Stainton, a small village that's part of Middlesbrough, with my husband Steve, a health and safety adviser, our three-year-old daughter Darcey (named after both Strictly's Darcey Bussell and Mr Darcy from Pride and Prejudice) and three rescue cats. Spare time is spent camping in North Yorkshire – we have a caravan and a camper van."
First radio memory "Listening to BBC Tees with my grandma and grandad. And Bruno Brookes on Radio 1."
Favourite broadcasters "I love Sara Cox, the most relaxed person on radio. And Vanessa Feltz, a great interviewer."
Ambition "To always make the show as good as we can."
Dream job "I'm a bit of a chocaholic, so I have this fantasy about making my own chocolates and infusions and opening a chocolate shop in a sleepy part of North Yorkshire."
Secret skills "My husband is a drummer and he's trying to teach me. We live in 'The House of Rock' and I get lessons in his 'man cave' (well, it's a shed, actually) at the bottom of the garden. I haven't got much beyond a basic 'paradiddle' – two single strokes followed by a double stroke. I'm better at baking cakes." DAVID GILLARD

Amy Oakden BBC Tees

Age 37
Current job Co-presenter (with Neil Green) of the BBC Tees weekday Breakfast Show (6am).
CV Born and brought up in Middlesbrough, she studied hospitality and catering management but joined TFM Teesside as a late-night show telephonist at the age of 18, becoming a broadcast journalist and staying for ten years. Moved to Century Radio, returned to TFM, and joined BBC Tees in 2013.
Best moment "Getting to know the listeners through the programme. They become friends."
Worst moment "We often help listeners raise funds for people who are seriously ill – many of them children – and follow their stories. If they pass away, it hits hard."
Off air "I live in Stainton, a small village that's part of Middlesbrough, with my husband Steve, a health and safety adviser, our three-year-old daughter Darcey (named after both Strictly's Darcey Bussell and Mr Darcy from Pride and Prejudice) and three rescue cats. Spare time is spent camping in North Yorkshire – we have a caravan and a camper van."
First radio memory "Listening to BBC Tees with my grandma and grandad. And Bruno Brookes on Radio 1."
Favourite broadcasters "I love Sara Cox, the most relaxed person on radio. And Vanessa Feltz, a great interviewer."
Ambition "To always make the show as good as we can."
Dream job "I'm a bit of a chocaholic, so I have this fantasy about making my own chocolates and infusions and opening a chocolate shop in a sleepy part of North Yorkshire."
Secret skills "My husband is a drummer and he's trying to teach me. We live in 'The House of Rock' and I get lessons in his 'man cave' (well, it's a shed, actually) at the bottom of the garden. I haven't got much beyond a basic 'paradiddle' – two single strokes followed by a double stroke. I'm better at baking cakes." DAVID GILLARD

Amy Oakden BBC Tees

Age 37
Current job Co-presenter (with Neil Green) of the BBC Tees weekday Breakfast Show (6am).
CV Born and brought up in Middlesbrough, she studied hospitality and catering management but joined TFM Teesside as a late-night show telephonist at the age of 18, becoming a broadcast journalist and staying for ten years. Moved to Century Radio, returned to TFM, and joined BBC Tees in 2013.
Best moment "Getting to know the listeners through the programme. They become friends."
Worst moment "We often help listeners raise funds for people who are seriously ill – many of them children – and follow their stories. If they pass away, it hits hard."
Off air "I live in Stainton, a small village that's part of Middlesbrough, with my husband Steve, a health and safety adviser, our three-year-old daughter Darcey (named after both Strictly's Darcey Bussell and Mr Darcy from Pride and Prejudice) and three rescue cats. Spare time is spent camping in North Yorkshire – we have a caravan and a camper van."
First radio memory "Listening to BBC Tees with my grandma and grandad. And Bruno Brookes on Radio 1."
Favourite broadcasters "I love Sara Cox, the most relaxed person on radio. And Vanessa Feltz, a great interviewer."
Ambition "To always make the show as good as we can."
Dream job "I'm a bit of a chocaholic, so I have this fantasy about making my own chocolates and infusions and opening a chocolate shop in a sleepy part of North Yorkshire."
Secret skills "My husband is a drummer and he's trying to teach me. We live in 'The House of Rock' and I get lessons in his 'man cave' (well, it's a shed, actually) at the bottom of the garden. I haven't got much beyond a basic 'paradiddle' – two single strokes followed by a double stroke. I'm better at baking cakes." DAVID GILLARD

Amy Oakden BBC Tees

Age 37
Current job Co-presenter (with Neil Green) of the BBC Tees weekday Breakfast Show (6am).
CV Born and brought up in Middlesbrough, she studied hospitality and catering management but joined TFM Teesside as a late-night show telephonist at the age of 18, becoming a broadcast journalist and staying for ten years. Moved to Century Radio, returned to TFM, and joined BBC Tees in 2013.
Best moment "Getting to know the listeners through the programme. They become friends."
Worst moment "We often help listeners raise funds for people who are seriously ill – many of them children – and follow their stories. If they pass away, it hits hard."
Off air "I live in Stainton, a small village that's part of Middlesbrough, with my husband Steve, a health and safety adviser, our three-year-old daughter Darcey (named after both Strictly's Darcey Bussell and Mr Darcy from Pride and Prejudice) and three rescue cats. Spare time is spent camping in North Yorkshire – we have a caravan and a camper van."
First radio memory "Listening to BBC Tees with my grandma and grandad. And Bruno Brookes on Radio 1."
Favourite broadcasters "I love Sara Cox, the most relaxed person on radio. And Vanessa Feltz, a great interviewer."
Ambition "To always make the show as good as we can."
Dream job "I'm a bit of a chocaholic, so I have this fantasy about making my own chocolates and infusions and opening a chocolate shop in a sleepy part of North Yorkshire."
Secret skills "My husband is a drummer and he's trying to teach me. We live in 'The House of Rock' and I get lessons in his 'man cave' (well, it's a shed, actually) at the bottom of the garden. I haven't got much beyond a basic 'paradiddle' – two single strokes followed by a double stroke. I'm better at baking cakes." DAVID GILLARD

