THE 'ELVIS' DRESS

Diana said the Catherine Walker silk gown and jacket, set with sequins and pearls, reminded her of Las Vegas-era Presley. She wore it twice in 1989. "The weight is quite extraordinary," says Lynn.

COUNTRY CHARM

Diana wore this Bill Pashley tweed suit on her 1981 honeymoon with Prince Charles. "She asked for two versions and chose the larger one that gave her more room for country pursuits like walking and shooting," says Lynn.

MAGIC MEMORIES

Whether you only get up close to the stars' possessions or fork out serious coin to own them, there's magic in pop-culture memorabilia (see p. 52–53 for the upcoming auction of Patrick Swayze's mementos, and recent sale of Prince's iconic belongings). A new exhibit at Kensington Palace, Diana: Her Fashion Story, traces the journey of Princess Diana, who had yet to find her fashion footing—or her personal strength—when she captured the spotlight as "Shy Di" at 19. But as Diana evolved, so did her style. "She understood the language of clothes," says curator Eleri Lynn. "You see her go from the frills of the early 1980s to understanding what suited her as she became this fantastically self-confident woman."

Shane Sutton, Editor

DANCING QUEEN

Diana twirled in a midnight-blue velvet gown by Victor Edelstein for her iconic dance with John Travolta at the White House in 1985. "She had wanted to be a ballet dancer as a young girl," notes Lynn. "This was really a meeting of her interest in cinema and her love of dance."

BACK IN FASHION

"Kanye tried to keep as much media out as possible," a source told Us Weekly. "The crowd was mostly fashion buyers and friends and family." Despite reports, Kardashian West has "no plans" to return to Paris for Fashion Week at the end of February.

Before the showing, the pair enjoyed a Valentine's Day dinner.

Kim & comeb

Kim Kardashian West stepped out on Feb. 16 in a Vivienne Westwood top, Coach coat, Adidas pants and Yeezy boots.

Tyga and Kylie Jenner (who modelled in the Yeezy 2015 event) took in the show from their front-row seat.

The couple headed to an after-party, where they were mobbed by fans. They "seem to be doing much better," says a source. "They have fun together again."

Anna Wintour took in the show with Kardashian West.

Kanye's ack

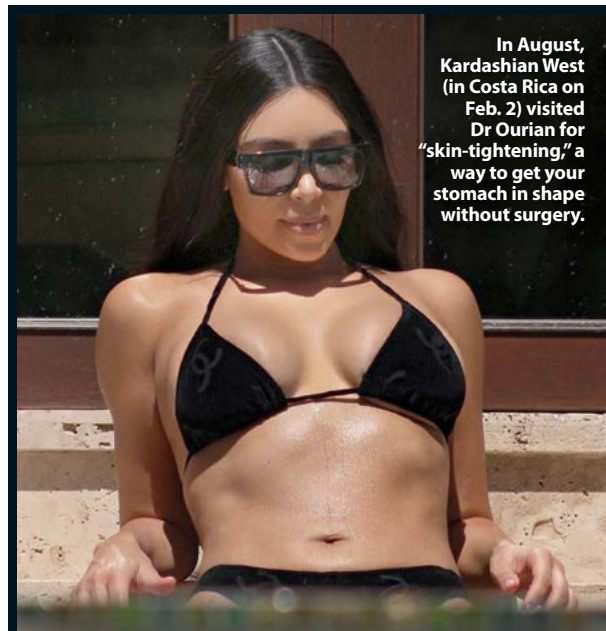

The troubled duo unite in (relative) understatement

AS KANYE WEST PREPPED FOR his Yeezy Season 5 show as part of New York Fashion Week, his wife, Kim Kardashian West, remained in Los Angeles. "They spent the weekend apart so Kanye could focus on the show," an insider tells WHO. "There is definitely some concern that the show will be too much stress for him. He gets so involved and it's hard for him to not get obsessed." The source adds that while this type of stress "has been very bad for him in the past," Kardashian West, 36, has been making sure to support her husband. "Kim keeps checking in to make sure he gets enough sleep."

The couple's efforts to take the pressure down—following Kardashian West's traumatic robbery during Paris Fashion Week in October and West's subsequent hospitalisation for exhaustion and paranoia in November—was evident in the show's setting and low-key approach. Unlike last year's trek to Roosevelt Island, where proceedings started two hours late and models fainted in the heat, this year's show took place at the more traditional setting of Pier 59 at Manhattan's Chelsea Piers. Scheduled for 5 PM, West moved the show to 3.30 PM to avoid a clash with Marchesa. "Kanye called me personally to let me know he was unaware that there was a conflict," Council of Fashion Designers of America chief Steven Kolb told Women's Wear Daily. "He immediately looked at alternative options."

The entire show, featuring a denim, fur and sportswear Calabasas-themed collection, lasted for about 15 minutes and West, 39, did not walk the runway or take a bow. The front row was filled with high-profile fans, including sister-in-law Kylie Jenner, her boyfriend, Tyga, Zoë Kravitz, Hailey Baldwin and Kardashian West, who perched next to Vogue's Anna Wintour. "So proud of my baby for his amazing show today! It was so good!" the star tweeted. "I'm so SO proud of him!!!" ■

In August, Kardashian West (in Costa Rica on Feb. 2) visited Dr Ourian for "skin-tightening," a way to get your stomach in shape without surgery.

COSMETIC CONFESSION

ON FEB. 19, KARDASHIAN WEST TOOK TO SNAPCHAT TO share that she had just visited her cosmetic dermatologist Dr Simon Ourian to get rid of some of her stretch marks. "I feel so excited that I finally did it," she said. "It didn't hurt that badly." A week earlier, she visited Dr Ourian to get work done on her belly button. "We are lasering. You guys, I never thought I could love someone and hate someone so much at the same time," she said. "If anyone that's had babies understands what it's done to your belly button, then you really understand how much you need Dr Ourian to tighten around your belly button so it could look back normal," she said. "It f—king kills but it will be worth it."

Zoë Kravitz and Kidman paired up at the Feb. 7 premiere of Big Little Lies.

Wait, what? The actress was once set to marry

In the northern summer of 2003, Nicole Kidman and Lenny Kravitz kept their relationship under wraps for several months—arriving at New York hot spots separately, issuing “just friends” denials—until Sept. 30, when her rep finally came clean. “They’re very close,” her spokeswoman, Leslee Dart, told WHO. Still, rumours of an engagement were hosed down. “He’s very important to her,” she said. “Beyond that, I don’t know.”

Now we do know. Promoting Big Little Lies, Kidman, 49, let the secret slip while talking up the closeness of the production’s female cast. “Well, I knew Zoë [Kravitz] because I was engaged to her father. It’s all in the family!” she told The Edit. Kidman has previously admitted to being engaged once between ex-husband Tom Cruise and her current husband, Keith Urban. “It just wasn’t right,” she told Vanity Fair in 2007 of the engagement, without revealing her former

But the former couple remain pals. Kidman and Urban, who married in 2006, hung out with Kravitz, 52, backstage at the 2013 CMT Music Awards. They all exchanged hugs and posed for a group photo. "I love Lenny," Kidman said in her interview with The Edit. "He's a great guy." ■

The star mum gets candid about self-acceptance and 'real life'

TURNING HEADS AT THE L'Oréal Paris "Galentine's Day" event in New York on Feb. 13, Blake Lively was happy to keep the focus on her body in a revealing red-carpet chat. "After the second kid, it's really different. So this is not my normal body, but I like it," the 29-year-old mother of James, 2, and Ines, 5 months, her girls with Ryan Reynolds, told E! News. "I'm learning to love my body in every iteration, and I think that's hard for women, and so I learnt a lot."

She wants her daughters' education about body image to begin now, as she told Refinery29.com. "What little girls are seeing isn't what [celebrities] look like when they wake up in the morning, even though it's no less beautiful," she said. "For me, it's important for my daughters to know that it's not real life ... I want them to see both sides." ■

"IT'S NOT

To film The Shallows in 2015, "I focused on training and eating well," Lively has said. "It took two different trainers and a nutritionist to help me get into that sort of shape because it's not normal to look like that eight months after having a kid."

"There's this awareness of what they grow up seeing," said Lively of daughters James (left) and Ines (with her and Reynolds on Dec. 15).

Presley led twin girls Harper and Finley through Narita Airport in Japan in 2014.

Lockwood (in LA in May 2015) was Presley's fourth husband.

Amid their messy divorce battle, Lisa Marie Presley accuses her ex of child abuse

WHEN LISA MARIE PRESLEY filed for divorce in June from her husband of 10 years, musician Michael Lockwood, she cited the standard line—irreconcilable differences—and requested full custody of their daughters, 8-year-old twins Harper and Finley, and reportedly no spousal or child support, even though she claimed he “took advantage” of her finances. “She doesn’t want any of his money,” a source told TMZ.

Now, the ongoing divorce proceedings have taken an alarming turn, with Presley, 49, claiming in court papers filed on Feb. 7 that she was “shocked and horrified and sick to my stomach” to discover that Lockwood, 55, was allegedly the subject of criminal investigations involving hundreds of inappropriate photos of children that authorities found on his electronic devices.

According to the filing, while Lockwood “has yet to be convicted of crimes related to his possession of these photos, that he possessed them is documented evidence of conduct that has destroyed the mental or emotional calm of Petitioner [Presley].”

On Feb. 18, police in Beverly Hills confirmed they received child-abuse allegations involving the family last northern summer—and that they referred the investigation to authorities in Tennessee. Police in that state then confirmed that they served a search warrant “at a residence in the City of Beverly Hills that led to the seizure of several items.”

Even so, Lockwood’s lawyer, Jeff Sturman,

Shocking claims

says Presley's filing does not accurately reflect the situation. Though he declined to elaborate, Sturman added that Lockwood "vehemently denies" the claims, calling them "highly sensational, inaccurate and unproven."

Meanwhile, court documents reveal that singer and actress Presley, the only child of Elvis and Priscilla Presley, has been in dire financial straits, living rent-free with her elder daughter, Riley Keough, 27. "I cannot recall the last time I spent money on clothes and shoes of any value," she said in the filing.

As for the twins, Priscilla, 71, confirmed on Facebook that her granddaughters were in her care. "There is lots of confusion, commotion and concern from all the talk circulating," she posted on Feb. 20. "Let me put this to rest ... the girls have not been in foster care and never will be. The girls have been with me and will be until all this is sorted out." ■

Priscilla shared this pic of her granddaughters to thank fans for their support.

IN LOVE AGAIN

The cast of 'Love Actually' reunite for a short sequel, in the name of Comic Relief's Red Nose Day

OSCAR-NOMINATED DIRECTOR RICHARD Curtis may "never have dreamed" of writing and directing a full-length sequel to his 2003 Christmas staple Love Actually, but when called upon to bring the cast back to benefit Comic Relief's Red Nose Day anti-poverty charity, he couldn't resist. "I thought it might be fun to do 10 minutes to see what everyone is now up to," Curtis said.

Among those on board for the special (airing March 24 on BBC One in the UK) are Hugh Grant (PM David), Keira Knightley (newlywed Juliet), Liam Neeson (stepdad Daniel) and Colin Firth (writer Jamie). "Who has aged best?" Curtis joked to showbiz website Deadline. "I guess that's the big question ... or is it so obviously Liam?" ■

Olson was 10 when she sang "All I Want For Christmas Is You" in the film. She has since pursued a music career.

Neeson and his screen family filmed by the Tate Gallery on Feb. 16 and were spotted hugging each other when reunited.

Brodie-Sangster was 13 here in his film debut. He has since starred in Game of Thrones and The Maze Runner.

OLDER, ACTUALLY

In the nearly 14 years since Daniel's stepson, Sam, chased after American crush Joanna, Liam Neeson, 64, has starred in three Taken films and Olivia Olson, 24, has voiced Vanessa, the crush of Ferb, voiced by Thomas Brodie-Sangster, 26, on Disney's Phineas and Ferb.

"My favourite pic of us," Rob Kardashian posted of himself and Dream, days after the split was made public.

"Unconditional," Chyna captioned a snap with her kids.

Rob & Blac

Another split

The reality stars and new parents are finally done with their rocky romance. For now, anyway

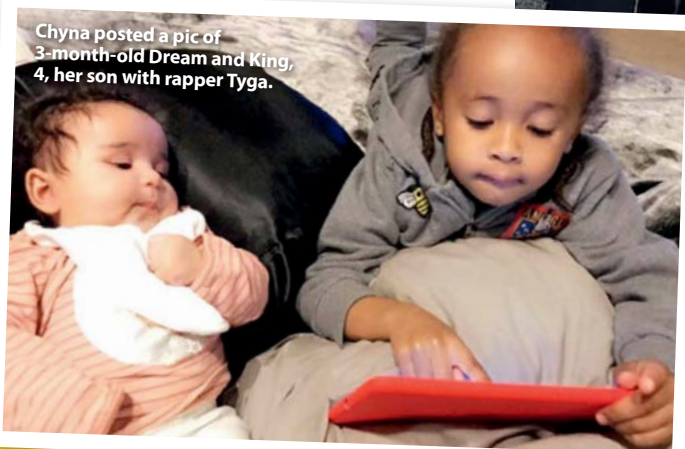

SINCE THEY FIRST WENT PUBLIC AS a couple last January, Rob Kardashian and Blac Chyna have had a consistently complicated relationship, filled with emotional highs (most notably the birth of daughter Dream in November) and dramatic—very public—lows. Now, they have decided to end their year-long engagement. "They split a while ago. The wedding plans are off," a source close to Kardashian, 29, told WHO on Feb. 16. "They are both trying to be mature about it. It was less dramatic this time."