Amy Oakden BBC Tees

Age 37
Current job Co-presenter (with Neil Green) of the BBC Tees weekday Breakfast Show (6am).
CV Born and brought up in Middlesbrough, she studied hospitality and catering management but joined TFM Teesside as a late-night show telephonist at the age of 18, becoming a broadcast journalist and staying for ten years. Moved to Century Radio, returned to TFM, and joined BBC Tees in 2013.
Best moment "Getting to know the listeners through the programme. They become friends."
Worst moment "We often help listeners raise funds for people who are seriously ill – many of them children – and follow their stories. If they pass away, it hits hard."
Off air "I live in Stainton, a small village that's part of Middlesbrough, with my husband Steve, a health and safety adviser, our three-year-old daughter Darcey (named after both Strictly's Darcey Bussell and Mr Darcy from Pride and Prejudice) and three rescue cats. Spare time is spent camping in North Yorkshire – we have a caravan and a camper van."
First radio memory "Listening to BBC Tees with my grandma and grandad. And Bruno Brookes on Radio 1."
Favourite broadcasters "I love Sara Cox, the most relaxed person on radio. And Vanessa Feltz, a great interviewer."
Ambition "To always make the show as good as we can."
Dream job "I'm a bit of a chocaholic, so I have this fantasy about making my own chocolates and infusions and opening a chocolate shop in a sleepy part of North Yorkshire."
Secret skills "My husband is a drummer and he's trying to teach me. We live in 'The House of Rock' and I get lessons in his 'man cave' (well, it's a shed, actually) at the bottom of the garden. I haven't got much beyond a basic 'paradiddle' – two single strokes followed by a double stroke. I'm better at baking cakes." DAVID GILLARD

Amy Oakden BBC Tees

Age 37
Current job Co-presenter (with Neil Green) of the BBC Tees weekday Breakfast Show (6am).
CV Born and brought up in Middlesbrough, she studied hospitality and catering management but joined TFM Teesside as a late-night show telephonist at the age of 18, becoming a broadcast journalist and staying for ten years. Moved to Century Radio, returned to TFM, and joined BBC Tees in 2013.
Best moment "Getting to know the listeners through the programme. They become friends."
Worst moment "We often help listeners raise funds for people who are seriously ill – many of them children – and follow their stories. If they pass away, it hits hard."
Off air "I live in Stainton, a small village that's part of Middlesbrough, with my husband Steve, a health and safety adviser, our three-year-old daughter Darcey (named after both Strictly's Darcey Bussell and Mr Darcy from Pride and Prejudice) and three rescue cats. Spare time is spent camping in North Yorkshire – we have a caravan and a camper van."
First radio memory "Listening to BBC Tees with my grandma and grandad. And Bruno Brookes on Radio 1."
Favourite broadcasters "I love Sara Cox, the most relaxed person on radio. And Vanessa Feltz, a great interviewer."
Ambition "To always make the show as good as we can."
Dream job "I'm a bit of a chocaholic, so I have this fantasy about making my own chocolates and infusions and opening a chocolate shop in a sleepy part of North Yorkshire."
Secret skills "My husband is a drummer and he's trying to teach me. We live in 'The House of Rock' and I get lessons in his 'man cave' (well, it's a shed, actually) at the bottom of the garden. I haven't got much beyond a basic 'paradiddle' – two single strokes followed by a double stroke. I'm better at baking cakes." DAVID GILLARD

Starved & suffering

Ben's owner was living in poverty and unable to provide proper food, care and medical treatment for him when they came to The Mayhew for help.

Our Animal Welfare Officers found Ben emaciated and lying in a pool of his own diarrhoea, unable to use his back legs and suffering from gut and digestion issues. Our Officers immediately brought him back to The Mayhew to receive urgent medical attention from our vet team.

After weeks of care from our kennels and vet team, Ben fully recovered. We neutered Ben and found him a loving home.

But we can't continue our work without support from kind animal lovers like you. Please help us today so that we can be there for animals like Ben when they are in desperate need.

Paying for the care you need

The rules around who pays for care are complex, says Paul Lewis

MANY PEOPLE WORRY about how they will pay for a care home when they need one. The rules about who will pay for it are very complex and the details are different in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. This guide cannot cover all the rules but there are useful links at the end. And remember, most people never go into a care home.

1. WILL THE NHS PAY?

If your need for a care home is primarily a medical one then the NHS should pay the whole cost without a means test. It is called continuing healthcare and whether you qualify or not is assessed by a checklist that your doctor, nurse, hospital professional or social worker can use. Your "clinical commissioning group" will ultimately decide if you are eligible. It is all very complex – and it is slightly different in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

2. WILL YOU PAY?

If the NHS will not pay, your local social services department will assess your needs. If it decides you need to go into a care or nursing home it will also assess your financial circumstances. If you have savings or other capital over £23,250 (in England and Northern Ireland; £26,250 in Scotland; £24,000 in Wales) then the local authority will not pay for your care. Capital includes money and property you own but not personal things such as jewellery or other valuables. If you have a joint account, half the money or investments will be counted as yours; it is better to separate your finances before the assessment so it is clear who owns what. In Scotland personal care and nursing care payments may be made regardless of assets.

3. YOUR HOME

The house you live in can count as "capital". But it is ignored completely if your wife, husband, or partner still lives there. It will also be ignored if another relative aged 60 or more lives there and it may be ignored for a former carer or some younger person who was dependant on you. If your home is counted as capital then it will normally mean the council will not pay for care. However, you do not have to sell your home. You can ask for a deferred payment agreement so the council pays for your care and it is repaid after your death. If your savings are below £23,250 in England the council must agree to this. Elsewhere in the UK it will almost certainly agree.

DON'T LET THE TAXMAN TAKE YOUR FAMILY'S INHERITANCE

Get your free guide today to learn the best ways to successfully plan and protect your legacy

More people than ever are being pushed over the current Inheritance Tax threshold of £325,000*, due to ever-increasing property prices. From 6 April 2017 onwards an additional Inheritance Tax nil rate band will be available where someone with an estate worth less than £2 million passes the family home to their children or grandchildren. There are also provisions in place to make this available to individuals who have downsized or sold the family home to fund the costs of residential care.

But not everyone will be able to benefit from this change, so make sure you do not miss out on the opportunity to protect more of your wealth for your loved ones and not for the taxman.

To help you secure your wealth for your loved ones, Savings Champion has produced this guide to highlight some of the key factors to consider when building your legacy.

THIS GUIDE INCLUDES:

- Inheritance Tax: the facts
- The simple dos and don'ts
- How to protect your legacy
- Starting your journey

If you are unsure whether Inheritance Tax might impact on your family, call us to see if you would benefit from speaking to an Inheritance Tax specialist on 0800 808 5145

An initial call is free to see whether you would benefit from a conversation with an Inheritance Tax specialist. If you take further advice, charges may apply.

Inheritance Tax can be a complex financial planning area, therefore it's recommended that specialist advice should be sought.

*Source: Saga Investment Services. Research carried out in the first seven months of 2016 across 105 postcode areas of England and Wales found that 24 per cent of properties sold in the year 2015 exceeded £325,000, an increase from 13 per cent in 2009 when the nil rate band was first set.

It's time to get fit and feel fabulous, says Good Morning Britain's Kate Garraway. But would she have a facelift?

"Nobody wants to be middle-aged, do they?" says TV and radio presenter Kate Garraway. "It's almost seen as worse than old age, when at least you have wisdom and experience. You're in this middle period, between the young ingénue and Maggie Smith in Downton Abbey."

For years, Garraway turned down offers to write an autobiography. But now, just before her 50th birthday, she's publishing a candid self-help book, tackling everything from crows' feet to money and the menopause.

In The Joy of Big Knickers (or Learning to Love the Rest of Your Life), Garraway identifies the key issues women in their supposed "prime" can face and searches for answers. Midlife is, she argues, a time of "explosive change", especially for women. In many ways, it's a second puberty when our hormones rage and we start taking risks, she argues. The old rules don't work any more. Rather than sleepwalking into old age, now is the time to take stock of your life, celebrate the things you excel at, accept what is gone and change the things that make you unhappy. It's time to accept, as she puts it, that "you're the one driving the bus".

It's a scary thought, I say. "Yes," she laughs delightedly. "There's an oestrogen-flooded or oestrogen-depleted woman at the wheel. But you have to remember you have passengers on your bus. You may decide you don't want them there any more, but you need to look at the choices you made, and why, and work it out."

In the mid-19th century, a woman's life expectancy was in the mid-40s. But at 50 nowadays, "If we get it right we can have a very liberating and exciting time for the next three or four decades. But, as in puberty, there's this ghastly phase you go through in midlife, men and women. You're not quite sure where you are, your bosses are younger than you, you're caring for your parents, if you still have them. And you may still have children around. It's a chaotic time and society hasn't really got a map for you."

BEING BRIDGET

'You're between the ingénue and Maggie Smith in Downton'

Of course, Garraway knows she has "an extraordinary life" – with a presenting slot on the sofa of ITV's Good Morning Britain and a weekday show on Smooth Radio. "I'm aware that, compared with most people, I'm Richard Branson. I have a job that's extremely well paid."

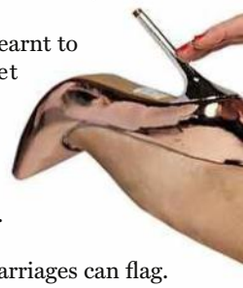

Happily married to her second husband, political lobbyist-turned-psychotherapist Derek Draper, she has two children, daughter Darcey, 11, and William, 7. But approaching 50, she found herself "genuinely feeling flummoxed and having a massive midlife moment". She was panicking about ageing and feeling exhausted. So she set herself the task of finding a more positive way to approach middle age.

In a chapter entitled "The Facelift Dilemma", she wonders if cosmetic surgery would be letting "the sisterhood" down. So she talks to surgeons and make-up artists, experts on diet, fitness and sleep – and asks for their trade secrets. She gets a new bra, gives up sugar and power-walks.

But it's also an emotional journey. "We've done a lot of living and loving by the time we get to 50 and some of that will be stuff we treasure, and some hasn't been massively helpful," she says. In the book she talks openly about romantic disappointment – her first marriage failed after a few months, she believes, because she was a people pleaser, "a stunted personality".

"I had a constant fear that at some deep level I was unlovable and I think in the end you almost make yourself unlovable. It's very hard to love somebody who just goes: 'OK', because there's no personality there to decide you love or don't love."

She went through therapy, learnt to be more assertive and met another man. "My loud, shouty, current husband doesn't let me get away with anything sliding away, which is very good for me," she smiles.

But even the best marriages can flag. So on our behalf, dear reader, she looks at waning libido in midlife couples, embarking on the "two-week challenge" with Derek (where partners agree to have sex every day for two weeks). It's a funny, touching episode, only interrupted when Derek slips over in the park and ends up in a wheelchair. "Sadly not because of any of my gymnastics," she hoots. "I wasn't even present!"

Most crucially, she tackles her fear of death. When she visits a healer who works with terminally ill people, the healer suggests that Garraway, who has suffered severe tonsillitis all her life, has a constricted "throat chakra" (literally, no voice). It's ironic, when she's built her career on her voice – but always telling other people's stories. And a broadcaster has to be studiedly neutral. The healer tells her it's time to look at her own needs – "sublimated desires" are likely to bite us if we don't deal with them.

In a 17-year presenting career, Garraway has interviewed Tom Cruise, Johnny Depp, Nicole Kidman and every prime minister since John Major. And when Renée Zellweger was filming the first Bridget Jones film, she watched tapes of Garraway in order to prepare for playing a reporter on the fictional breakfast TV show Big Up Britain. Later she shadowed Garroway for the most recent film, Bridget Jones's Baby.

ADAM LAWRENCE

But you sense the midlife "journey" Garraway charts in her book is the one that has gripped her the most. "It was genuinely a great thing to have done," she says. "I feel so much happier now."

A third of the UK population is over 50 now. She believes it's good for society that there's a cohort of post-50-year-old women who aren't focused on child rearing, who are shifting their gaze from the domestic to the wider world – "a whole new evolutionary group".

In the meantime, she wants us to be the best version of ourselves. "It's time to get as fit, gorgeous, fabulous and positive as you can – to be more than you've ever been before.

"Don't make an enemy of your life," she warns. Not that she's judging anyone else's choices.

"I've not said I'd never have a face-lift," she adds with a gleam. "I still feel you have the right to fight this with everything you've got, if you want to. But since I've gone deeper into this journey, I'm not obsessing about it." LIZ HOGGARD

Mums with star power

This bestseller is a new must-see miniseries

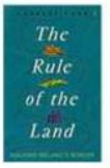

BIG LITTLE LIES
LIANE MORIARTY
Big Little Lies Mon 9pm Sky Atlantic

You only need to see the cast list of Sky Atlantic's Big Little Lies to know it's going to be good. Pure Hollywood pedigree comes from the three leads – Reese Witherspoon, Nicole Kidman and Shailene Woodley – while the supporting cast includes Laura Dern, Alexander Skarsgard (True Blood) and Adam Scott (Parks and Recreation's Ben). The miniseries is based on the novel (£7.99, plus £1.50 p&p) by the Australian Liane Moriarty, who has sold more than six million copies of her books worldwide. Witherspoon, Kidman and Woodley are Madeline, Celeste and Jane, three mothers who meet at the school gate and whose lives aren't as perfect as they at first appear.