Taking the drama down a notch won't be too tough. "Chyna is super fed up with Rob and thinks he is way too emotional and depressed," says the insider. "She thinks he has terrible issues. He is always battling his own insecurities and is unstable. It's a major turn-off to her, and she thinks it's incredibly unhealthy for the baby and their family."

Things took a turn for the worse in their relationship just before Christmas when Chyna, 29, and Dream moved out of their shared home after her Instagram was allegedly hacked and she claimed in a since-deleted post that Kardashian was behind the hack.

But in recent weeks the two appeared to be happy, showering their social-media feeds with love for one another—spending New Year's Eve together and celebrating their anniversary with a sweet Instagram video that showcased home footage of the couple kissing, cuddling and laughing throughout their relationship. Now, "Rob is focusing more on himself, the baby and work," a second source said. "He's been focusing on his sock line more." ■

'IT'S CRUEL'

Susan and Sean's happy union hits a huge hurdle

THE MINUTE HER "GROOM," SEAN, RODE DOWN the aisle, Married at First Sight's Susan knew "he was an amazing, caring guy." But the Perth-based mining-truck driver was "devastated" to find out the 35-year-old farmer lived on a remote property in Queensland. "Originally I thought it was a cruel thing for the experts to do, to match me with someone so far away," she confesses to WHO. "If they wanted the relationship to work, wouldn't they at least pair me with someone in the same state?"

During the home visits, the 37-year-old got a harsh dose of reality surrounding Sean's remote life—"It's just so different." But despite the huge hurdle, Susan vowed to keep an open mind about the relationship. "He is everything I asked for so I just tried to live in the moment. Be real about the distance but still be in love with him at the same time." ■

Zoe Saldana

Surprise new

Didn't see it coming! The star

FOUR DAYS AFTER SHE POSTED ABOUT “[chatting] about love and relationships over rosé,” Zoe Saldana was back on Instagram with a surprise announcement: “Marco and I are elated to share the news of the birth of our son Zen,” Saldana, 38, wrote on Feb. 18, with a picture of the newborn alongside his brothers, Cy and Bowie, 2, her twins with artist husband Marco Perego, 37.

The Live by Night star, who looked her usual sleek and stylish self at a Los Angeles function just two days before the announcement, was spotted leaving Cedars-Sinai hospital in Los Angeles with Zen on Feb. 13. Saldana, who at press time had not confirmed reports she used a surrogate, also gave no hint of her expanding family during an on-camera interview with Extra in January, though she was forthcoming about how there is “a lot of patience” required to parent twins. She may need even more now, but that’s just fine, as she wrote on Instagram: “We couldn’t feel more blessed with the new addition to our family.” ■

Saldana, who is of Dominican and Puerto Rican descent, and Italian husband Perego (on Oct. 29) are raising a multilingual family.

LABOUR PAINS

“There’s something that happens to your body hormonally, and it’s not just the weight that you acquire but your nerves, your muscles,” Saldana said in 2015, 10 months after the twins’ birth. “Everything hurts and feels uncomfortable.”

“#threeboys ... oh boy!” wrote Saldana on Instagram on Feb. 18, introducing son Zen.

The singer takes an optimistic view of her split

TALKING ABOUT HER BREAK-UP WITH ACTOR Joshua Sasse for the first time since announcing the news earlier this month, Kylie Minogue insists, "I look forward to moving on, richer for the experience." In an interview with the Herald Sun, the singer admitted that "I haven't had the white picket fence and happy ever after ... so far, but perhaps that's just not my destiny. I know love and I love to be in love." Minogue, 48, also revealed she is already at work on her upcoming fourteenth studio album. "It's been such a good tonic to be back in the studio," she said. "I can't wait to finish it and share it with everyone." ■

Bynes (in LA last July) "is working on her own designs, which are incredible thus far," a source told WHO. "She hopes to launch her line soon."

AMANDA BYNES

ONLINE IMPOSTER

The actress says someone stole her identity

SIX MONTHS AFTER AMANDA BYNES last used Twitter, the actress, now a fashion-design student, resurfaced in a flurry of tweets to say she wasn't the woman getting an ultrasound in a post on an account claiming to be hers.

"I am not getting married and I am not pregnant," wrote Bynes, 30. "I have asked repeatedly. This person continues to impersonate and harass me and Twitter needs to take the account down."

After a series of erratic incidents led Bynes to receive psychiatric treatment in October 2014, the former All That and Easy A star has kept a low profile. "I've been in school learning about the fashion business," she wrote in 2015, "so I don't have time to tweet." ■

Tamar Arminak, the lawyer for Amanda's parents, Rick and Lynn (in November 2014), said Amanda was "focused on living a balanced and healthy life."

Tori Spelling (with her family and McDermott's son Jack, far right) in January 2016) has said she is "officially in nesting mode" until her fifth child arrives.

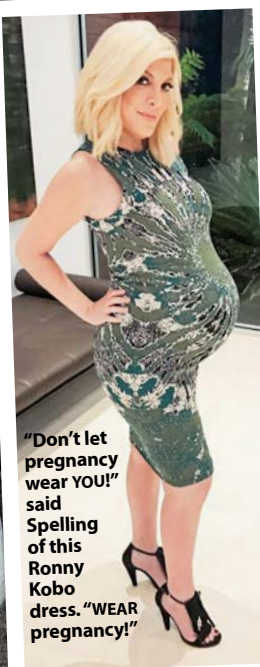

TORI SPELLING

Baby shower drama

An over-the-top bash raises eyebrows

TORI SPELLING'S LAVISH BABY shower for her soon-to-arrive fifth child, a boy, has reportedly enraged husband Dean McDermott's ex-wife, Mary Jo Eustace. According to the New York Post, Eustace balked at news Spelling's mother, Candy, spent an estimated $US40,000 on the Feb. 11 bash at the Hotel Bel-Air, particularly because McDermott allegedly owes her thousands in child support for their 18-year-old son, Jack (the couple divorced in 2006).

According to court records, McDermott is set to appear in a Los Angeles court on March 9. This would not be the first time Eustace has attempted to collect payments. In August 2015, she told a reporter from Entertainment Tonight, "I can't imagine not paying child support. It's a legal obligation." ■

Actress Leah Remini says Cruise could 'end' Scientology

SINCE RENOUNCING SCIENTOLOGY IN 2013, Leah Remini has turned her tumultuous departure into the docuseries Leah Remini: Leaving Scientology and the Aftermath. Now she wants another long-time member on her side—Tom Cruise.

The King of Queens actress was a guest on talk show Real Time with Bill Maher when host Maher asked her if Cruise, the church's biggest devotee, "could end this single-handedly," Remini replied, "He could end this. Correct. And because they are saying he singlehandedly is 'clearing the planet,' is changing the planet, so most Scientologists believe."

After Maher asked her what "clearing the planet" meant and that "he couldn't even make Jack Reacher a hit," Remini, 47, who said Maher's 2008 documentary Religulous helped her change her mind about her old faith, explained, "Scientologists believe that if he didn't make it a hit, it was because there were suppressive, evil people working against him, because he's winning in life and clearing the planet." ■

ST BARTS, FEB. 19

At 46, actress Jennifer Connelly still turned heads in a bikini as she and husband Paul Bettany, 45, headed to the Caribbean island destination. Since meeting on 2003's A Beautiful Mind, the couple have worked together on three other films. "I feel very creatively aligned with him," she said in 2015.

Bettany initially impressed her when "he started playing guitar and it was all over," she said.

When they first met, Bettany thought, "I've never been this close to someone that beautiful before."

"The biggest thing for me is wanting my kids to grow up safely and have happy lives," Connolly has said.

And we’ll always be a family,” she says. “And we’ll get through this time and hopefully be a stronger family for it.”

That family—Jolie and her children with Pitt, Maddox, 15, Pax, 13, Zahara, 12, Shiloh, 10, and twins Vivienne and Knox, 8—seemed to have the strength thing nailed on Feb. 18, a day before the BBC interview aired and drew global headlines for Jolie’s revelations about how she is

“We have all been through a difficult time”

“coping” as a single mother, and how her kids’ lives have changed. With their mother glamorous in black lace, the brood escorted her to the premiere in Siem Reap, Cambodia, of her latest directorial effort, genocide drama First They Killed My Father. “We finally made it,” said Maddox, who worked on production of the film in the country of his birth, taking the microphone. “It’s a great honour to present this film to all of you, and to stand by my mother and my family.”

Clustered around the star, her children waved, smiled and were unfazed taking photos with Cambodian royalty including King Norodom Sihamoni. Shiloh even made a short speech in Khmer, and they all looked happy and united in their first big public outing since their parents’ ugly split in September—and, in BBC footage, some were seen confidently frying and eating spiders and scorpions with their mum as head chef (see box, p. 24). But Jolie, 41, conceded that recovering from the enormous private upheaval is an ongoing process: “Many, many people find themselves in this situation. My whole, my family ...

Hours after the premiere, Jolie (front row with her kids) had a costume change for the film's opening ceremony.

FROM THE HEART

At the premiere, Jolie said the film was a "thank you" to the country where she adopted her eldest child in 2002. "Without Cambodia, I may never have become a mother. Part of my heart is, and will always be, in this country. And part of this country is always with me: Maddox."

"I have watched the young people grow into really kind, empathetic, curious human beings," the movie's screenwriter, Luong Ung, told People magazine of Jolie's children.

we've all been through a difficult time."

The spark for it was what Jolie teared up over and had trouble talking about in her candid BBC sit-down: on Sept. 14, an altercation involving her, Pitt and Maddox on the family's private jet resulted in the actress dropping her divorce bombshell five days later. Soon, as court documents show, the children were in ongoing therapy and Pitt, 53, was investigated—and cleared—in November of allegations of verbal and "physical" abuse towards his eldest son. Since then, he's had limited supervised access with the kids and Jolie has largely nurtured them in private, apart from a New Year family ski holiday to Colorado and a shopping trip with the twins on Jan. 28. "My focus is my children, our children ... and my focus is finding this way through," she said. "We are and forever will be a family. I am coping with finding a way through to make sure that this somehow makes us stronger and closer."

Still, finding and building a new reality has been tough, Jolie told the BBC. She was blunt when asked what she really wants to do first thing in the morning when she wakes up, replying, "Get through the day." She hinted that her kids (and pets) have needed extra TLC—"It's been a difficult few months"—with a couple of them sleeping in her room. "Right now, I'm going through a moment where there's just, everybody's in my room."

The star exchanged traditional greetings with King Norodom Sihamoni.

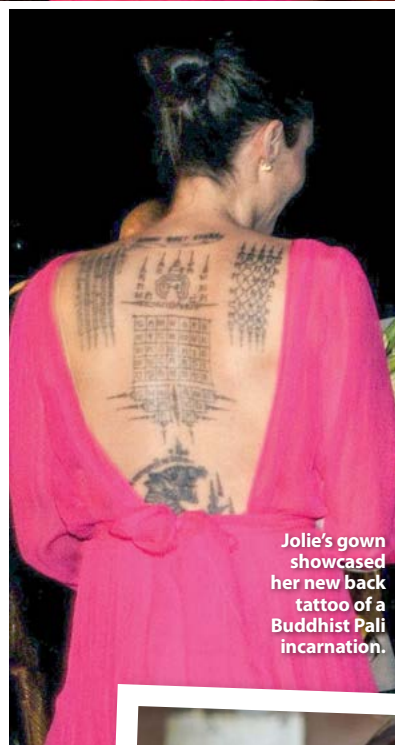

"I cannot find words to express what it means to me that I was entrusted with telling part of the story of this country," said Jolie (with Queen Mother Norodom Monineath Sihanouk).

Two dogs and two hamsters and two children at the moment. It's wonderful." And chaotic. Most mornings, she said, "I just wake up trying to figure out who's going to get the dog out, who's going to start the pancakes and did anybody brush their teeth."