THE GREATEST: THE QUEST FOR SPORTING PERFECTION
MATTHEW SYED
Simon Mayo Monday 5pm Radio 2

Sport's a funny old game: winning is everything, and yet often still not enough. Take US swimmer Michael Phelps, who retired in 2012 with 18 Olympic gold medals to his name, then made a comeback at Rio in 2016 to scoop five more. For many elite sportsmen and women, the quest for perfection is like an addiction – but what are they even reaching for? Matthew Syed's The Greatest (£11.30, incl p&p) offers some insider insights: he was once Britain's top male table tennis player.

THE RULE OF THE LAND
GARRETT CARR
Book of the Week Monday–Friday 9.45am Radio 4 FM

Writer and map-maker Garrett Carr travelled the border between Northern Ireland and the Republic for Radio 4's 2014 documentary Charting the Border, but – since the referendum – it has taken on a new significance; it will become the UK's only land border with the European Union. In The Rule of the Land (£12.50, incl p&p), he recounts his journey, by foot and canoe, and also the many roles that the border has played in history. He also provides a sensitive portrait of the people of these borderlands, and his maps of the route are full of unexpected, lively detail. HANNAH SHADDOCK

Spring bulbs bring light and life to your garden, says Joe Swift

Carpets of colour

SPRING BULBS ARE like living treasure. They are nuggets of energy buried in the autumn, forgotten through winter until spring when, sure enough, their green tips nose through the soil and the excitement builds from there.

You may have planted some last autumn, but you can never have too many spring bulbs, so it's a good time to add some, ready grown in pots, for splashes of seasonal colour just where you need it in containers and borders. Daffodils (inset, below), dwarf irises, alliums, scilla (main picture) and hyacinths (bottom of page), to name a few, can be bought in pots from garden centres, nurseries and supermarkets. Look for plants in bud rather than in flower, so you get the best from them. It's also a good time to make a note of any that catch your eye with a view to planting this coming autumn.

So what do you do once they've faded? I'm sure you know that, as well as looking ridiculous, tying daffodils that have flowered into knots shows you've got too much time on your hands. As a rule, leave the faded foliage on until it has completely died back. This can take up to six weeks. With larger daffodils, you can tidy up by snipping off the faded flower head, but always leave the leaves on. This way the energy will go back into producing a fatter bulb for flowering next year, rather than seed.

MANY BULBS LOOK fabulous growing in grass, too, especially drifts of crocuses, winter aconites under trees and snake's head fritillaries on moister soils. But when planting, plan ahead so you can leave them to die back in a patch around the edge where the grass can be left longer for a while. If you mow them over too early they'll most likely come up "blind" (all foliage, no flower) next year.

Some, such as snowdrops, actually like to be planted "in the green", which means around now, just after flowering, with their leaves still on rather than as dried bulbs. Their success rate is far higher and once you have some, if they are happy, they will spread, year by year, and colonise areas. You can buy them online in pots or loose, but make sure you plant them as soon as you get them, as they are susceptible to drying out.

MAKING A SPLASH
Plant a drift of scilla for dramatic colour

3 TOP TIPS FOR PERFECT PRUNING

Different plants respond to being cut back at different times of the year and most benefit. This is a good time to prune bush roses, climbing roses, clematis and those grown for their colourful winter stems (dogwoods) and late-summer flowers (buddleia). Avoid pruning spring-flowering shrubs until after they've blossomed unless you simply have to get them under control – you'll lose some flowers this year but it's not the end of the world.

1 TRAINING ROSES

Climbing roses are vigorous plants that can be trained into a framework on a wall, trellis, archway or pergola. Aim to get a balanced framework of main stems and ignore the rest for now. If you have any old and non-productive large stems, cut them to the base and train in any young, green stems to replace them. This may mean getting serious with an old rose and taking out a lot of plant material. But by training new stems horizontally you'll encourage them to flower all along their length, not just at the end. Once you've done this, cut back any remaining side shoots or old flowering stems to two or three buds where they meet the main stem.

2 GO IN HARD

As a rule, any vigorous shrub that flowers later in the year, from mid-July to September, can be pruned hard now. They will respond by growing back quickly and flowering well. Hardy shrubs grown for their colourful winter stems, like willows or dogwoods as well as those with dramatic foliage (Cotinus and black elder), can also be pruned now. Once established, they can be cut back almost to the ground every year to maintain a manageable size. But don't go too hard on a young plant.

3 WORK WITH WISTERIA

It's not too late to prune wisteria to keep it in shape, stop it taking over the world (climbing through windows!) and encourage it to flower. It's easier to do now before it comes into leaf. If you need to take out larger stems that have tangled with each other then do that first, looking to create a balanced, even framework with no gaping holes. Any new growth left from last year can be taken back to two or three flowering buds, which should be visible. Through the summer keep nipping back the whippy growth to contain its size and divert the energy into flowering next year rather than creating more stems.

The cast of The Good Karma Hospital fell in love with Sri Lanka's charms

The Good Karma Hospital
Sunday 9pm ITV

Filming in Sri Lanka is hell…" smiles Phyllis Logan as she sips a fresh juice on Unawatuna Beach, one of the island's most famous stretches of golden sand and filming base for The Good Karma Hospital. "But someone's got to do it! It has been absolutely delightful. I couldn't recommend coming here highly enough." As the ITV drama comes to an end, the cast pick their favourite spots on the beautiful island they called home for three months.

NEIL MORRISSEY
UNAWATUNA

"At the southern tip of Sri Lanka, the beach is beautiful during the day and has everything: sun, sea, great surfing, snorkelling and scuba diving. But in the evening, it really comes alive: outside every restaurant there's a table with mountains of fresh fish, prawns, squid – the best tuna I've ever eaten. And if you venture behind the beach into the hustle of the town you can find The Good Karma Hospital, although when we're not filming it's actually a teacher training college."

GALLE FORT

"A beautiful old Dutch fort town, now full of little hotels, restaurants and shops. It's a really pretty place to have a wander and a meal. Early morning or early evening is best because you will sweat! And if you get hungry, go to Lucky Fort – this little restaurant is a must. Order the curry of the day, it's normally chicken or fish, and with it you get a big bowl of rice and ten smaller vegetarian dishes depending on what the chef, Lucky, has got from the market, each one individually spiced."

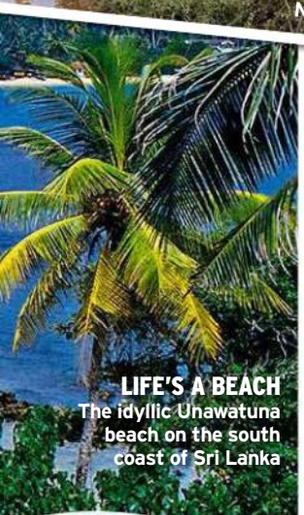

PHYLLIS LOGAN
WHALE-WATCHING IN MIRISSA

"This trip means you have to make a very early start, but it's completely worth it. We were on the jetty ready to get on the boat for 5.30am and set off soon after. We could still see the coastline when we saw our first blue whale. They didn't leap out of the water like you see them do in nature films but they breached the surface and we saw them squirt water out of their blowholes and flick their tails into the air before they disappeared into the ocean again. It was amazing. And afterwards we were back on land in time for a breakfast of hoppers, which is the classic Sri Lankan dish of bowl-shaped pancakes made with rice flour and coconut milk."

WILD THINGS
Elephants in Udawalawe National Park

LIFE'S A BEACH
The idyllic Unawatuna beach on the south coast of Sri Lanka

GRAND DESIGNS

COLOMBO

"A world away from the relaxed beaches, Sri Lanka's capital Colombo is mayhem," says Logan. "It's thronging with people, motorbikes, tuk-tuks, cars, vans – it's pure bedlam! And the market there is a sight to behold. There are rows and rows of stalls and each one is for a different thing – from electrical goods, to underpants, to the most amazing fruits and vegetables. You wouldn't want to shop there every day but it was a great experience. I bought my husband a lungi, which is like a man's sari that ties at the waist – he hasn't worn it yet!"

PHILIP JACKSON
KANDY

"When my wife came to visit, we did a big road trip up to Kandy, which is the old capital city. Word of warning: the driving habits are mad! It's completely anarchic, so I would recommend getting a driver. Kandy is up in the hills, where we saw local dancing, the Buddha's tooth in a temple and drove through the mountains to a tea plantation, where there are tea plants as far as the eye can see, with women dotted among them picking just the tips."

AMRITA ACHARIA
ELLA

"I got to ride in the driver's cabin on a beautiful train journey through the south-eastern mountains from Badulla to Ella, and stayed in a small independent tea plantation high in the hills. Having been on the beach for three months, it was so refreshing to be surrounded by greenery. From there, we went into the jungle and saw monkeys and snakes, which I loved."

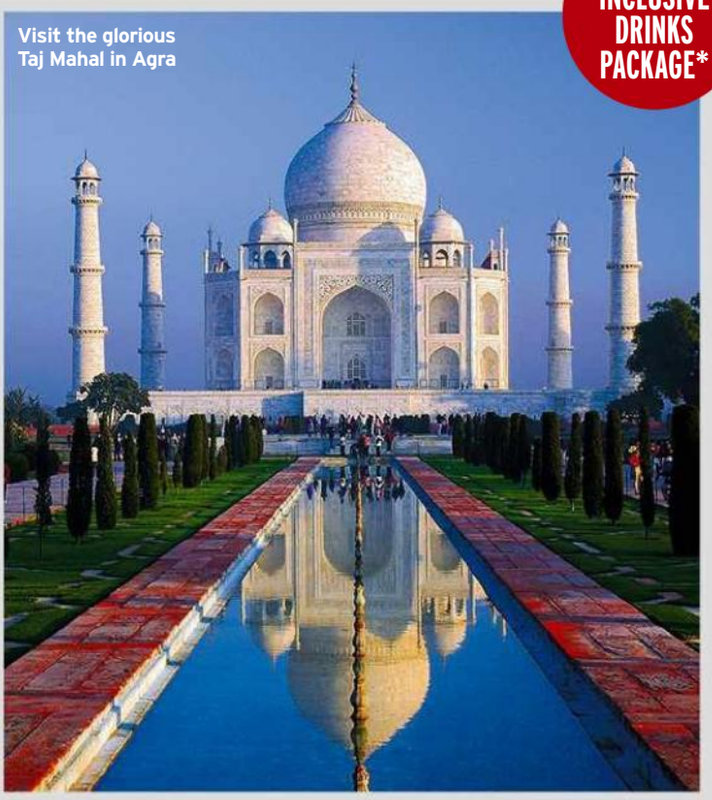

AMANDA REDMAN
UDAWALAWE NATIONAL PARK

"You can't visit Sri Lanka without going to see the elephants. I'd recommend seeing them in the wild – we went to Udawalawe National Park. Elephants are the most majestic of creatures and there are dozens of them roaming around – whole herds of mothers with babies and huge males standing off alone." ALEXIA SKINITIS

It pays to go private

Bulky hearing aids had left Paul Bathurst feeling self-conscious about his hearing loss. That was until he tried the latest high tech hearing aids from the experts at Amplifon.

Paul Bathurst

Paul had struggled with his hearing since he was in his forties and had always felt self-conscious wearing the bulky NHS hearing aids that looped over his ears. When he asked if he could upgrade them for something less visible he was told 'it's those or nothing'.

"I guess we are all a bit vain, but I work with many young professionals and I didn't want to appear older than I am", says Paul, a management coach and trainer.

"I know the NHS can't provide everything for everyone, but I didn't like the appearance of the hearing aids. From the front you couldn't see them, but from the back or side it was pretty obvious. I also found them terrible for driving and they became so uncomfortable I found myself pulling them out and putting them in my pocket."

Paul was determined to do something about them and his research led him to his local branch of Amplifon - the experts dedicated to helping people rediscover the pleasure of hearing since 1950. Paul's hearing test with Andrew, his Audiologist, involved a series of health and lifestyle questions, plus a thorough examination with innovative hearing loss simulators.

Paul was pleasantly surprised just how detailed the hearing test was. "The tests were a lot more thorough than anything I'd had before," he says. "There was one where they play different sentences with background noise. You miss words but try to piece it together and tell them what's being said. That was really interesting because it's just like real life."

He was also amazed with the personal service he received, exceeding all his expectations.

The Amplifon Audiologist took time to understand Paul's life and was able to recommend advanced digital hearing aids that were programmed to address his specific hearing needs, with a sound quality that's unaffected by background noise. And crucially for Paul, they were much more discreet and easier to wear than his previous hearing aids.