Running a busy household where all the kids are home-schooled and Jolie juggles scheduling their dental appointments with her professional commitments was pressure enough when she had Pitt by her side to chip in. The pair's opposing parenting styles were a factor in the split, insiders said, and Pitt had "always been stricter," a source close to the family told WHO in October. "They always had disagreements when it came to disciplining the kids. He has wanted the kids to have more structure. Brad will get frustrated sometimes and yell at the kids." Jolie, said the source, has "a more relaxed attitude," meaning the children "get out of control and the house was constant chaos."

Other problems for the celebrated

Jolie's gown showcased her new back tattoo of a Buddhist Pali incarnation.

Jolie (with local child actors) praised the "resilience, kindness and talent of the Cambodian people."

Maddox (centre) "is happy to be back in his country," said Jolie.

EAST MEETS WEST

The premiere of First They Killed My Father was held at the Terrace of the Elephant in the ancient Angkor Thom temple complex. Tents were set up and local families picnicked along the nearby river as dignitaries hit the red carpet.

pair were more internal. “Things built and built over time—it wasn’t one thing,” a source close to Jolie explained to WHO at the time of the bust-up. And while the actress was having doubts over her marriage, she was also struggling with a pivotal personal shift and “changed a lot” between her marriage in August 2014 and divorce, an insider told WHO. “She wants something more than being an actress and director. She wants to be more involved with the United Nations and her missions.” Early in 2016, “she seemed troubled and almost depressed,” adds the insider. “Angelina said she was just bored. It seems she has been looking for a new life for a while.”

She’s found that. As to Jolie’s vow to make her family “closer,” she didn’t elaborate on whether that includes Pitt, who called a ceasefire in January when they agreed in court to keep details of their divorce private. But she was expansive when asked by the BBC about her future, specifically where she sees herself in five years’ time. “At that stage, do I have all teenagers? I hope just standing,” she said. “I would like to be travelling around the world, visiting my children, hoping that they’re just happy and doing interesting things in, I imagine, many different parts of the world, and I’ll be supporting them.”

Love, lies & MOVING

Sasha Mielczarek breaks his silence, setting the record straight on his split

"There are reminders of my relationship with Sam everywhere," says Mielczarek (with Frost in November 2015).

The irony is not lost on The Bachelorette's Sasha Mielczarek that moments before he is about to publicly discuss the end of his 18-month relationship with radio host Sam Frost, he walks past two brides and grooms having their official wedding photos taken in Sydney's Observatory Park on Feb. 19. Rewind just a few months and that was the same ending he had envisioned for himself and the bubbly 27-year-old, who he famously met on reality show The Bachelorette in 2015. But not all fairytales have happy endings. "And now here I am on my own!" says the NSW South Coast-based construction manager, 31, speaking for the first time about his split since it was announced on Dec. 27. "It's been a pretty tough couple of months," he acknowledges. On top of mourning the end of his relationship, he was also grieving the sudden passing of his grandmother Roma—mentioning her name causes him to tear up. But with the help of family and friends, including fellow The Bachelorette contestant Dave Billsborrow—they met up the day before while he was in Sydney for work—"I'm feeling much better." He sat down with WHO's Karlie Rutherford.

How have you been?

The start of the year was pretty tough. But I recently went away to America on an impromptu trip, which was good to clear the head. And I've come back feeling refreshed.

Why did things between you and Sam end?

"It's been a pretty tough couple of months"

It was a mutual, amicable decision and distance was the main reason. Basically, Sam would get up early for 2DayFM breakfast show Rove & Sam [in Sydney] and I couldn't really talk to her till about midday and by that stage I was at work [about three hours south, in Huskisson]. I work a fairly gruelling job as a construction manager for a commercial building company. I look after 35 staff as well as 250 guys on site. I am solely responsible for their safety and it's a huge responsibility, so not being able to talk to Sam during the day was tough for me. Then by the time I'd finished work, sometimes at 9 PM, she was already asleep. So that was challenging. We would do a lot of travelling to each other, but when you're both leading busy lives, it gets tough. In the end it got the better of us. We don't blame anyone. It was just the circumstances.

Before that, how serious were things between you and Sam?

I bought a block of land in Bowral and we spoke about me building on that and possibly moving there together. We spoke about how many kids we would have, where we would get married and who we would invite. It was all real. I understand there might be people out there [on TV] that aren't, but Sam and I, that was it for us.

So did you just not see a way through the distance problem?

It just got to a point where it was too difficult. We'd both had challenging years, individually and together, and it's something we both decided was best for both our sanities.

What role, if any, did the media spotlight and public pressure

Confirming the split on Instagram in December, Mielczarek said he was "absolutely heartbroken."

THE WOMEN IN HIS LIFE

Before splitting with Frost, Mielczarek was also mourning the sudden passing of his maternal grandmother, Roma. "She was an amazing person and so selfless," says Mielczarek, explaining how for most of her life she ran a lodge for the socially disadvantaged and the mentally unstable, which he used to visit on weekends. Roma and his mother, Kym, are his inspiration: "They've dedicated their lives to helping other people."

play in putting pressure on the relationship?

For me, I cop more shit on site. It's not really an issue for me. But for Sam, because she's such a beautiful, sensitive soul, sometimes it did get the better of her. And I was always there to pick her up. But honestly, I don't think it played a huge issue in it. If we put the media and the show aside, Sam and I were just like any other couple facing everyday challenges. Distance was an additional challenge we tried to navigate our way through, however we both made a decision together that was the best for the two of us at the time.

Let's clear up some of the rumours about the break-up—firstly, that it was because you were under contract to be together and that contract ended.

That's ridiculous. No such thing exists. I mean, Sam and I fell in love. And I still love her. She's an amazing person. We fell head

SPEAKING OUT

"I get asked so many questions about what happened between me and Sam, so I decided to clear the air," says Mielczarek on his reasons for this interview. "We met in a public forum so I understand the interest from the public. I get it."

Mielczarek says Frost now looks after their dog, Rocky (together in June).

The couple went on a Bali holiday in June.

over heels in love from the moment we saw each other. There was no way that wasn't real.

Did it end because you are with another woman?

That's ridiculous. I am sitting here alone. I'm single. I've just been spending time with friends and family and they've helped me get back on my feet.

Or that Sam is in a relationship with Dave Billsborrow?

He called me up and thought it was laughable. Dave is one of my best mates now. We talk daily. Even when those rumours started, he didn't need to say anything, I knew it was rubbish.

Who helped you through this difficult time?

My mum, Kym. I tell her everything. Probably too much. And she's always there when I'm down to pick me back up. It's been especially hard for her during that time because she was doing her own grieving for her own mother. It was hard to see my mum so vulnerable during that time, but then after it all she was so strong. She's been so amazing. If I could be half the person she is, I would be a top bloke.

When did you lose your grandmother?

October 2. My grandmother and I had a really close bond and it was very unexpected. There was no lead-up to it and I was away in Perth, so I didn't get the chance to say goodbye. But she's with me now.

Have you thought about moving on and what the future holds for you, relationship-wise?

I'm not really thinking about it at the moment. I still believe in love because Sam and I were head over heels in love with each other. But I'm not ready to be with anyone and not even ready to contemplate that. Like I said, I've been spending a lot of time with family and friends and they've picked me back up from a pretty dark place at the start of the year.

Do you still speak to Sam? Do you know how she's handling things?

Look, at the time we spoke about a lot of things. When you break up with someone there is obviously a bit of time you need [apart] from each other. So we are both taking that time to get ourselves back where you were. But yeah, she's doing it pretty tough as well at this time. I know that.

What have you been doing to keep your mind off things?

Work. About nine months ago I was promoted to a construction manager's role and I'm focusing a lot of time and energy on that and trying to make it successful. I also have a residential building business on the side and this year I'm focusing on getting two houses built, one is my mum's and one is my own. I also recently started a blog, Fittradio.com.au, with a mate of mine. We are both in the construction industry and we see a lot of unhealthy habits out there for our workers. We thought it would be good to try to suggest some lifestyle changes for these guys because no-one really talks to this audience. Like, instead of eating that hamburger at the pub every night, why don't you go home and make one with wholemeal bread and turkey mince and have a low-carb beer?

Knowing how things have ended between you and Sam, do you regret going on The Bachelorette?

I never regret anything I do. Things happen for a reason, whether that be something really good or something bad and I don't regret anything. Through that show I met Sam and she's such a beautiful person. And I've also made mates like Dave.

Would you ever go on The Bachelor?

Nope. I can tell you right now, hand on heart, that is definitely not a possibility.

Do you have a message for your supporters?

Thank you! You've been amazing to Sam and I. Majority of people have been so supportive. And during tough times it got Sam through a lot of dark places and it got me through as well. Even during and after the break-up, people have been so beautiful.

Do you still believe in love?

Of course! ■

BECKHAMS
HOLIDAY

Victoria Beckham posted this shot of David with daughter Harper (in Poivre Blanc), captioning it "kisses."

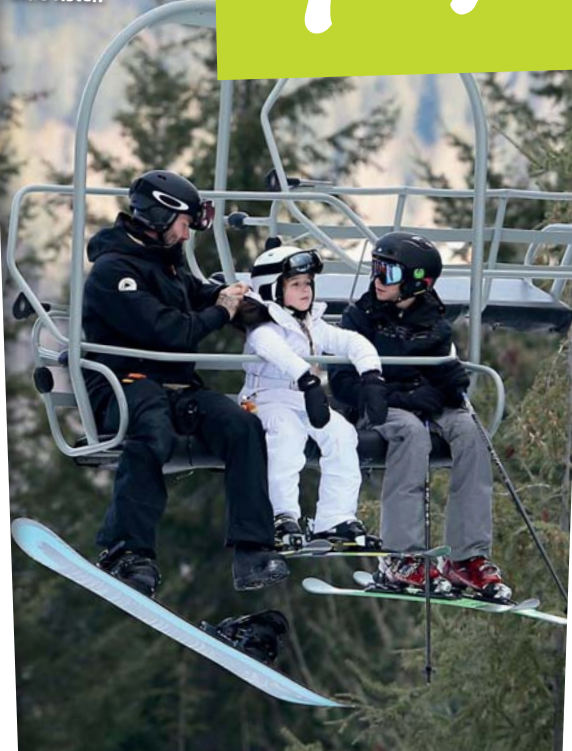

Cruz checked on Harper, 5, as the family waited for another turn on the slopes.

"She's very feminine," Victoria Beckham has said of daughter Harper. "But she has got three older brothers, so you know she is tough."

Cruz Beckham (below right, with David and Harper) later said on Instagram that he "had fun skiing with my little sister."

FAMILY

The Beckham brood hit the snowy slopes

There's a first time for everything and on Feb. 17 in the Canadian ski resort of Whistler, David Beckham finally got his moment on the mountain. Joined by wife Victoria and their four children, the former soccer star was following their Fashion Week pit stop in New York with his inaugural snowboarding holiday, which he documented on Instagram.

"Don't usually post so many," he explained to his 33 million followers, "but it's so beautiful up here, plus having such a special time ... Btw my first time ever boarding or even on the slopes." By Day 4, son Brooklyn had broken his collarbone, but his father was sounding like a pro: "I must say I'm slowly getting it ... One of the things I've always wanted to do and I'm finally allowed." ■

Brooklyn Beckham, 17, sported the pink F.A.M.T. hoodie he wore to an Alexander Wang show at New York Fashion Week days earlier.

"Boys on the top," said David Beckham of this snap with sons Romeo, 14, and Cruz, who turned 12 on Feb. 20.

Fashion designer Victoria (with son Cruz) was with her brood in New York earlier in the week.

David said wife Victoria was "looking good in all white" as she hit the slopes in a ski suit from Adidas by Stella McCartney.

The family trip came on the heels of bad press for David, who recently had three years' worth of his emails leaked.

THE FALL GUY

Brooklyn Beckham took a tumble while boarding—and was left with a broken collarbone. On Feb. 18, he uploaded a video showing him in the moments ahead of his fateful fall. "Broke my collarbone at the end," he wrote. A day later, he posted an X-ray as proof.

After his accident, Brooklyn could be seen hobbling around the resort with his left arm in a sling.

Hackett leaving the Gold Coast's Southport Police Station on Feb. 15. "This is not Grant Hackett," said Craig Hackett of his brother's outburst.

GRANT HACKETT

'HE NEEDS HELP'

Before his outburst, there were fights, an intervention and a break-up. Now, the swim star's family make a desperate plea

"I feel for Mum and Dad," said Craig Hackett (right, with brother Grant and mum Margaret on Mother's Day last year).

"It's hard for people with this sort of problem," said Neville Hackett (inset) of his son (in custody on Feb. 15).

Back in late 2015, in the lead-up to the Rio Olympic Games, Grant Hackett was talking up his own revival. Having come out of rehab and a painful divorce, the former swimming champ was training for a touted comeback and had finally come to terms with life as a divorced dad. Sitting with WHO at a favourite café in his home town of the Gold Coast, he regretted his controversies, but his eyes were firmly on the future. "I made some mistakes, I've been there, I have been open and honest about it," he said. "I'm trying to move forward and that's where my focus is."