"When they first put them in, they were so comfortable," he says. "I can wear them all day and at bedtime I often lie down before realising I haven't taken them out. The sound quality is great too. With my old ones, if I was in a restaurant I'd pick up everything, it was just a cacophony of sound." With his new hearing aids, Paul can once again hear conversations clearly.

The level of aftercare service offered by Amplifon also impressed Paul and it includes regular five-star checks.

"You can go in at any time and ask 'can you just check this?' and they do it. In fact, the last time I saw Andrew I told him I didn't need to book another appointment but he wanted to check everything was OK. It's nice when you know someone is looking out for you like that."

For Paul, the service has been second to none, and he would recommend Amplifon to anyone ■

Dictionary corner Susie Dent

My five-year-old son asked me where the word "spider" is from. Can you help? Eoin Walsh By email

The spider should really be called the spinner, for its roots lie in the Old English verb spinnan thanks to the arachnid's production of cobwebs to catch its prey ("cob" here is an alteration of coppe, another word for a spider). While English added a "d", the spider's cousins in other languages make the original connection a lot clearer – Spinne in German, for example, or Spin in Dutch. This history means that the spider is related to words such as span and spindle, and also to the term spinster.

From the 14th century onwards, a spinster was someone (almost always a woman) whose occupation was to spin wool. By the 17th century it had come to be used of any unmarried woman who was forced to spin for a living rather than be supported by her husband.

WHAT WE WATCHED

1989 11–17 MARCH

With 19 million Pommies "hanging on their every antipodean word", Neighbours stars and on-screen sweethearts Jason Donovan and Kylie Minogue were our cover stars in 1989. That week, Radio Times celebrated the Australian invasion of pop culture. "With Clive James buzzing around almost everywhere and BBC1's The Flying Doctors neatly symbolising the dramatic antipodean take-off – remember James McKechnie as radio's old-style Flying Doctor all those years ago? – suddenly the sky's the limit Down Under," we wrote.

1999 13–19 MARCH

"More [people] dislike me than like me," David Beckham said in 1999. "I'd like to be popular." Ahead of the Alan Hansen documentary The Football Millionaires on BBC1, Beckham opened up about his notorious World Cup sending-off against Argentina. "I was gutted, more than anything. Afterwards, Tony Adams was brilliant to me. I needed that at the time."

2003 8–14 MARCH

Dawn French and Jennifer Saunders dressed up as Harry Potter and Ron Weasley for a Comic Relief spoof. "It's one of our more affectionate satires because we love the films," said French. "But as soon as you have Fatty Saunders and me playing children, it reduces it all to our usual stupid level." Also that week, Gareth Gates was submerged in a bath of baked beans.

Broadchurch bites back

POIGNANT
Trish (Julie Hesmondhalgh) faces the aftermath of rape

DS Ellie Miller and DI Alec Hardy are back on form in Broadchurch (27 February ITV). The second series was a disappointment. Not so this one. In episode one, we were presented with a brilliant, sensitive portrayal of the aftermath of a rape. No graphic sensationalism: just the intense police procedure of bagging evidence, Miller's empathetic responses and, above all, a poignant performance from Julie Hesmondhalgh, who is already laying the foundation for future awards for her portrayal of the traumatised Trish Winterman.

Add to this the superb, atmospheric music and beautiful Dorset [and Somerset] locations, and we have a real treat ahead of us again. I can't wait to see how things unfurl – tinged with one touch of sadness, that this is to be the last series.

AUNTIE GETS IT WRONG

The BBC isn't listening so the audience isn't watching! Viewing figures for the second episode of SS-GB (26 February BBC1) were dramatically lower [the overnight figures fell from 6.07m to 3.86m]. Many viewers wrote to complain about the poor sound quality. It was interesting that many of the familiar faces on Channel 4's Gogglebox (24 February) made the same criticisms. Many of us just used the "off" button. But the BBC thinks it knows best. The same excuses are given: we are told that our modern TV sets are to blame. Doctor Digital (RT, 4 March) suggests we invest in a sound bar. They all miss the point!

I watch a lot of TV on many channels, with no problem hearing them, so my TV is not at fault. Broadchurch on ITV (27 February) was brilliant – even with a variety of accents, some whispered dialogue and background music, we heard every word. If other channels can get the balance right, then so can the BBC. They have the technology, but first they must admit they are in the wrong.
Linda Bayne Sidcup, Kent

ALLEZ FLORENCE

Death in Paradise? Sadly, it looks as if it will be Death by Cast Change for this lightweight but enjoyable series (Thursday BBC1). The new DI, Jack Mooney (Ardal O'Hanlon), lacks charisma and fails to convince. Perhaps the series can be saved by promoting DS Florence Cassell to DI and have her solve the murders, along with a new junior recruit to join her effective team of Dwayne Myers and JP Hooper, without the need for another white male?
Trevor Harvey Shoreham-by-Sea, West Sussex

SHINING EXAMPLE

I've so enjoyed Let It Shine (BBC1). The judges were constructive and fair, the competitors were very talented and the support given to make them look good was first class. The performances in the last three shows were as good as any stage show and the final three bands were as talented as any boy bands of recent years.

The final (25 February) was spectacular Saturday-night family entertainment – and Take That were better than ever!
Glenice Hardwicke Leicester

TABOO MARK 2?

A huge thank you to the BBC for Taboo (BBC1). It's been the best thing on TV for a long time: gritty, cruel, dramatic and totally enthralling. A brilliant cast who played their unattractive parts so well they were captivating despite their crimes. Tom Hardy was mesmerising.

Please make sure there will be another series, BBC. Thank you to all concerned for bringing this fantastic show to life.
Ginny Way Salisbury, Wiltshire

…Deafened by cries of "inaudible" (SS-GB), the quiet voices of approval of a quite different drama have been silenced. Taboo was searingly intelligent, with exemplary acting, believable settings, cinematic filming and a great storyline peppered with villains and, in Delaney, a true antihero.

Taboo is up there as a superb example of "different". And we could hear every word… A follow-up would be great.
Lesley and Nick Parsons Lanner, Cornwall

Nothing is confirmed yet, but the signs for Taboo are promising, with writer Steven Knight telling radiotimes.com his aim is to make up to three series. Turn to page 160 for more.

DUE FOR PROMOTION?
Death in Paradise's DS Florence Cassell (Joséphine Jobert)

SPOT THE BERYL

Like Dick Godfrey, who praised an unsung star of much TV period drama (Feedback, 4 March), my family are also Beryl crockery spotters. It started when my dad bought this awful green Beryl dinner service in the 70s. We hated it. But just as our Beryl started to be broken and chipped, we noticed her start to make her presence known on TV.

Now when she is seen in all her colours, we shout Beryl! Gradually, Beryl is making a comeback in my home as I collect bits when I see her. We're truly now in the presence of acting royalty.
Sarah Gosling York

…My husband and I were very amused to learn we are not the only ones to play "Spot the Wood's Beryl". The props hire companies must have an inexhaustible supply of the green range. We use it all the time at home, having collected a large quantity over the past 15 years, mainly picked up from charity shops.

PRIDE OF ITV
A quiet interlude from Lion Country

WILD ABOUT BIG CATS

Lion Country: Night and Day (ITV) was an excellent series, giving remarkable insight into the animals' everyday life and the difficulties they face in rearing their young. There were edge-of-the-seat moments, especially when following the cubs.

Big-cat aficionados like me have had quite a treat in recent weeks, as there were the two superb Natural World programmes on BBC2 following a cheetah family, where the problems in raising cubs were even more evident and three out of five didn't survive to adulthood. There was also The Secret Leopard, a beautifully filmed hour on the life of the most elusive of the big cats.

Perhaps one day it will be possible to have a programme about the smaller wildcats, many of which are endangered, such as the fishing cat, the leopard cat and several South American species.
Patrick Roberts Wrexham

PAXMAN'S NEW ANGLE

I liked the trip down the Tweed in Rivers with Jeremy Paxman (26 February C4) very much. He concluded, however, by saying the river doesn't belong to anybody. I'm sorry to disappoint everyone, but salmon rivers are owned by rich people. If you or I were to go along to try to catch a fish, they'd set the dogs on us.
Leon Harrington London SW13
RT understands that the actual river water and fish aren't owned by anyone, but the land adjacent to the river and the fishing rights are. Murky waters indeed...

TED IN 1984

What a coincidence! With the new version of SuperTed featured in You Ask Us (25 February), I was clearing out some old folders and pulled out this Radio Times SuperTed knitting pattern from 1984! I heard Simon Mayo (23 February Radio 2) talking about the retro 1980s feel to Comic Relief and asking for suggestions for music for that occasion, and it made me hope that he, or even Paul O'Grady, might play SuperTed as a Lost TV theme.
Ann Griffiths Burnham on Sea, Somerset

60s WON'T BE THE SAME

It was with sadness that I listened to the last Sounds of the 60s presented by Brian Matthew (25 February Radio 2). He was the voice of pop music for the baby boomers and his knowledge and expertise, and amiable presence, were second to none.

We will all miss our old mate.
Vic Butler Andover, Hampshire

...We're told by Radio 2's Lewis Carnie (Feedback, 25 February) that if 6am is too early, we can listen to Sounds of the 60s via iPlayer – but we have a poor internet connection and that won't alter in the foreseeable future.
Janis Price Llanrhaeadr, Denbigh

...I'm sure Tony Blackburn will put his usual energy and music knowledge into Sounds of the 60s, but he'll struggle for listeners at 6am. I certainly won't be listening. Maybe the BBC might reconsider this decision, as I'm sure there are lots of listeners out there who feel the same.
Paul Marshall via email
RT continues to have a big postbag objecting to the time change. Fans of Brian Matthew can look forward to the first of his special shows, The Brian Matthew Years, on Easter Day at 7pm.

JUNE'S A TRUE LEGEND

June Brown at 90: a Walford Legend (16 February BBC1) was a joy. It took me back to an incident when I was 17. I was looking after a toddler, who was playing with a windmill on a stick, and I panicked when the tip of the stick poked him in the eye. June, who happened to be passing, gently assisted me and stayed to comfort the lad.

In the programme June said that she didn't think there were parts of herself in the character of Dot – but kindness certainly is.

YOU ASK US

How did Taboo re-create Regency London?

I recognised some of the places in Taboo (BBC1) recently, but can't find any information on the locations. Can you help, please?
Pauline Langley, London SE3

We asked Sonja Klaus, the production designer on Taboo, how she went about re-creating such an authentic Regency atmosphere. "Taboo is set in London in 1814, very little of which still exists," she told RT. "We were covering all walks of Georgian life, from the ostentatious Prince Regent to the prostitute eating potato peelings, so I read diaries of the time to find out what they ate, how they spoke and how they smelt, and looked at Georgian artists such as Thomas Rowlandson, whose paintings documented daily life.

"There aren't very many London streets that we could use without needing masses of CGI: the poor London of the time has gone. But we were really lucky with Home Farm at Luton Hoo, Bedfordshire, which has been unchanged since the 18th century, and also in the Georgian fort at Tilbury, which is where we built the Wapping dockside set – it's right by the Thames, has an expanse of meadow at the back, and walls with the right-shaped bricks. We built the dockside buildings using

OLD FATHER THAMES
Taboo* starring Tom Hardy was part shot at Tilbury

18th-century barn timbers, which we bought on eBay – which was not only the cheapest way, but we also got the lovely authentic texture of the wood. The mill at the Mapledurham estate in Oxfordshire stood in for Ibbotson's mill, and we built a set for the interior.

"More of rich London survives, but I spent days searching for locations we could alter architecturally so people wouldn't immediately spot them!

"Among places we filmed were Hatfield House, Hertfordshire, for the Prince Regent and East India Company scenes; Ham House in west London for Sir Stuart Strange's office; Danson House in south-east London for Dr Dumbarton's offices; the Charterhouse in east London for the exterior of Newgate Prison; Coalhouse Fort in Essex for the exterior of Bedlam Hospital; London's Tallow Chandlers Hall for Thoyt's office; Wilton's Music Hall in Whitechapel for the theatre interior; and private homes in Stepney Green, east London, and Beaconsfield, Buckinghamshire, for Geary's and Delaney's houses."

A GOOD SOAKING

The truly jaw-dropping moment in the excellent first new episode of Shop Well for Less? (23 February BBC1) was not a financial one, but the revelation that Karen Rodgers, the mum of the family, spends 45 minutes in the shower each day! Apart from bemusement as to how you can pass so much time in there, she should really have been more grateful – having showers of just four minutes long would give her back nearly 250 hours of her life each year!
Steve Baldock Handcross, West Sussex

See Alison Graham's view: page 47

CHICKENS AND EGGS

Some fans of Further Back in Time for Dinner (BBC2) will recall that when eggs were rationed, there was an alternative – keep chickens. You gave your ration coupons for eggs to the corn chandler to buy feed instead. Any hen that stopped laying was given a china egg to encourage it, but if it did not lay again, it was eaten. You could also keep rabbits for the table.