But last week the 36-year-old shockingly stumbled on that journey. In handcuffs in the back of a police car, the father of two was taken to a police station on Feb. 15 after an outburst at his parents' home on the Gold Coast, with witnesses reportedly seeing the three-time Olympic gold medallist furiously stabbing a knife into a chopping board during the incident. After he was released without charge, Hackett accused his older brother, Craig, of bashing him, then disappeared, forcing his father, Neville, to make a public plea for help. He has since been in contact with his loved ones and at press time was believed to be holed up in a Gold Coast hotel. "Grant needs help," said Craig. "We're pleading for people to help us. It's coming to the point now ... He's dangerous."

That danger has left his parents "nervous wrecks," says Craig, a Gold Coast physio-therapist and father of two. Hackett "became abusive and aggressive, verbally," said Neville of the Feb. 15 incident at the Mermaid Waters home where he lives with wife Margaret. "He just didn't make any sense and it was obvious something was wrong." So wrong that his father, a retired cop, called police. "They came and they settled him down," said Neville. "Eventually they got him to go with them."

Upon his release without charge a few hours later, Hackett was still agitated, taking to Instagram to make a shocking claim. "My brother comments to the media ... But does anyone know he beat the shit out of me," he posted with a photo of himself sporting a black eye and facial cuts. While it is not clear when the photo was taken, the Gold Coast Bulletin reported the pair scuffled earlier this year when Craig and Margaret came over for an apparent "intervention." It is alleged Hackett, "who was in the middle of one of his benders," according to a source, charged at his brother "and Craig punched him."

Hackett may have recently suffered a blow to his heart, too. In the days before the meltdown, he is rumoured to have broken up with his girlfriend of seven months, Maggie Keating, a Canadian working as a trainee lawyer at a Brisbane law firm. The pair recently deleted photos of each other from their Instagram accounts, according to reports. A source told WHO that late last year, he saw Hackett arguing with a blonde woman in the Brisbane CBD. "She was quite clearly saying the words 'F--k off' to him and she stormed off," says the source.

Weeks later, Hackett was reportedly involved in a heated argument while he and a female friend were in Arizona for US swimming great Michael Phelps's New Year's Eve wedding celebration. The Bulletin quoted a source saying Hackett was "wasted" and "angry" and security guards at an Arizona hotel had to restrain him. Hackett has denied the incident took place. His problems stem from "a number of things," his former coach Denis Cotterell tells WHO. "You just don't know what can trigger something."

By Hackett's own admission, alcohol is a common thread. In 2011, he went on a drink-fuelled rage in the Melbourne apartment he shared with his then wife, singer Candice Alley, and their twins, Charlize and Jagger, now 7. Three years later, he was photographed in his underwear in a Melbourne hotel, looking for son Jagger, who he believed was missing; he blamed the incident on the sleeping pill Stilnox. Then last year, he verbally threatened a passenger aboard a Virgin Australia flight, allegedly tweaking his nipple. Said Hackett at the time: "Being in that state and binge drinking is an issue I need to address."

It's a vow he appears to be struggling to keep. On Feb. 16, Neville was relieved to announce that his son had been found "alive and sober." Said Craig: "From a mental-health perspective, I hope something can be done." That could include, according to Hackett himself, another stint in rehab. "It's probably something I would do again, if I'm struggling," Hackett told WHO in 2015. "Because you have time to yourself and you have to dig deep and delve into what you've been through."

"I GOT DEPRESSED"
"I went through depressive episodes," Hackett told WHO in 2015. "I'm not a person who has long-term depression, but I got depressed from things. Everyone deals with it differently."

Hackett appeared intoxicated at Melbourne's Tullamarine airport following the "nipple tweaking" incident on April 17 last year.

MKR's NEW JUDGE
Darren
Robertson

"We followed our hearts moving here," says Magdalena Roze (with fiancé Darren Robertson and son Archie in Bryon Bay, NSW, on Feb. 8). "And it's worked out for the best."

"He's basically just me," says Darren of Archie. "Very, very cheeky. And he's going through a bit of a clinging-to-Mum phase."

"I'm sure people are terrified of him in the kitchen," says Darren (right) of fellow MKR judge Colin Fassnidge. "But he's a big softie."

Wrangling models for a morning shoot can be a daunting task on the best of days. Which is why chef Darren

Robertson and his fiancée, meteorologist and former TV presenter Magdalena Roze, burst into laughter as they recall the family photo session their son, Archie, 14 months, nearly derailed with some very diva-like behaviour on Feb. 8 in Byron Bay, NSW. "Knowing we had a shoot, he overslept," says Magdalena. "He was fashionably late." Cracks new

My Kitchen Rules judge Darren, 40, "I don't think he has a future as a model."

What Archie does have is a regular morning seat at Three Blue Ducks on the Farm, the Byron Bay outpost of Darren's café near Sydney's Bronte Beach. Most mornings, you can find him and his parents out the front, enjoying a laugh and a wholesome meal. "Life runs at a different tempo here," says Darren. "It's nice. There are huge benefits to someone like me, who's a bit of a workaholic. Things have been put into perspective." At the café, says Magdalena, 35,

"we have these raised beds with herbs and edible flowers. I like to let Archie pick a few, put them in his mouth, explore the flavours. Then we'll take a walk, sit down and have a meal on the grass. He's a very enthusiastic eater, like his mum and dad. Who would have thought?"

Food has always played a pivotal role in Darren and Magdalena's lives—and not just because of his career. The two met in a makeup room

BIG YEAR

Last year, Magdalena (with her boys at Byron Bay) said her goal was to leave the house without baby vomit on her shirt. "I have not succeeded yet," she says. "And I don't mind. I really don't."

FUNNY FARM

"We don't have any pets," says Magdalena. "Well, one pet: Archie. We really want to get a dog, but we're doing the baby thing first. We've got 500 chicks laying eggs for the restaurant. And I want to get a beehive! This year, we're getting our shit together."

"The kid eats everything," says Magdalena. "Even liver. It kind of grosses me out, but he needs the iron."

my face. I didn't think she would say yes."

She did—owing to their schedules, though, the first date did not happen for six months. But from there, things moved quickly and within a year and a half, the couple had moved to Byron Bay so Darren could launch his eatery. "It was crazy," he recalls. "We really didn't come up for air that first year. And it was a lot tougher for Mags." Says Magdalena, "I didn't really think about the effect it would have on my career. If I had, maybe we wouldn't have gone. And after the first few weeks, I struggled. I lacked purpose. I felt lonely."

Ultimately, Magdalena tapped into the passions—travel, lifestyle, food—she had set aside to pursue her TV career. She started a blog and began considering her own crack at a cookbook. Three months after the couple's January 2015 engagement, Magdalena fell pregnant and that December, "we became a unit of three," she says. "I'm not going to lie. It had its challenges! You're sleep-deprived. Things aren't as glam or sexy as they once were, but you love each other through that. And it makes you stronger. Now I feel like we are unbreakable."

So wherever they are—Byron, Sydney, visiting Darren's family in the UK—the trio keep to a daily routine. When Archie wakes, they enjoy morning cuddles before making his breakfast and heading out for coffee.

"This is really nerdy, not rock-and-roll at all," says Magdalena, "but Darren and I do the crossword every day." (Darren says they are "not bad ... we can get the whole thing. But just quick crosswords, not cryptics.") By late afternoon, a dip in the ocean is a must. Says Magdalena, "Archie loves the water. He's obsessed with it." So is his father:

Darren surfs nearly every day, which is causing Magdalena stress. "We are in nesting mode and I'm in deep, redesigning our home. The palette is neutral, a beachy and coastal vibe. I'm in complete denial I have a baby, because overtime—quite literally. She would regularly rise at 3 AM for breakfast-TV gigs, study for a meteorology degree at night and travel wherever she was asked during the hours in between. "I was really, really tired," she tells WHO. "Probably too tired to even read the situation properly. And there I was, paired with this gorgeous chef who ended up asking me out the next day."

Why so fast? "Well," says Darren, "She sort of hinted she was single! I asked if she cooked at home and she said, 'Yes, but only for one.' I don't think she winked ... but it had a vibe. I figured it was now or never. Keep in mind I had three inches of makeup on the floors and walls are white. Plus I'm with a guy who brings half the beach home with him every day. I've had to let go." That's not something that comes easily to Magdalena, who has two big projects this year: a food-focused podcast and her first cookbook, Happy & Whole, due for release in April. Her "passion and drive" are what Darren calls Magdalena's most attractive qualities, "but those are probably also the things that wind me up the most! 'C'mon, put the computer away, don't think about work ...'"

Then again, he concedes his own workload is "more hectic than ever." On Feb. 22, Darren began his stint as a guest judge on Seven's My Kitchen Rules alongside Colin Fassnidge. "I really enjoyed it," he says. "I eat out a lot, so eating food someone else has cooked for you at their table doesn't happen often. Some of it was really not that great, some was awesome. And having someone like Colin with me made it more pleasurable. He's hilarious." Would he come back to MKR? "Let's see how I'm perceived. If people are throwing their phone at the screen, maybe not."

Despite their myriad ventures, both parents say raising Archie is their most important job. But they also plan to carve out time for each other. "We've kept the baby alive!" says Magdalena. "We're strong and resilient. Now we can focus on the relationship a lot more." To that end, wedding bells are set to ring by the end of the year. "We had to put it on hold when I fell pregnant," says Magdalena. "Now we're out of the fog, we can plan. It's exciting thinking about the look of it all. I have a working guest list of more than 200. And most of it's kids. Oh, God. How do we do this?"

Speaking of kids, Magdalena says Archie can expect a sibling or two. But first, maybe a few more placid days in the sunny Byron air. And, of course, that wedding. "We do plan on expanding the brood," she says. "But I want to be able to enjoy our big day. I want that champagne!"

'IT'S NOT FAIR'

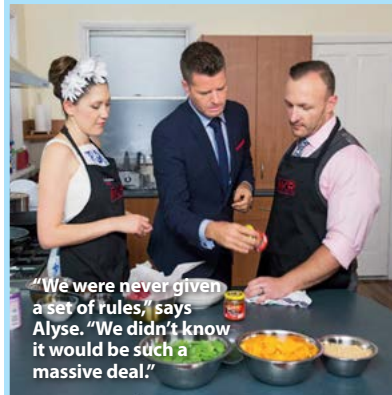

"We've never been called cheaters," says Alyse, "and we don't see it that way."

The latest team to get knocked off the chopping block say their time on MKR ended too soon—and that confusion over the rules is to blame. On the Feb. 20 episode, Queensland newlyweds Alyse and Matt Jenner landed in hot—make that scalding—water when they used a jar of curry paste to make beef satay.

The move earned a rebuke from judge Pete Evans, who made Matt show everybody the jar in question, as well as competitors including self-proclaimed "seafood king" Josh, who called them cheaters. Now they are speaking out, saying the public shaming kneecapped them and hastened their exit from the competition. "I appreciate the judges viewed it as a cop-out, but it could have been handled differently," says Alyse. "It painted a visual target on our back."

The pair lost their elimination cook to their biggest rivals, Josh and Amy. And Matt says it was clear from the outset they would struggle to come out on top. "We were up against not only Josh and Amy, two confident seafood cooks, but also his whole 'brand'. Josh is a great asset to the show with his controversial remarks. We would have been pushed out regardless of whether we slipped up or not."

Despite the result, Evans stands by his decision: "Teams should make certain things from scratch if they want to be taken seriously. Especially when other teams are making their own." Reminded that other teams have used pre-packaged ingredients this season (David and Betty had Sriracha sauce; Amy and Tyson crushed up packaged pretzels), Evans replies: "You need to look at the complexity of the dishes. A dish like beef satay is made by its base. Sriracha is a condiment. But we did tell David and Betty they should make it in the future."

"We were never given a set of rules," says Alyse. "We didn't know it would be such a massive deal."

Evans says he made Matt show the jar "to make sure teams would judge accordingly."

BEST PICTURE

One could argue that La La Land was crowned the Best Picture winner back in August when Tom Hanks told a crowd at the Telluride Film Festival that the movie was "brand new" and something "that you can't imagine." Since then, the $30 million musical has raked in more than $125 million and has danced its way into almost every chamber of the Academy's heart, scoring trophies from the Directors Guild and the Producers Guild. It failed to score a Screen Actors Guild nomination for Best Ensemble, but that probably won't stop its waltz to the podium.

BEST ACTRESS

It has been a fine year for women in film. From Ruth Negga's quiet resolve in Loving to Natalie Portman's searing anguish in Jackie, the Best Actress field is packed with complex, nuanced characters. But the real race is between Isabelle Huppert for her morally murky role in Elle and Emma Stone for her bittersweet, love-affirming performance in La La Land. Stone has the momentum. There's been a growing appreciation from the Academy that what she made look easy demanded real talent and precision.

READY FOR THE OSCARS!