UNLOCK THE CASH IN YOUR HOME

FREE guide to unlocking the cash in your home, written by Radio Times's money expert Paul Lewis

Retirees are looking at their homes in a new light – as a way to boost their retirement finances.

A lifetime mortgage, the most popular type of equity release plan, is secured against your home just like a traditional mortgage. It allows homeowners aged 55–95 to access a tax-free cash lump sum without having to downsize and move home.

POPULAR USES

The most popular use for the cash released is home and garden improvements, with 63 per cent of Key Retirement's customers spending the money on their home*. Projects such as adding a conservatory, updating the bathroom or landscaping the garden could make your home more practical for you both now, and in the future.

Holidays, debt repayment such as personal loans and credit cards, clearing an outstanding mortgage and gifting to family are also other popular uses. You should always think carefully before securing a loan against your property.

Valerie, from Wales, tells us how releasing cash from her home has changed her life. "At my age I need to make life as easy as possible for myself, especially around my house. The room I struggled with most was the bathroom – the layout just didn't work for me."

Valerie got a local builder in to look at the bathroom and price up the changes, including a walk-in shower.

"I soon realised that I'd need a way to fund it all without dipping into my everyday spending. I saw an advert for Key Retirement in Radio Times and found that a lifetime mortgage would allow me to release cash from my home, still own the house and live there."

Before speaking to Key Retirement, Valerie gave her son, who lives in Boston USA, a call to see what he thought. "I felt I should discuss this with him as getting a lifetime mortgage would affect his inheritance, but he was so supportive and said I should do what is best for me.

"When I rang Key to find out more, everyone was so helpful and took the time to explain the process. I made an appointment with my local adviser, who came to my house to discuss everything in more detail.

"I invited a good friend along to the appointment, which was encouraged, just to ensure I didn't miss any information. My adviser answered every question we had and was very pleasant and patient.

"Once I had thought the whole thing through and discussed it further with my son I decided to go ahead. It went through quickly and smoothly, plus I was kept up to date throughout the process.

"I have used the money released to fund the changes to my house, as well as booking a holiday to Boston. I have already recommended Key to friends. Equity release has changed my life and I hope it will change theirs too."

UNLOCKING THE CASH IN YOUR HOME: THE FACTS

- Equity release is available to those aged between 55 and 95, who own a property worth at least £70,000
- Typically no monthly repayments to make as the loan, plus roll-up interest, is repaid when the plan comes to an end
- With a lifetime mortgage, you still own your home and you can live there as long as you want
- You can guarantee an inheritance for your family with some plans
- You can move home with Equity Release Council approved plans, subject to criteria
- You will never owe more than the value of your home with an Equity Release council approved plan
- Equity release will reduce the value of your estate and may affect your entitlement to means tested benefits

Radio Times have partnered with Key Retirement, the UK's No.1 equity release specialist, and have produced a FREE guide written by money expert Paul Lewis. The guide is a great starting point to finding out if you could unlock the cash in your home.

Unless you decide to go ahead, Key's service is completely free of charge as Key's typical advice fee of 1.95% of the amount released would only be payable on completion of a plan.

THE VIEW FROM MY SOFA

‘I’d swim with wild dolphins’

Meera Syal on dream jobs and Goodness Gracious Me

Does your family row about what to watch on TV?
There’s lots of fighting over finding a programme we can all watch together as there are three generations in the house – me, my mother and my kids. We usually end up watching a film so we can cherry-pick something suitable for an 11-year-old and an 80-year-old. We also put on The Secret Life of Five-Year-Olds, which we all love and it isn’t going to offend Granny.

You must have a decent-sized sofa to suit all ages.
We’ve got a big L-shaped sofa, and a fairly big TV screen, not a mad one, but right for the room. It’s not one of those mounted-on-the-wall things, though.

Does anything on TV make you cry?
The Secret Life of Five-Year-Olds does. You see children learning to be kind and think of others. Also there’s the moment when you understand that the kid who’s played up did it for quite sad reasons.

Five-year-olds tend to bend the truth, too – as do grown-ups. What’s the silliest thing you’ve ever read about yourself?
A journalist once described me as having a privileged upper-class Oxbridge accent and that I was incredibly posh. I thought, “Hmm you’re not a very good journalist, are you? You haven’t done your research and you’re not very good at accents.” That was a bit odd. I think she decided I’d waltzed through life with a silver spoon.

The women you write usually haven’t been anywhere near a silver spoon. Do you think TV’s got better at depicting women?
It’s changing, but needs to change a little quicker. In theatre there’s lots of cross-gender casting, like Tamsin Greig playing Malvolio in Twelfth Night at the National. And in Elementary, the US version of Sherlock Holmes, Watson is played by an Asian American [Lucy Liu]. It would be nice if it happened a bit more in Britain because it can unlock something terrific.

A lot of your material is about being Asian in Britain – has TV progressed on that front?
I think we’ve slightly gone backwards. Some of the stuff I’d want to have on TV wouldn’t get on at the moment. It’s a conservative climate with lots of period pieces and lots of nostalgia. When people think of stuff with South Asians in, it tends to be programmes like the upcoming Rochdale abuse drama [Three Girls, BBC1].

Of course it’s not like those things don’t happen, but if that’s all that TV is doing, it looks like that’s the only thing Asians do. It’s a problem. If there were five or six or seven shows on TV featuring South Asians, then absolutely Rochdale is a worthy subject to investigate – but it’s about context. We should also be thinking about stories that just show us as people, not issues.

Goodness Gracious Me* was definitely about the people. Would you ever bring that back for a whole series?
We don’t want to redo something for the sake of it, but we’re discussing something. We’d like to bring our brand of humour back but in a different format. We have to be confident we’ve got the material and I think we have. We’re gathering it. That could well happen.

What would you be doing if you weren’t writing or acting?
I’d quite like to swim with wild dolphins for a living, but I don’t know if there’s a job like that. Or I’d work in an elephant sanctuary. That’s my dream job where I don’t have to pay a mortgage or think about my children. But if I had to do the sensible option that wasn’t acting or writing, I’d have gone into child psychology. That’s what I was going to do as my Masters course at uni before I ran away to join the circus. KASIA DELGADO