The talk-show host is rehearsing his jokes (look out, Matt Damon!) and getting suited up for Hollywood's biggest night

Jimmy Kimmel makes no bones about it: Matt Damon should be afraid. Very afraid. When the Jimmy Kimmel Live! star takes the stage to host the 89th Academy Awards on Feb. 26 he says Damon, who is nominated as a producer for Manchester by the Sea, will surely be the brunt of a few jokes. "He got nominated, unfairly obviously, for producing," says Kimmel, 49, who has had an infamous 11-year faux feud with Damon. "You know he doesn't produce anything. Maybe he produces garbage at home."

But the rest of the star-studded crowd can rest easy. Kimmel, who has previously hosted the Emmys and the American Music Awards, says he doesn't plan to make anyone uncomfortable. "You have to make the audience laugh," he says. "That's the key."

When was your first Oscars?

I snuck into the Governors Ball—I think it was in 1995. I was the morning host for Kevin & Bean on KROQ radio. Kevin and I put on our tuxedos and we figured if we got there early enough we would become part of the scenery. We hung around for nine hours, then the Oscars ended and everyone started filing in and they did a security sweep and kicked us out. But we made a U-turn and went right back in. We sat down with John Travolta and we told him we snuck in and he was laughing. He got the waiter to bring us food.

When did you get the call with the hosting offer?

I was coming back home from vacation in Hawaii. I was in the airport. I looked like I'd seen a ghost. Then I had to tell my wife, who had just suffered through three months of Emmys anxiety with me.

How did your wife (Molly McNearney, co-head writer on Jimmy Kimmel Live!) react?

She wasn't thrilled. I think she cursed. She'll be backstage with me writing jokes.

How do you balance Oscar prep and your day job?

It's not easy. It takes what little free time I have. My daughter [Jane, 2] takes a big chunk out of it and then the Oscars take the rest. From a psychological standpoint, it's hard to focus on your Wednesday-night show when you know you have this big show coming up. It's almost like if you knew you're going to the Super Bowl and you have to finish the regular season along the way.

Are you nervous about hosting the Oscars for the first time?

Yeah! Anybody who tells you they don't care what people think is probably lying. I talked to Billy Crystal and he still gets nervous before every performance. If he still gets nervous, by all rights I should get nervous.

Do you have a favourite Oscars moment?

The thing I remember more than anything is when Roberto Benigni walked over the seats. It was the Oscars version of Michael Jackson moonwalking. It was magical.

Are you going to sing and dance?

Unless someone brings a gun out and forces me to sing and dance like Yosemite Sam, I probably won't. It should be a relief to all.

How will you deal with politics?

I haven't decided exactly how much I will dwell on that. A lot of it depends on what happens that week. There are one, sometimes three, new interesting stories coming out of the White House every day it seems—so who knows what will be happening?

You're so successful already —why say yes to such a high-pressure gig?

I guess the only way to determine the answer to that question is in hindsight. If it went well it makes perfect sense that you said yes, and if it doesn't, it makes none. I guess it's a challenge. I'm not crazy about challenges. I don't like skiing. I don't like tests. I'd rather take the path of least resistance—but it's a career opportunity you can't ignore. For a comedian, there are very few gigs of this calibre.

What are you doing after the show?

I will probably go to a party or two, unless it's some kind of a disaster, and then I'll go to the hospital. I'll either go to Vanity Fair or Cedars-Sinai.

JIMMY'S OSCARS SQUAD

Kimmel concedes he feels some nerves ahead of his big gig.

Kimmel sought advice from the nine-time host: "We got used to him being great, like the Patriots winning the Super Bowl."

MUM AND DAD

Parents James and Joan (she made peanut butter and jam sandwiches for the Emmys audience!) will be at the show, but "she won't be cooking."

ELLEN DEGENERES

"He should stay home on Oscar night," jokes Kimmel of his rival Damon (right, with Ben Affleck).

"We always knew that she was beautiful but she didn't see it," Jackie Vela says of her sister Brandy (pictured).

A TEEN'S SHOCKING DEATH

BULLIED INTO SUICIDE?

Friends and family members have covered the wall of Brandy's bedroom with notes of love and remembrance. Says Jackie, "We have to make sure this doesn't happen again."

After months of online torment, 18-year-old Brandy Vela takes her own life in front of her horrified family. Could she have been saved?

Brandy Vela sent the text message to her family at 12.52 PM on Nov. 29: "Guys, I love you so much, please remember that, and I'm sorry for everything." Within minutes the family converged at the Velas' home in Texas City, Texas, to find 18-year-old Brandy leaning against her bedroom wall with a gun to her chest. "I started yelling, 'Brandy, stop, talk to me!'" recalls her sister Jackie. Ignoring her family's pleas to put the gun down, Brandy asked her father, Raul, to look away: "Dad, turn around. I don't want you to see this." Stunned, he responded, "I will never turn my back on you." But Brandy was desperate. "I can't do this anymore," she said. "I'm tired. I've come too far not to do it."

Sadly, nothing—and no-one—could change her mind. Brandy pulled the trigger, sending a bullet into her upper chest.

In horror, Raul, 45, held a towel to his daughter's chest to try to stop the bleeding until an ambulance arrived, but it was no use.

The high-school student was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital. Police say she died from a "self-inflicted gunshot wound." Now, however, they have opened a criminal investigation into Brandy's death, trying to determine if she was a victim of cyberbullying. "Once we develop more facts, we will have a better understanding of any potential criminal charges," says Capt Joe Stanton, of the Texas City police department. But Brandy's family has no doubt. "It didn't stop," says Jackie, 22. "What they did wasn't just bullying, it was stalking."

According to Brandy's family, her tormentors set up fake Facebook accounts and posted relentlessly about her weight and looks. They spread lies and made hurtful sexual innuendos, with claims that Brandy would "offer sex for free." Brandy reported the harassment to school administrators before the November Thanksgiving break. "Our deputy investigated," officials at Texas City Independent School District said in a statement to WHO, "and the app that was being used to send the messages was untraceable."

The accounts often included Brandy's mobile-phone number, which led to endless text messages and phone calls that would keep her up throughout the night, says Jackie. "They would call her a slut," she says. "We always thought she brushed it off and didn't care, but now we know how bad it really was."

Somehow the cheerful girl who dreamed of becoming a vet hid her anguish from everyone—including Jackie, younger sister Michelle, 16, and brother Victor, 19. "She was so determined and was a real family person," says Jackie. When she wasn't interning at a local animal hospital, she was a waitress at a nearby restaurant. "She was the heart of this place," says her cousin Juan Trevino, 36, who manages the restaurant. "She'd come in and bake everyone cookies. She was loved by so many." She also confided in him. "I knew the bullying was taking a toll on her, but she was still so positive," says Trevino. Just two days before her

"She was loved by so many"

—cousin Juan Trevino

death, Brandy attended a party where she danced and "was smiling," says her co-worker and friend Marnie

Weinstein, 33. "No-one could foresee anything like this happening."

As the Velas struggle to understand Brandy's death, they have been embraced by a community united in grief. Brandy's bedroom walls are covered in Post-it notes with messages such as "You will never be forgotten" and "You will always own a piece of my heart."

And her family has committed to making sure no-one else's child has to go through what Brandy did, joining efforts to pass Texas legislation that gives police and schools more tools to combat cyberbullying. The bill, called "David's Law," is named in honour of 16-year-old David Molak, who killed himself in January 2016 after online bullying. "There was nothing we could say or do for Brandy," says Jackie. "And we'll live with that forever."

LEGAL LIMITS

In Australia, cyberbullying and online harassment is a crime. A study released in March by cyber-security firm Norton found that 76 per cent of Australian women under age 30 had been harassed online. It is illegal to post hurtful images and messages, send abusive texts and emails, and to create hurtful fake websites and profiles. In July 2016, Sydney labourer Zane Alchin was convicted of using a carriage service to menace, harass or offend after he left a trail of obscene and threatening remarks about women on a public thread on Facebook and one of his victims took a screenshot of his comments to police. He was given a 12-month good-behaviour bond.

This year marks the 30th anniversary of Dirty Dancing, starring Swayze and Jennifer Grey. Today, Swayze's former wife, Lisa, says, "I love that on YouTube you can find people at weddings doing their dance!"

The cane soared from its $200 starting point to $4,904.

CLOTHES

This month former Paisley Park staffers held an online auction of 119 Prince items that had been in storage for decades, including a beaded jacket he wore in the 1986 movie Under the Cherry Moon. From an initial bid of $2,500, it sold for $22,724.

BIKE

Prince customised his Purple Rain 1981 Honda CM400A motorcycle with hot-pink velour seat inserts, special handlebars and early versions of his name symbol. It was revamped and painted black and gold for 1990's Graffiti Bridge movie.

BOOTS

Made by Zodiac USA, Prince's dark-blue leather boots from the late 1980s featured 18cm wooden heels. The 23cm-long boots were in what the auction house called "very good condition, with expected wear from considerable use" and were from the collection of Prince's assistant tour manager, Gwen Leeds, with a letter of provenance.

CANE

One of the quirkier items to go on the block was Prince's Lucite sparkly cane used by the singer around Paisley Park Studios. Measuring 91cm and filled with glitter and a dense liquid, it was bought in 1985 for Prince's house in Chanhassen, Minnesota. (Another cane, designed by Gianni Versace, sold for $22,512.) It wasn't just accessories that drew buyers: a handwritten acceptance speech to presenter Kylie Minogue for the 1993 Brit Awards started at $300 but fetched $26,228.

'THE REAL
HOUSEWIVES
OF SYDNEY'
LISA
OLDFIELD

"I was the voice of reason," Lisa Oldfield (in Sydney on Dec. 16) tells WHO of the show. "The girls would carry on about absolute crap and I'd think, 'Oh my God, you are an absolute wanker.'"

A power career, husband, challenging children: meet the new show's most outspoken star

Settling onto a kitchen stool at her sparsely decorated home just north of Sydney, Lisa Oldfield is trying to stave off the attention of a younger man.

Her second son, Bert, 4, keeps grabbing at her breasts as she, her husband, David, and their other son, Harry, 6, try to pose for a photo for WHO. "I told you," Lisa says, shooting a look of faux exasperation. "He's boob mad."

Lisa herself has plenty of front. A former TV presenter, she jumped at the chance to star in the inaugural season of The Real Housewives of Sydney (premiering on Sun., Feb. 26, 8.30 PM on Arena). "It was literally a fear of missing out," she says. "It sounded fun. I think I'm hilarious and I'm always in trouble. In my life, something catastrophic always seems to be happening."

True to form, drama kicked in just before filming started when she had to have major spinal surgery. The discectomy and fusion (ACDF) operation, Oldfield, 41, tells WHO, "can take up to a year to recover from. Physically, I wasn't in a good place, walking into restaurants, standing around in heels having a drink, thinking I should have been in a wheelchair." She lets out a cackle. "I looked like a smackhead!"

Ultimately, says Lisa, "I found my balance [and] hit my stride. There was a rhythm to it." On the afternoon of Dec. 16, the rhythm at her family's place is more rapid-fire than restful: the Oldfield household also includes a nanny, pooches Dinky and Lulu, who leap in and out of a doggie door, and snakes named Shelley and Spotty.

The reptiles are "the best pets," she says. "They're low-maintenance. And they get into the bath with the boys when they're shedding." Why snakes? "Chicks like snakes, don't they? I thought it might help the boys pull."

The Oldfield spread sits atop a hill, with expansive views over a balcony to the Pacific. Below, there's a swimming pool, where Lisa makes sons Bert and Harry (from left, with husband David) wear GPS tracking watches. "I'd microchip them if I could," she tells WHO.

"I'm not used to being with groups of women," says Lisa. "My friendships are one-on-one. It felt very awkward."

D M O T H E R

a former pet, Ivan the eastern water dragon, met his demise thanks to Dinky, along with acreage that is home to horses Kahlua, Tango and Timothy, as well as Cluckingham Palace, a pen where chickens Cluck Norris, Gwyneth Poultry and Victoria Peckham reside. “My co-stars are really just like my chooks,” she says. “It’s like they’re all posturing to figure out where they stand in the pecking order.”

Lisa imitates a chicken plucking at its feathers and jabbing the air with its beak. “Women all judging each other—it’s like the school gate. We should be lifting people up. We’re all doing our best. I’m not going to kill my kids, I’m not doing that bad. You know, ‘Lisa doesn’t do reading groups!’ Well, Lisa’s f—king working her arse off to pay a mortgage! I think I’m the only full-time working mum at the school and in the show, too. And by the way, David does the reading groups.”

Each morning, Harry and Bert salute their father in a ritual that property developer David, 58, who co-founded the One Nation Party with Pauline Hanson in the mid-1990s, laughs off as “a bit of a joke. I do say, ‘On the line!’ but it’s just my way of getting them to understand order.” Still, he says, “every night I question what I was like during the day and think about how I can improve as a father.”

Whirlwinds both, Harry and Bert scamper through the house smearing their fingers on mirrors, plinking loudly at toy pianos and running their miniature Mercedes-Benz cars into walls. Their energy prompts Lisa to recall donating her eggs to her best friend, who now has an 18-month-old son. “Her struggle broke my heart, so it was a no-brainer to offer the eggs. But I did it so should I need a liver transplant, I’ve got another person to hit up. And because she deserves to have what I have, which is two arsehole children.” She barks a pretend order: “Go get me another wine!”

Growing up in Sydney’s Palm Beach with a younger brother, Lisa was “a weird child” who “bullied the bullies” and was expelled from numerous schools: “My teachers thought I was on drugs. I wasn’t. I was just a clown.” She wasn’t kidding around in 2005 when, at the age of 29, she sold her parents’ software company for $60 million, kickstarting her current career in the tech sector handling mergers, acquisitions and IPOs.

The Oldfields met in 2000, when they

"I'm basically a 14-year-old boy trapped in a 41-year-old woman's body," says Lisa (with snake Shelley and husband David).

On her wedding day with in-laws June and Bill Oldfield (left) and parents Christine and Richard Johnston.

NO WORRIES

Lisa says the show can't damage her reputation: "Google me. I've done drugs. I've sprayed somebody with Glen 20. I locked my child in a f--king apartment. Could it get any worse?"

them from trying again, and Bert arrived in July 2012. What do they like about each other as parents? "He likes nothing about me. David just thinks I'm a f--king disaster, that the kids are just for my own entertainment," says Lisa. Replies David, "She does love them. She tries. But she hasn't fallen fully into the responsible-parent role as yet. I'm not sure how that's going to happen."

Lisa is just as blunt about David's spousal style, recalling co-stars who "waxed lyrical about their husbands and getting amazing support from home. For me, home wasn't the greatest place to go back to." RHOS "made me think about how I mistreated and at times emasculated David. Our marriage is better for having done the show." In what way? "I no longer want him dead."

Lisa has called David "the eighth Housewife," and he features as they work through issues in the season. "It's good to get that stuff out," reasons David, who appeared on SBS's First Contact last year. "Our view is that we're all human and it will potentially help some people with their own marriages."

It remains unclear, however, how doing the show affected Lisa's ability to navigate the minefields of female friendship. Before filming began, Lisa took a swipe at the Melbourne franchise, which saw star Gamble Breaux reply with a lacerating Facebook post: "Good luck riding off our ratings you stupid old cow. I have a better-looking mop at home I clean my floors with!" Asks Lisa, "How bizarre was that? I don't know what a mop looks like because I don't do my own cleaning, your first bad nose job is older than I am, and I'm not surprised you haven't heard of me because I made my name in the boardroom, not the bedroom." Breaux tells

"My marriage is better for having done the show"

WHO, "I have come to the conclusion I like Lisa. She is fun to throw shade with." Would she welcome an in-person chance to break bread? "Don't be ridiculous. I don't eat bread."

As for the Sydney crew,

Lisa made "a friend for life" in jeweller Athena X Levendi, and would "probably" return for a second season. But, "you have to dumb yourself down," she says. "You have no idea how hard it is to attack someone who doesn't understand what you're saying. I said to [one], 'You and your coterie of acolytes thrive on schadenfreude,' and she just replied, 'I don't know what that means.' I shouldn't have to bring a f--king dictionary along every time I want to insult you—unless it's to hit you over the head with it."

■ By Nicholas Fonseca

shared a taxi from an airport. "I saw her step off the kerb and the first thing I noticed was her ankles," says David. "I am a bit of an ankle man." Lisa, meanwhile, insists "the only celebrity crush I ever had was David Oldfield. I told him what One Nation was doing for the disenfranchised was amazing. And the first thing he said back was, 'I didn't expect that from your demographic.' So romantic."

At the time, Lisa had a fiancé, but "it turned out he was cheating on me," she says. "So the first thing I did was take my ring to the jeweller, took out the diamond, had it replaced with cubic zirconia and gave it back." Despite their 17-year age gap, she and David were engaged in less than a year and wed in October 2001.

Early in her pregnancy with Harry, Lisa lost his unborn twin. The tragedy didn't deter

QUICK THINKING

NOT ALL HEADACHES ARE THE SAME, BUT ONE THING'S FOR SURE – THEY'RE A PAIN YOU DON'T HAVE TIME FOR. TAKE CARE OF PAIN FASTER WITH NUROFEN ZAVANCE

You have places to go and work to do, when a headache strikes. But what's the cause? We've identified a few common culprits and some easy ways to find relief and get on with your day.

1 OVERINDULGENCE
If you're suffering a headache as a result of too many vinos, you probably know what's to blame. Drink plenty of water to rehydrate, plan an early night and consider a couple of Nurofen Zavance to help relieve your headache pain.

2 SCREEN FATIGUE
Screen glare from your phone, TV or computer can cause headaches. Try the 20-20-20 rule; every 20 minutes, take a 20-second break and focus your eyes on something at least 20 feet away¹.

3 LET YOUR HAIR DOWN
A too-tight ponytail can strain your scalp's connective tissues, as can constrictive headbands and tight braids. So loosen your ponytail or headband and give your scalp a massage. You'll be amazed by how much better it feels².

4 CUT THE CAFFEINE - GRADUALLY
Your four-shots-a-day habit isn't helping your headache situation. Stimulants like caffeine can trigger migraines and headaches but equally, so can quitting them cold turkey so take it slowly³.

5 NUROFEN ZAVANCE
Like headaches, not all pain relief is the same, and when a headache strikes you want relief fast. Nurofen Zavance tablets contain a different formulation which includes a sodium salt that makes it absorb up to 2x faster than standard Nurofen*. From a scientific review, it has been shown that faster-absorbing formulations generally provide more effective pain relief so you can get back on track faster.

TOP TIP:
*Not all Nurofen is the same. Choose Nurofen Zavance tablets and caplets, it's absorbed up to 2x faster than standard Nurofen

For the temporary relief of pain and/or inflammation. Always read the label. Use only as directed. Incorrect use could be harmful. This article is for your general information only and is not intended to diagnose or prescribe. If symptoms persist, see your healthcare professional.

WHO'S GUIDE TO THE LATEST COSMETIC CONFECTIONS AND TRENDS

With Toni Hynes

Karlie Kloss was in Sydney in February to open and close the David Jones show.

KARLIE KLOSS

Napoleon Perdis, official makeup partner for the David Jones autumn/winter fashion parade, shares his runway tips

Model Karlie Kloss recently graced the catwalks in Sydney. Follow Perdis's masterclass and re-create Kloss's look with these step-by-step backstage beauty tips to try at home.

- CLEANSE Come clean. Begin with a deep cleanse, using a nourishing cleansing oil.
- PREP Plump and perfect skin with a serum. Massage it in with fingertips or a complexion brush.
- PRIME Follow the motto: "Not to prime is a crime!" Smooth the surface with a radiance-boosting primer to help makeup last the distance. For bright eyes, smooth the under-eye area with a concealer primer.
- BROWS & LASHES Define brows and set in place with a brow mascara. Extend lashes and add lustre with black mascara. Wait for them to dry and then curl with an eyelash curler for extra hold.

- BASE Even out skin tone by blending a serum foundation over the "feature focus" area of your face. Banish fatigue with a concealer, targeting dark areas. Wait for it to absorb, then use warm fingertips and melt concealer into the skin. Smooth and set the hot spots of the face with a powder foundation.
- CHEEKS Illuminate and tone skin with a shade of contour to match your complexion, sweeping over the top of the cheekbones, the bridge of the nose and on the Cupid's bow. Follow with a deeper contour tone over the cheekbones.
- EYES Keep eyes minimal and fresh by pressing loose eye dust in Mosaic Gold onto the inner corner of the eye. Subtly define the eye with a light sweep of colour along the lower lash line.
- LIPS Use a matte red shade and highlight a statement lip. Line lips last and seal with a lip pencil; our pick is Rococo Red.

"To emulate Karlie's flawless face, first you need to invest in skincare that gives you an instant boost while delivering long-term benefits. It will also make your makeup look flawless and wear longer," says Perdis

EYES ON ME

Celebrity makeup artist Patrick Ta reveals his top tips for creating dramatic eyes

WORK FOR IT

I moved to Los Angeles three years ago with the hope I would one day do celebrity makeup. I had a lot to learn, but I posted all the looks I did on social media, which is how I met celebrity clients like Shay Mitchell. I thought it was so cool when she started following me.

PLAY WITH COLOUR

A lot of women are afraid of colourful eyeshadow, so when I apply it I try to make it as wearable as possible. When Gigi Hadid is in the mood for colour it has to sparkle, so I add glitter to her lids. For a more subtle look, try a coloured eyeliner; it's still so striking.

MIX IT UP

Have fun with makeup—you never know what will look amazing on you. Alessandra Ambrosio normally wears a smoky eye, so doing a sultry look was different for her. But when she saw it she loved it.

BALANCE IS BLISS

When the eyes are the focal point, I prefer to keep the skin looking fresh, so reach for a foundation that makes it glow. I also like to do a nude lip and natural brows so the eyes really shine and get the attention.

WORK YOUR WARDROBE

I'm obsessed with matching your eyeshadow to your outfit. People say don't do it, but I think it looks purposeful and pulled together. For [model] Joan Smalls, I wanted the earthy tones of her eyeshadow to match the brown of her outfit. I also used a few layers of blush to add a little extra pop.

BLENDING IS KEY

With a pigmented look, you have to blend evenly so you don't see harsh lines. For Jenna Dewan Tatum, I started with an eye primer, and then I applied a creamy eyeliner at the water line. Next I added a cream eyeshadow, followed by powder eyeshadow in the same hue to set it.

Organic MATTERS

Nutritionist Fiona Tuck gives the lowdown on eating organically

What does organic mean?
Organic certification means the product was grown or produced without harmful chemicals or genetically modified organisms. All organic products will have "certified organic" on the label.

What are the health benefits?

Organic plant foods have slightly higher levels of antioxidants and beneficial plant compounds. They also taste better, are not left frozen in cold storage for months, are fresher and in-season, have less exposure to potentially toxic chemicals, are GM-free and better for the environment.

Is organic pesticide-free?

If a product is certified organic it has to be produced without chemical pesticides.

It can become misleading when products state "organic"

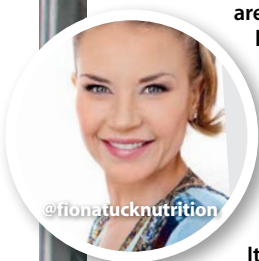

(rather than "certified organic") on the label; these may contain organic ingredients mixed with non-organic ones, which may contain pesticides, sugars and preservatives.

What does "chemical-free" mean?

It hasn't gone through the intensive protocols or expense of being certified, but it does indicate it was grown without toxic pesticides and herbicides. This is a good and affordable option when choosing fruits and vegetables.

Are any foods particularly problematic?

Apples are heavily sprayed, so if you are not eating organic, peel them. Fruits and vegies with thicker skin, like bananas and oranges, are safer and OK to eat non-organic. I also recommend organic broccoli and cauliflower as the florets soak up the pesticide residues.

@fionatucknutrition

Jessica Alba says she is allergic to "the chemicals, preservatives, pesticides, nitrates and sulfates" in non-organic foods.

LAUREN'S 6 WEEK CHALLENGE

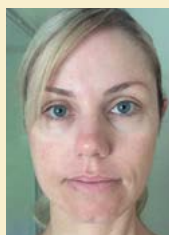

natural

BEFORE

Before the challenge, I was really worried about dull and fatigued skin because I have such sensitive skin. My goal was to achieve increased skin clarity and even skin tone within a pretty short timeframe.

WEEK 4

I am at the end of week 4 and have noticed my pores have shrunk and my skin tone has softened. My skin is brighter and clearer. Even the scarring on my chin has improved.

AFTER 6 WEEKS

After 6 weeks, my skin is so much fresher and healthier. It feels so good to know I am nourishing my skin with natural ingredients free of nasty chemicals and with the added benefits of results you can see.

My skin loved Natural Instinct. It works so much better than skincare with man-made synthetic chemicals and without doubt, I will keep using these amazing products.

■ SERVES 4

WHAT YOU NEED

4 x 200g free-range
chicken breast fillets,
cut into pieces

Steamed white rice, to serve

FOR THE MARINADE

¼ cup hoisin sauce

1 tbsp vegetable oil

1 tbsp soy sauce

1 tbsp honey

2 tsp sesame oil

2 tsp finely grated fresh ginger

FOR THE CUCUMBER SNOW PEA SALAD

1 small lebanese

cucumber, halved lengthways and thinly sliced diagonally

100g snow peas, trimmed and sliced diagonally

3 green spring onions,
thinly sliced diagonally

1 cup bean sprouts, trimmed

TIP
To keep bean sprouts crisp, place in a bowl of cold water in the fridge until ready to make salad.

1 To make marinade, combine all ingredients in a small jug.
Whisk well.

2 Place chicken in a large bowl.
Add half the marinade. Toss well to coat. Reserve remaining marinade.

3 Heat a lightly oiled barbecue grill plate over a medium to high heat. Add chicken. Cook for about 5 minutes on each side or until chicken is cooked.

4 Meanwhile, place reserved marinade in a small saucepan.
Stir over a high heat until hot.

5 To make salad, combine all ingredients in a medium bowl.

6 Serve the chicken on the rice.
Drizzle with reserved marinade.
Top with salad.

TIP
Lamb can be coated in spice rub and refrigerated overnight.

SMOKY BUTTERFLIED LEG OF LAMB

■ SERVES 4

WHAT YOU NEED

1.5kg butterflied leg of lamb, trimmed
2 tbsp olive oil
1 tbsp red wine vinegar
1 tsp dijon mustard
Salt and pepper, to taste
1 bunch rocket, trimmed and washed

250g packet fresh whole cooked beetroot, drained and quartered
1/3 cup hazelnuts, toasted and chopped
1/2 cup drained, marinated feta

FOR THE SPICE MIX

1 tbsp smoky barbecue seasoning
2 tsp smoked paprika
2 tbsp olive oil
1 tbsp lemon juice
2 cloves garlic, crushed

- 1 To make spice mix, combine all ingredients in a small bowl. Mix well.
- 2 Using a sharp knife, cut 1cm-deep slashes about 2cm apart across the skin side of lamb. Rub the spice mix all over the lamb.
- 3 Heat a lightly oiled barbecue grill plate over a medium to high heat. Place lamb skin-side down. Cook for about 5 minutes on each side or until browned. Reduce heat to low. Close

- barbecue lid or cover lamb loosely with foil. Cook for a further 3 to 4 minutes on each side for medium or until cooked to your liking. Remove. Rest, loosely covered with foil, for 10 minutes. Thickly slice.
- 4 Meanwhile, whisk oil, vinegar and mustard in a large serving bowl. Season with salt and pepper. Add rocket, beetroot and hazelnuts. Toss to coat. Top with feta. Serve lamb with the salad.

T-BONE STEAKS WITH JALAPENO AND CORIANDER SALSA

■ SERVES 4

WHAT YOU NEED

4 medium washed potatoes, thickly sliced

2 tbsp olive oil

1 tbsp garlic steak seasoning

4 beef T-bone steaks

JALAPENO & CORIANDER SALSA

1/3 cup pickled, sliced jalapeños, drained and chopped

1/2 cup chopped fresh coriander

1/3 cup chopped fresh mint

3 green spring onions, thinly sliced

1 tsp finely grated lime rind

1 tbsp lime juice

1 tbsp olive oil

Salt and pepper, to taste

1 Boil, steam or microwave potato slices until tender. Drain well.

2 Meanwhile, combine oil and seasoning in a small bowl. Rub evenly over both sides of steaks.

3 To make salsa, combine all ingredients in a medium bowl. Mix well.

4 Heat an oiled barbecue grill plate over a medium to high heat. Add steaks. Cook for about 5 minutes on each side for medium or until cooked to your liking. Remove. Rest, loosely covered with foil, for 5 minutes.

5 Place potatoes in a single layer on the same hot grill plate. Cook for 2 minutes on each side or until charred. Remove.

6 Spoon salsa over steaks. Serve with potatoes.

2 SANTILLA CHINGAIPE

In 'Date My Race' (airs Mon., Feb. 27, 8.30 PM; SBS), journalist Chingaipe, 30, explores how her skin colour affects her love life.

"I'm still hopeful I'll meet someone," says Chingaipe. "Just maybe in real life and not online."

How did you deal with your findings doing the show? It was pretty depressing finding out the one thing I can't change about myself was affecting my love life. Is there a difference between wanting to date only your own race versus religion? It makes sense to partner with someone who feels the same way if you're devout, otherwise it could lead to clashes down the track. Race is different. It's dismissing people based on stereotypes.

And that's never acceptable. Is old-fashioned match-making what makes shows like Married at First Sight work? Definitely! I'd totally consider applying. I'd just have to warn my mother first. Will you be broadening your dating boundaries? For the time being, I'm going back to the old-school way of meeting people: through friends, networks, the supermarket aisle ...

6 LITTLE BIG TOWN

THE BREAKER

The country quartet may be on their eighth LP, but they're not resting on their laurels: The Breaker is their catchiest, most energetic groove yet, which says a lot considering last year's Wanderlust had Pharrell Williams's fingerprints all over it. Cue this up and hit the road: it's perfect for a late summer's drive. (Out now)

TV

Wisconsin's Nicolet National Park, where the girls believed Slenderman lived in Slender Mansion.

7 BEWARE THE SLENDERMAN

DIRECTED BY: Irene Taylor Brodsky

If Rings is not spooky enough, how about a real-life horror story? The brutal 2014 attack of a 12-year-old girl by two other 12-year-olds—one her best friend—so the pre-teens could appease a fictional internet bogeyman known as the Slenderman makes for a true tale that chills. Including interviews with the attackers' families and police footage, this compelling documentary, along with the Emmy-winning doco The Jinx, shows that HBO is just as adept at non-fiction as it is edgy drama. (Airs Sun., Feb. 26, 8.30 PM; Showcase)

MOVIE

Fist Fight marks Tracy Morgan's first film appearance since a near fatal 2014 accident.

8 FIST FIGHT

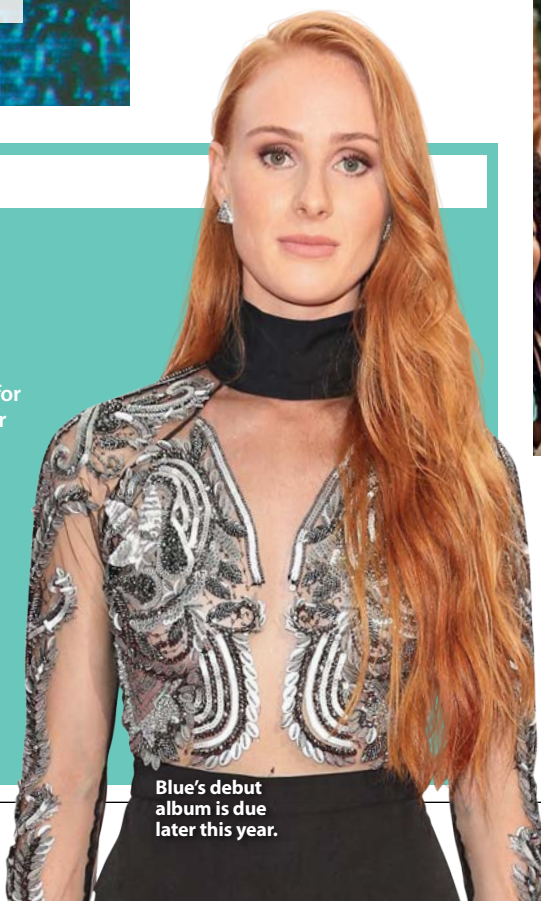

STARRING: Charlie Day, Ice Cube, Tracy Morgan

You know how adults tell kids to grow up? Well, the premise of this unchallenging comedy is grown-ups behaving badly. Dorky teacher Andrew (Day) is challenged to an after-school duel when he gets Cube's bully of a character sacked. (Out now)

MUSIC

5 VERA BLUE

This is set to be a banner year for the Sydney-based singer, so far best known for providing the guest vocals on Illy's 2016 hit "Papercuts". At an economic 2½ minutes long, "Private" arrives with two ominous, cinematic keyboard chords and explodes into a fiery banger about unchecked desire. As Blue sings in all her full-throated glory, "What's wrong in reality feels so right in my fantasy ...". (Out now)

Blue's debut album is due later this year.

The Moonstone starts Fri., March 3 at 8.30 PM.

9 BRITISH BEAUTIES

Period dramas to swoon over

March is a premium month for Foxtel's BBC First. Before The Collection and Season 2 of The Missing launch, catch an intricate adaptation of Wilkie Collins's Victorian mystery The Moonstone and also the true-crime thriller In Plain Sight, starring Douglas Henshall (Shetland) as a 1950s detective taunted by a serial killer.

Three-partner In Plain Sight starts Wed., March 1 at 8.30 PM.

10 ATLANTA

STARRING: Donald Glover

Glover's triumphant return to TV (in his spare time, the former Community star records trippy funk-rap as Childish Gambino) cleaned up at January's Golden Globes and landed at or near the top of nearly every USTV critic's best-of-2016 list. Now, finally, it arrives on our shores so you can judge the fuss yourself. Dark and surreal, Atlanta follows two cousins trying to make it in the city's hectic rap scene. It's a slow burn, so stay with it—before you realise, this offbeat series will grab you with pointed, poignant social commentary. (All episodes available on SBS on Demand; double episodes begin airing Tues., Feb. 28, 9.30 PM; SBS Viceland)

11 HOLY HOLY PAINT

Two become ... five? Tim Carroll and Oscar Dawson's accidental music project ("We didn't know we were forming a band" at first, Carroll now concedes) has expanded by three. With drum, bass and key players on board, Holy Holy's melodic, jangly pop-rock achieves a new dynamism. The standouts? "Gilded Age" plunges forward with twitchy bluster, while "Send My Regards" provides a light coat of prog-rock excess. (Out Feb. 24)

Londoner Kinsella has sold 36 million books in 60 countries.

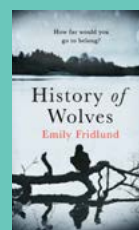

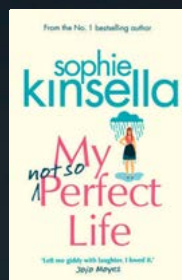

12 MY NOT SO PERFECT LIFE

BY SOPHIE KINSELLA Bantam Press

Katie tries hard to make her Instagram life look as idyllic as her boss Demeter's does, but she knows the truth: her flat's dingy, she has a horrendous commute, she takes tuna sandwiches for lunch ... and then Demeter axes her. Katie decamps to help out at the family dairy farm turned rural retreat, but when Demeter arrives, her own family in tow, Katie realises the truth is more nuanced than she had thought. A sparkling, witty novel about social media and the stories we tell ourselves.

HISTORY OF WOLVES EMILY FRIDLUND

Hachette

Linda is a lonely teen who has been raised in the woods by hippie parents, the only survivors of an abandoned commune. When she babysits for a nearby family, her quiet life is upended, with tragic results. A compelling portrait of a troubled girl trying to find her way in a new and frightening world.

LINCOLN IN THE BARDO

GEORGE SAUNDERS

Bloomsbury

Narrated by a cast of ghosts including Willie Lincoln, Abe's son felled at age 11 by typhoid, Saunders's first novel sees the grieving president visiting Willie's crypt, where comical, restless spirits try to help. This framing of Lincoln's personal loss amid the Civil War is devastatingly moving.

MINUTES WITH...

NICOLA MORIARTY

The author of The Fifth Letter (HarperCollins, $29.99) tells WHO why she was "possibly destined" to write novels (hint: big sisters Liane and Jaclyn Moriarty ...)

What inspired your latest novel?

During late-night, wine-fuelled conversations with old friends, all sorts of revelations from our past often come up. So, I found myself wondering what would happen if something really dark or sinister came up? What if it turned out that they were hiding secrets? From there, I came up with the idea of a group of women deciding to share secrets in anonymous letters to one another.

You've had a few career changes?

I started out in advertising, then moved across to IT. I tried my hand at marketing, door-to-door sales, telesales and customer service. I was a receptionist, a bartender, a (terrible) waitress at a horror-themed theatre restaurant. I made awful coffee, I worked at a pizza place ... then soon after I had my first daughter, I went to uni to become a high-school English and drama teacher. Somehow though, amongst all of that, I finally remembered how much I loved to write. I started working on my first book when I was a stay-at-home mum with my newborn ... it came out a little while after I had my second daughter.

What led you to writing? Or was it destined?

Possibly destined! But in all honesty, seeing my two eldest sisters both get published was extraordinarily inspiring. Something that seemed like an impossible dream suddenly became a lot more realistic and possible.

Were you interested in writing as a kid?

Sydneysider Moriarty, 35, is the youngest of six.

Absolutely. In high school I entered a competition to win a bicycle by writing an essay about road-safety. I opened the essay with this extremely graphic description of a road accident. I came in second. I won a helmet.

Do you talk shop with Liane or grill her for Hollywood gossip?

I often turn to both Liane and Jaclyn for writing advice and the three of us usually rush to claim good family stories for ourselves ... When [Liane] first met Nicole Kidman [who stars in the TV adaptation of Big Little Lies] I wanted a blow-by-blow description of the entire conversation.

What's 2017 looking like for you?

Busy, exciting and a little scary. The Fifth Letter is out early in the year in Australia, the US and the UK, so there'll be various publicity commitments but then my next manuscript is due in April, so I really need to get cracking on that one. The word count probably isn't as high as it should be by this point!

LITTLE DEATHS

EMMA FLINT

Picador

Ruth Malone is an unapologetic smoker and Scotch drinker estranged from a loving husband. So when her two young children go missing from their beds one hot New York night in 1964, the court of public opinion doesn't take long to render a verdict. A stunning character study inspired by a real-life case.

THE ANTIQUES

KRIS D'AGOSTINO

Scribner

As a hurricane tears into New York, the ailing patriarch of a wildly dysfunctional clan brings the estranged family members together to face his death—and themselves. D'Agostino's sparkingly funny novel is about love, power, money and adult siblings finding the beating heart of what matters most: one another.

BY PENNY THORNTON

WHAT YOUR STARS SAY THIS WEEK, FEB. 27-MARCH 5

ARIES

MARCH 20-APRIL 18

Thanks to the combined efforts of Jupiter and Uranus you can expand your world, whether through long-distance travel or via your job or personal life. However, be careful how you handle this fiery package. Make sure you get plenty of rest and take care not to leap into the void without a parachute and a packed lunch. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

TAURUS

APRIL 19-MAY 20

With Neptune in the mix there is almost certainly something you're not seeing. Either you are allowing your enthusiasm to blind you to the facts or someone has not given you the whole story. Alternatively, should you be under the impression you have failed or that a project will never come to completion, this may not be the case. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

GEMINI

MAY 21-JUNE 20

Under Neptune, we lose our way—sometimes quite literally in that we cannot find a particular place, but more often because we do not have a grip on a situation. So remain objective whether information reaching you is fabulous or deeply disappointing. There is plenty more water to flow under that bridge. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

CANCER

JUNE 21-JULY 21

If life has been irredeemably dull, be careful what you wish for. Jupiter and Uranus are a thrilling combination: they can create a spark between two people and they can change the nature of a situation in the blink of an eye. And they can take you where you never expected to go. Be open to the new, the different and the unexpected. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

LEO

JULY 22-AUG. 22

Beware what you may be offered or who you believe to be the best thing since sliced bread. There could be hidden issues so put a refundable deposit on a much-desired item and avoid going the whole nine yards. You need to buy time and check the back story. Embrace change, but make sure you know what you're getting into. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

VIRGO

AUG. 23-SEPT. 22

If you are among the Virgos currently nursing something of a disappointment—even healing from a betrayal—in time, the feelings of hurt will dissipate and you will come to see that what you have lost was never going to work for you in the long term. Give yourself breathing space and then reboot your ambitions and desires. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

LIBRA

SEPT. 23-OCT. 22

Last Christmas Jupiter in your sign opposed Uranus, which may have given you more than you expected in terms of gifts and opportunities. By contrast, you may have had to put a dream on hold. This same aspect now reoccurs, either giving you a chance to rethink your ideas or bringing a whole other set of possibilities into view. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

SCORPIO

OCT. 23-NOV. 21

There is nothing ordinary about this astro-scape. It may not prove life-changing, but it could certainly make a difference. Perhaps you can do nothing to change the way a situation panned out, but you can focus your energies in a completely new direction. There are reasons why things happen the way they do now. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

SAGITTARIUS

NOV. 22-DEC. 21

Impatience is the root of many failures and when Uranus is in the ascendancy, it is easy to allow frustration to get the better of you. No matter how much you want a situation to come together (and in the manner you desire), it requires more time. Remember, not everyone sees things your way—including the universe. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

CAPRICORN

DEC. 22-JAN. 20

Jupiter-Uranus combos help you blaze a trail, although sometimes you may feel you've been bitten off more than you can chew. However, Capricorn can take a little too long to make up its mind, thus allowing the boat of opportunity to set sail. So, if you know something must change and you need to make it happen, go do that thing! For more, phone 1902 261 655.

AQUARIUS

JAN. 21-FEB. 18

At present, it may be difficult to know which way is right and which is wrong. Allowing other people to influence your opinion is not the answer, neither is letting your hopes or fears get in the way of solid facts. This may mean you have to make a hard choice but, as is often the case, the hard choice is usually the right one. For more, phone 1902 261 655.

PISCES

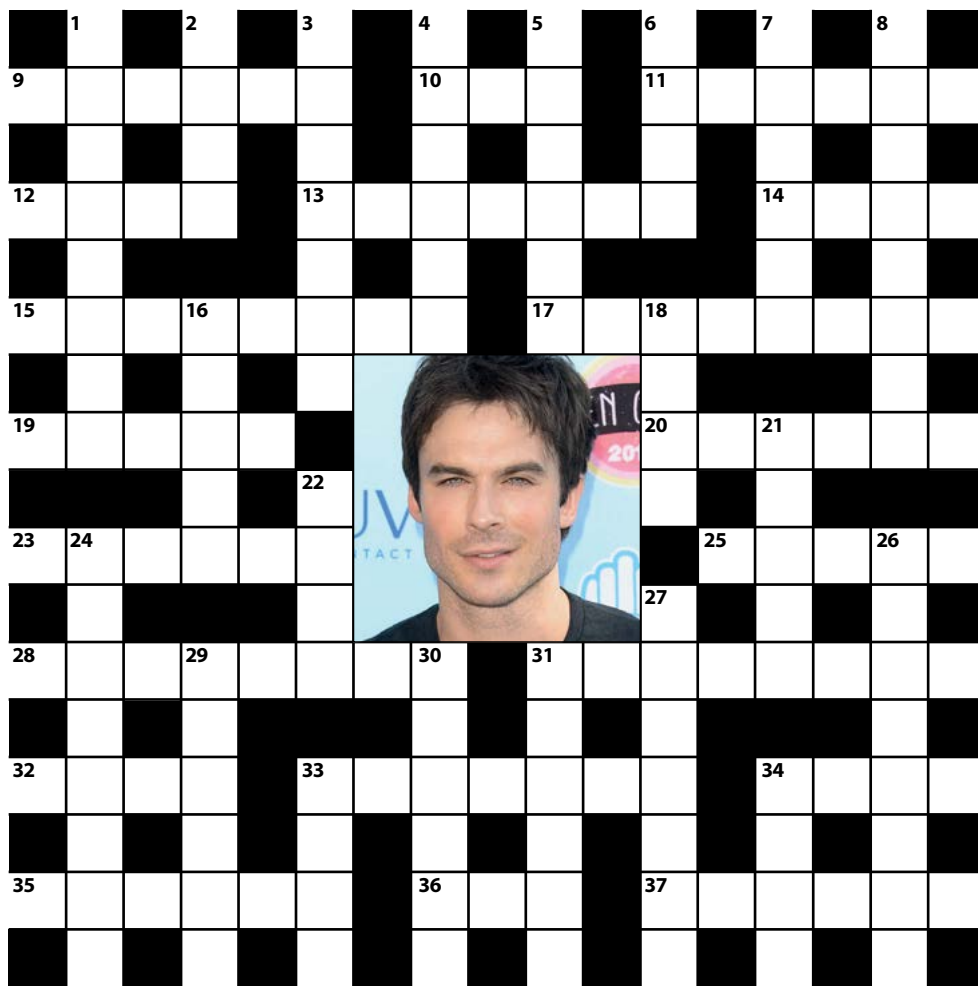

FEB. 19-MARCH 19

If you have to make a move under duress, be absolutely sure that you are coming from the right place and have what it takes to fulfil the task. This is definitely not the week to wing it. Where money is concerned, accept what is offered because to keep on searching for a better deal may be folly. A bird in the hand... For more, phone 1902 261 655.

Olivia Palermo

The Piscean actress turns 31 on Feb. 28.

QA

DREW BARRYMORE

Before the ultimate flower girl, 42, went on a strict human-flesh-eating diet as a wife and mother who suddenly turns zombie on Netflix's Santa Clarita Diet (now streaming), WHO's Ray Rahman put her to the test—and Barrymore had a bloody good time.

What's your favourite zombie flick?

Night of the Comet. It was, like, super 1980s! Everybody goes to watch the big comet and then the entire human race gets wiped out, but there are a few zombies that make it—and, of course, it's a girl and a boy.

You were in The Wedding Singer. What's the best song to play at a wedding reception?

"Holiday" or "Vogue" by Madonna. No-one's getting out of dancing to those!

Name the first M-rated movie you remember seeing.

I was in M-rated movies when I was 3, but the first one I saw electively? I snuck into Fast Times at Ridgemont High when I was 6 or 7. I was like, "This is the best movie ever!" I love films that can combine really funny things with quiet, emotional things that are very grounded in reality. It was a very profound movie.

What's an album that you can't live without?

Beauty and the Beat by the Go-Go's. That album made me know chicks could be really cool. Like Pippi Longstocking and the Go-Go's: all these girls who weren't bad girls, they were just capable, cool girls.

What was the last TV show that you binged on?

The Crown. I'm mad it's over! I loved it. I thought John Lithgow was incredible in it, too. I saw him at the Golden Globes and had to stop and tell him I was his biggest cheerleader, since 1975. He was so nice and exactly the way you would hope to meet someone when you really admire them.

What is your favourite emoji to use?

I think I use the red heart the most—it's so boring. But I sent someone the middle finger the other day! I was excited that they've added that to the emoji family. Sometimes you just really need to send somebody the middle finger. I'm all appropriate mom now, but I still have a little bit of that rebel in me.

Meat cute: Barrymore and Timothy Olyphant in Santa Clarita Diet.

Her favourite phone app? "Dark Sky, the weather app that pilots use. I'm an obsessive weather checker. I've officially become an old lady."

Damon, 46, who has four daughters, said he will take a break from acting "to be at their behest for once."

A quick chat with

Matt Damon

The actor, who won a screenplay Oscar with pal Ben Affleck for Good Will Hunting and became an action star in the Jason Bourne films, gets medieval in his latest drama, The Great Wall.

You learnt archery for your new movie. Do you impress friends and family with your bow-and-arrow skills?

No. Well, I can shoot CGI arrows as well as anybody. I'd give Orlando Bloom a run for his money in a CGI arrow battle [Bloom played Lord of the Rings's elven archer Legolas]. But the guy who trained me is the best in the world. He actually removed one of his thumbs above the knuckle so he could do it faster.

What do you think of the internet's obsession with your character's hair?

It was the man bun, which was fun. I mean, they put 700 extensions in, it took like 12 hours and then I had to try and keep them in. By the time they cut them out it was like a rat's nest. I took a picture of it. I think there was stuff living in there.

Did you enjoy having your family with you on location?

It was incredible. We were filming in China for six months. The kids really love it there. They keep asking to go back.

"It's a big popcorn movie," says Damon of historical fantasy The Great Wall (in cinemas now).

TOXIC TV

Celebs have savaged the new television movie 'Britney Ever After'

Sydney-born actress Natasha Bassett, who played Spears, said, "I hope [Britney] sees the film." Inset: the real Britney.

"I am GASPING, this ain't right y'all, she does NOT deserve THIS!!"
—Tyler Oakley

"OMG these accents tho I'm dying. I wonder what Britney thinks of this movie"
—Snooki

"Who lit this movie and why do they hate women? #oppositeofoscar"
—Sarah Michelle Gellar

Chloë Grace Moretz was initially set to play Ariel, but has dropped out.

LINDSAY

splashes out!

Promise or threat? On Feb. 19, Lindsay Lohan said, "I will sing again" if Disney casts her to play Ariel in its upcoming live-action reboot of The Little Mermaid. In a since-edited Instagram post, the actress tipped sister Aliana Lohan to croon the theme and CrossFit coach Kristen Graham to play Ursula "simply because, she is the best."

Two months after her sudden departure from Fifth Harmony, Camila Cabello has revealed she and the four remaining members of the girl group have yet to speak. Talking to Billboard, Cabello—she has said she was “shocked” when the group announced her exit without consultation—explained, “In a group there is always going to be tension ... obviously, I think [my choice to leave] rocked the boat.” Asked if she has tried to contact her former bandmates, she replied, “I did, yeah. It was really intense and it’s hard for me to talk about. It makes me sad.”

RETURNING?

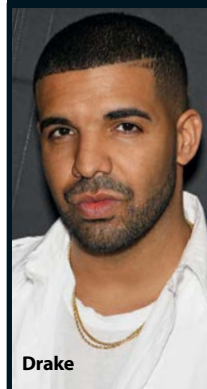

Alias star Michael Vartan says he is up for a reunion of the Jennifer Garner-led spy series that last aired in 2006. But “they better hurry up,” he told E! News, “because I’m getting up there in age. Running down those hallways, you know, I’m not 30 anymore. I would be interested.” As for a reboot? “On a selfish level,” the 48-year-old joked, “how dare they do that show with another cast?”
